Firemen Busy With Alarms Get the Bird
BERKELEY, CALIF. — The scores of firemen who kept the West Berkeley fire department busy for three days with false alarms have been apprehended.

They were four baby sparrows, whose hopping around in a nest located in an alarm relay box on a telephone pole kept shorting a wire.

Legless Farmer Works Own Farm Runs Binder, Shocks Grain, Handles Pitchfork.

ASHLAND, OHIO. — Farmers who complain of the lack of machinery and hired help ought to see Frank Piper in action.

Piper has no legs but he farms 150 acres the mile west of here and has no time or inclination either to complain.

Probably the most unusual farmer in Ohio if not in the country, Piper also cultivates 111 adjoining acres with a neighbor.

As a boy of 11, Piper lost both legs when a playmate pushed him under a train. In the 45 years since, he has gone about his work of farming without asking a favor of any one.

He believes he can do anything any other farmer can do, even with two legs, and he thinks he can do it just as well.

Nor has he made things easier for himself. He uses no artificial limbs. His barn is the same as others as far as the height of stalls and partitions is concerned.

Yet he throws a heavy sack of grain into a wagon with the ease of a man who stands waist high in the wagon box. He runs a binder, shocks grain, pitches sheaves onto or from the wagon, does about everything required of any farm hand.

He acquired a tractor last fall after having farmed with horses for years. By putting extensions on the brake pedals he operates them with his hands. Adept at all kinds of machinery, he took to the tractor like a duck to water, his neighbors say.

In harnessing his horses he swings about like an acrobat, crawling over first one and then the other and doing the job in record time. In doing this and many other things he has evolved techniques of his own. But whatever he does, his admiring neighbors add, he does well.

Quick-Thinking Mother Breathes Life Into Baby
CHICAGO. — Because of the lightning action of his 25-year-old widowed mother in time of emergency, 10-month-old James Fredericks is still rambling around unharmed at his home.

Submerged in the overflowing tub, the child was snatched from the water by his mother, Mrs. Lorraine Fredericks, who then breathed into his mouth until firemen of Rescue Squad 5 raced to answer her call for aid.

Revising the treat after a half-hour's labor by the inhalator squad, Capt. James Driscoll said that if the fast-thinking mother had not reacted as she had she would have lost her child.

Widowed a year ago when her husband, Elmer, died in an industrial accident at the Interlaken Iron Company, Mrs. Fredericks said she had left the baby in the tub while she cleaned the bedroom. With him was his brother, Bobby, 2½.

Mrs. Fredericks, who is employed as a rail ticket agent, lives with her mother, Mrs. Florence Naddy.

Paratrooper Saved When Pal Grabs Faulty Chute
SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA. — The life of Pfc. Floyd Oliver, 21, of Waldron, Ind., was saved in a fantastic mid-air rescue by his tentmate, Pfc. William Lively, 26, of Dallas, Tex., during a recent mass paratroop practice jump from 700 feet in which Oliver's chute collapsed, it was revealed recently.

Lively grabbed the silk of Oliver's parachute and wrapped it around his legs and arms, holding on until both landed. Lively was uninjured and Oliver suffered only a minor back injury.

"I don't know how I did it," Lively said. "I saw him going by and when I got hold of the silk I wrapped it around my arms and legs. I didn't know who it was until we were almost on the ground. I wasn't thinking of anything except holding on."

Take 40,000-Mile Auto Tour, Cash Bad Checks
PORTLAND, ORE. — Police said recently that Marion Miller Stinson, 28, Seattle, Wash., and Gladys Kay Wheelwright, 27, Monroe, Wash., had admitted cashing $30,000 in worthless checks in 40 states in six months on a 40,000-mile tour on gasoline obtained without coupons. They quoted Stinson as saying, "In one town I even talked the sheriff into cashing a $125 check. Obtaining gasoline without coupons was easy, too. All we had to do was pay from 30 to 40¢ a gallon."

Dowager's Rights
By FAYE McGOVERN
McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

"LEI MING," complained the dowager from the depths of her silken bed, "you aren't going to work in that hospital again today?" Her daughter continued fastening her quilted black jacket. "Yes, Mother. They need me."

"But must you degrade yourself? Isn't there something more genteel you can do?"

Lei Ming shook her smooth dark head. "They need every helping hand they can get. The city is full of refugees in need of medical attention."

"But how can you expect me to arrange a suitable marriage if you persist in such associations? No man of character will want you."

"There are too many children who need attention now," sighed Lei Ming, turning away. "Many of them are homeless." She turned back suddenly. "If you would only come with me..."

The dowager settled her plump, perfumed self deeper among her pillows and sighed. There had been a time when the many splendid rooms of her house were filled to overflowing with prominent, notable, important people. But with the war's coming lavish social affairs were frowned upon, and life was exceedingly dull. And Lei Ming was becoming harder to understand.

Tears ran down her cheeks, and with her plump hands curled helplessly on the coverlet, her small mouth drawn into a pout, she fell asleep. When her frightened handmaid shook her she awoke with a start. "Madam! Lei Ming needs you. The richsha boy who brought the message waits without. Make haste!"

For the first time in all her sheltered life the dowager hurried. Toting on her tiny bound feet she arrived at the rambling old mission house with a gasp.

Shoe trees may be used in drying wool socks or stockings to prevent them from shrinking.

Shoe racks and bags will keep shoes from being scuffed in the closet.

To keep beads from losing their bright red, leave on the long taproot and an inch or two of stems.

Open space between garments hanging in a closet helps them to hold the press and keeps them from getting a stringy look.

Sew a piece of strong material inside the back of the cuffs on men's pants. This will prevent that frayed appearance.

Dusters that have become very soiled and greasy are more easily cleaned and given better results if a tablespoon of paraffin is added to every gallon of water in which they are washed. Rinse in boiling water and afterwards in cold.

"I told my brother," hospital, her hair a wire. The curious eyes of weary hungry refugees followed her progress across the crowded courtyard. Greedy hands twitched at her silken trouser leg, and shrill voices pleaded for alms. Angry meditations followed in her wake as she swept past, unheeding.

Rushing from the bright sunlight into the gloom of the building she collided with a very dirty-faced little girl who had been standing directly in her path watching her approach with awe.

"Must you stand in the way, child?" the woman scolded. "Goodness, don't shriek so. Here."

She dabbed at the child's tears. Immediately the howling ceased, and a radiant smile lighted up the youngster's face. "Mmmmm," she cried. "You smell good."

An odd, half-forgotten warmth swept over the dowager. "Thank you, child," she said abruptly, and hurried on. She stumbled through three crowded rooms before she found Lei Ming efficiently bandaging a man's shoulder. "What does this mean?" demanded the dowager indignantly. "I thought you needed me."

"We do, Mother," Lei Ming said without ceasing her work. "Hand me the scissors, please."

Trembling with anger the older woman obeyed. "I never dreamed you could stoop to such trickery."

"I merely sent word you were needed, and you are. I'm sorry if you were frightened."

"Frightened? Of course I was —" A tug at her clothes caused her to look down. The little girl she had run into was holding a dirty little boy by the hand.

"I told my brother if he would let you wash his face he could smell you," cried the child eagerly.

The small boy grasped the dowager, pushed his face against one leg and inhaled deeply. He smiled and clung, staggering a little.

She stooped and picked him up. His head dropped against her soft shoulder and she instantly knew he was asleep. For a moment the dowager looked uncertain. But when the child stirred and sighed, her clasp tightened. Decision brought pink spots to the plump cheeks she hadn't taken time to rouge. "I'll take these two home with me."

"Oh, thank you, Mother," Lei Ming cried. "But are you sure you can manage?"

"With a houseful of empty rooms and servants? Of course I can," was the retort. Then, with vigor, "And tell Dr. Wu if he wants to retain his fees he'll get the rest of the children up to my house-at once!"

Big Saving. No Cooking. So Easy.

You'll be surprised how quickly and easily you can relieve coughs due to colds when you try this splendid recipe. It gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money, and you'll find it truly wonderful.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's no trouble at all. (Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.) Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any drugist) into a pint bottle. Add your syrup and you have a full pint of medicine that will amaze you for its quick action. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

This simple mixture takes right hold of a cough. For real results, you'll never see anything better. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes and eases the soreness.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

FOLKS & THINGS
ABOUT TOWN

—By BEN

Our "Peek-A-Boo" man on the front page of last week's issue of the News turned out to be "Pic-A-Boo" man. We imagine it was type grem-lins that messed it up.

A large crowd attended the football game last Friday night between Columbiana and Chilton County High here. In fact, so large was the crowd that many of the Clanton rooters had to go over and find seats on the visitors' side of the field. One thing is certain—folks here-about sure do like their local team.

Seems like old times hearing "Bottle" Alred come by the office whistling again. He is home on a thirty-day furlough. Bottle has completed his allotted missions over enemy territory and has come home for that deserved rest. News also reached us Saturday that Bernice L. Vance, who has been in the Southwest Pacific for the past two years is in Rome, Ga., in a Gov't. Hospital. We are looking for him to pop in and surprise his old friends any day now.

Mrs. A. B. Foshee was awakened early the other morning by rifle fire. She sat up in bed and listened. In a moment, there it was again. A distinct report of a rifle. And too, this time it sounded closer than the first. Before she could investigate, another and another report sounded in the still morning air. She went to her back door to see if the Japs had invaded Clanton during the night and there was Lt. Guy Higgins, standing in her back yard shooting bantam chickens, with a .22 rifle. However, they were his mothers bantams. She couldn't keep them at home so she told Guy to go out and kill them and she would make him a chicken pie.

Ernest Owens and his family have moved to Clanton. He is Pan-Am Distributor for this District. He hails from Oneonta, Alabama. Another Oil Distributor, B. N. Studdard came here from Oneonta, also. If Ernest Owens makes us as fine a citizen and as civic minded a business man as does "Ben" Studdard, we'll just take all that On-conta can send. Anyway, welcome to the Owens.

J. T. King wants Reddie Taylor and Leo Thompson "rit up" for advertising at the football games. Last Friday night when a crowd of a dozen or so congregated just before the game at the north gate, Reddie and Leo were the only two wearing overcoats. J. T. says that's unethical or something. Reddie sells overcoats and Leo cleans overcoats, and they were just trying to set an example to get the rest of us to either buy one, or dig out the old one and have it cleaned. We dug our old one out and had it cleaned.

Things we bet you never knew 'til now—

Greasing the inside bottom of a cooking vessel before water is added prevents rice, grits, and eggs from sticking.

When flouring steak to be fried 2 or 3 teaspoons of baking powder added to the flour will tenderize the steak.

By adding a pinch of sugar (not enough to sweeten) to food that has been scorched the scorched flavor will be removed.

Food that has burned or struck badly to the cooking vessel can be removed without scorching the vessel

Phone 21 -:- Montgomery Highway

AMERICA's growth has largely followed the routes of American railroads. They penetrated the wilderness and created wealth for the Nation. Around these efficient arteries of transportation grew great cities, busy industrial centers and prosperous farming communities.

Subsequently, fine highways were constructed. The railroads not only carried most of the materials to build those modern thoroughfares, and spent large sums for separation of grades at crossings for public safety, but have actually contributed greatly in taxes for highway construction and upkeep. In 1943, for example, about $800,000 of L&N tax payments were allocated for highway purposes in the 13 states through which it operates.

Highway separations at railroad grade crossings have become increasingly important as faster-moving vehicles have multiplied. Originally, railroads were—and in some states still are—required to bear the largest part of the cost of such separations, although the public has always received the greater benefits.

Certain states have now recognized that equity calls for a fairer distribution of the costs.

—SCHOOL

The attendance of Vermont School is good at present and we hope it stays that way.

Vermont School is planning on having a Halloween Party October 27th. We're going to select a pretty girl from each room and we will know who will be called Miss Vermont at the end of the Halloween Party. Everyone has a special invitation.

We want to make a correction in the Basketball game played Oct. 6th, between Stanton and Vermont. We received a card from Mr. Bookholdt the following week there was an error in the counting of the scores. We found that Vermont won 30-22. We thank Mr Bookholdt for dropping us a card to correct the scores.

Our former principal, Mr. Broadhead left to go back to camp Friday night, all enjoyed having him at Vermont and hope he will soon be back.

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

IT'S news when Elaine Carrington writes a new radio serial. So "Rosemary," heard over NBC at 11:15 a. m. EWT, is certainly news. Mrs. Carrington sort of regrets "Rosemary's" schedule, because she liked "Vick and Sade," which it replaces. Mrs. Carrington was known as a brilliantly successful fiction writer before she turned to radio; her "Pepper Young's Family" and "When a Girl Marries" are tops in daytime serials. But she is essentially a family woman; her two children and her husband are far more important to her than her career. That may be one reason why her serials are so beloved.

It's actresses like Betty Winkler who are really right for radio; too often, the famous ladies of the screen who take to the air sound too mannered, too affected. Betty's a veteran; she played leading roles

BETTY WINKLER

In Chicago, then went to New York, where she's just completed a long running part in "Just Plain Bill." Being picked to do "Rosemary" is like being crowned with a laurel wreath.

Ella Raines never did get all her father's present when she was graduated from the University of Washington. He said he'd pay all her expenses for six months in New York while she was trying to get started on Broadway as an actress—after four months Hollywood beckoned, and Ella accepted. After seeing her in "Hail the Conquering Hero," we, the public, can be thankful it happened that way.

RKO's "That Men May Live" is the first camera record of the care taken of a wounded man from the time he arrives at a field hospital in France until he is returned to the United States; every step of the way is shown—the first time it's been done visually.

Claudette Colbert is stringing along with Cary Cooper, Sonia Henie, Loretta Young, Edward G. Robinson, Joan Bennett and George Brent—in other words, she's added her name to International Pictures' list of stars; she'll do "Tomorrow Is Forever."

For the last few months John Charles Thomas, who's heard from coast to coast on NBC every Sunday afternoon, has been running what amounts to a school for young sinners. Three times a week he holds classes for youngsters from 13 to 18 years old, in the hope of developing talented newcomers.

"Roughly Speaking," starring Rosalind Russell, will introduce to film fans a man who's likely to land in a top notch with just that one picture. He's Arthur Shields, who plays a minister, and he is the older brother of the talented Barry Fitzgerald. Like Barry, he achieved fame as an outstanding actor with the renowned Abby Players of Dublin.

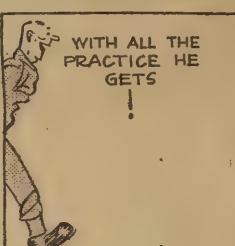

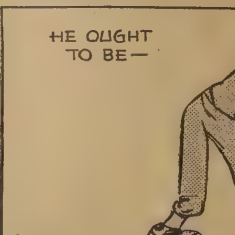

Ted Malone, who's heard tri-weekly on NBC, is writing a book on his experiences. It'll be worth reading—he goes right to the front lines to interview the GIs for his "Top of the Evening" broadcasts, and many a woman here at home has been made happy by getting direct news of her man at the front in this way. Malone has been overseas, working without respite, since last April.

The newest of the radio programs to spotlight youngsters is Mutual's "Steel Horizons," which stars a "Singing Cinderella" opposite Metropolitan Opera baritone John Baker each Monday night. No screen test is promised, but there's a chance to win national recognition.

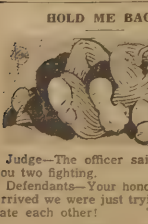

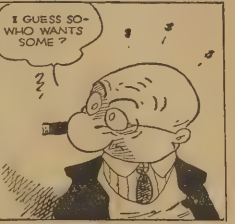

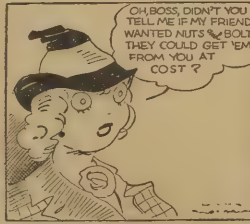

ODDS AND ENDS—NBC will present the most comprehensive program of religious, news and commentary offered the public by radio on an election night, November 7. . . . Jim Thorpe, world-famous Indian athlete and actor, has been signed for the role of an Indian chief in Warner Bros. "San Antonio." . . . Almost every song Kate Smith has introduced has become a hit. . . . Cate Lorna Lynn, 18-year-old who's appeared in 10 Broadway theatre successes, is having fun with her new role—that of "Beulah, the Calypso" on the Ed Wynn show. . . . Bert Gordon, always featured as "The Mad Russian," is now known as "Our Russian Friend."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for October 22

RELIGION IN EDUCATION

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 7:7-12; Luke 11:9-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.—John 8:32.

Education without religion will make America a pagan nation in a generation or two. Even worldly-minded educators are concerned about the neglect of religion and opposition to Christianity in many branches of our country's educational system.

Christians will want to be informed and to act as they have opportunity to bring Christian influence to bear on the education of children. They will want to give their hearty support to real Christian education.

I. Seek Wisdom from God (Matt. 7:7-11).

We have made great progress in the improvement of educational equipment, in the construction of fine school buildings, and in the provision of trained teachers. There have been earnest efforts to develop the most effective courses of study adapted to the needs of our day.

All this is commendable—except for one thing, and that is, it is a foundational error. We have given little, if any, attention to the development of character, without which the skills of hand and of head may be actually dangerous. Theodore Roosevelt is said to have observed that "to educate a man's mind without educating his conscience is to make him not a social asset, but a social liability" (Douglass).

The teaching in our schools of the evolutionary theory as though it were fact when it has never been proved has provided a foundation for all manner of denial of God and of the truth of His Word.

What shall we do? Surrender? Not at all. Let us look to God for His wisdom and grace. The promise is that the one who asks, receives, when he asks in faith and for God's glory (cf. James 1:5-8 and 4:3). Prayer is vital in real education.

II. Use Wisdom with Men (Matt. 7:12).

Education has as one of its important goals the ability to get along with our fellow men. As the Lord enables us to grow in wisdom and knowledge, it should show in our treatment of those who look to us for guidance and help.

This so-called Golden Rule is a high standard of conduct which many profess, but which only the grace of God can accomplish in a man's life. To always be positively doing for others is what we would have them do for us is far more than the negative thing which most people assume it to be. They reverse it and are trying to avoid doing things to others that they would not have done to themselves.

Note again that this is on the positive and the active side. We are to go about doing good, such as we would desire for ourselves.

III. Follow Wisdom in Humility (Luke 6:39-42).

If the teacher is spiritually blind he will lead his equally blind pupils into the ditch. That is exactly what is happening in many schools and colleges. No pupil will rise higher than his teacher (v. 40).

Real education makes a man humble; it makes him ready to destroy his brother's eye because it has a speck in it, for he recognizes his own weakness and sin. He needs the grace of God in his own life first; then he is ready to give help to others.

There is something fine about the genuine sweet humility of a man who is really educated. He is not pompous and proud, parading his learning so that the populace may be impressed. He is humble and teachable. Real scholarship calls for genuine faith in God.

IV. Find Wisdom in Godliness (Luke 6:43-45).

Every tree brings forth its own kind of fruit. Christian character is a fruit which grows only on the tree of Christian life. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom (Prov. 9:10). That means that to be truly educated a man must be a Christian.

That which is good and noble and upright can be brought forth only from a mind and heart of which the same things are true (v. 45). An evil man will teach others evil, a good man will teach them that which is good. Hence, the folly of thinking that if a teacher only has a brilliant mind, and is versed in the technical learning of his profession, it makes no difference what his morals are nor how he lives.

That theory has brought ruin to thousands of young lives, and it is high time that all who have to do with educational work demanded godly character as the first requisite of the teacher and made it the leading subject in the curriculum. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.

Best Known Home Remedy For Relieving Miseries of CHILD'S COLDS

So easy to use. You just rub it on, and right away blessed relief starts to come as VapoRub . . .

Often by morning most of the misery of the cold is gone. Remember this . . . ONLY VAPORUB Gives You this special penetrating-stimulating action. It's time-tested, home-proved, the best known home remedy for relieving miseries of colds.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Economic conditions in the Latin-American countries have been greatly influenced by the demand for natural rubber. This is evidenced by the report that Nicaragua shipped to the U. S. 1,267 tons of rubber in 1943 as compared with only 60 tons sent in 1941.

The B-29 Super fortress, our largest aerial weapon, has built into it some 5,000 pounds of rubber, covering more than 200 items. Thirty bullet-sealing fast tanks alone account for nearly two tons of rubber.

Rubber Director Dewey is authority for the statement that heavy-duty military tires made with 70 per cent synthetic rubber and rayon cords are better than the best military tires made before the war.

City Clerk, 42-1tc

TO THE CITIZENS OF CLANTON

At the first meeting of the Mayor and Council this month, I met with the new administration and saw them take oath of office. I met for the purpose of publicly expressing my appreciation to the Council members who have worked so faithfully with me for the past four years, also to assure the new Mayor and Council my full support through their administration.

My association with the Councilmen for the past four years was most pleasant and profitable. I think they are among Clanton's most able men and I know they have the best interests of Clanton at heart. Two of our administrations were replaced with two of Clanton's best young men. Mr.
Thompson and Mr. Taylor, and I feel sure the new administration is going to work for the general good of Clanton.

Again I wish to say that I enjoyed and appreciated being your Mayor for four years. Many of my friends asked why I did not ask for the office a second term. I withheld my reason until after the election because I was afraid some would think it a political statement against Mr. Jones. As above stated, I enjoyed being Mayor and my reason for not asking for a second term is, I think one term is enough.
We have many people capable of making a good Mayor. Being human we have different ideas of what should be done for the city. After one has been in for four years, I think it well to change.

Few people do their best all the time and I know I didn't do my best all the time as Mayor, and I am not making excuses in an effort to show that we did the best we could. Of course you know that since we entered the war, there has been little in the way of new construction we could do because of Government restricted building material.

I believe the records show that during the past four years I missed two meetings of the Council and that I was out of town on city business those times. If you recall our promises of four years ago and refer to the records at the City Hall as well as look about the City you will find that our administration did more than we promised with the exception of providing a recreational center for our young people. The first year we didn't have money to do with. As soon as we could see our finances in shape, plans were made for an up-to-date recreational center and repeated trips were made to Birmingham while I met with the War Production Board representatives in an effort to get permission to build a swimming pool with other adjoining recreational facilities for our young people. I believe our New Administration will make the recreational center one of their first post-war projects.

Some of our good friends East of Clanton felt that we should have built a sewerage disposal plant. I wish to say the plans for the sewerage disposal plant were made by the administration prior to ours. As soon as we got the various departments of the city organized and functioning according to our ideas, we took up the sewerage disposal plant question. The Council asked that I arrange with Dr.
Parish for plant site. Immediately thereafter Dr. Parish and I inspected a new plant at Leeds and returned to make preparations for construction.
Just as we were ready to start this project, the war came on and we were unable to get material and equipment for the plant. Just prior to expiration of my term of office I made another trip to Birmingham and conferred with representatives of the W.

P. B. who told me there was a possibility of material and equipment for sewerage plants being made available soon. I feel sure that the new administration will carry this project thru as soon as they can.

When I took office as Mayor, I spent several days studying the various departments of the city as well as the personalities and abilities of the employees. Soon thereafter, I assigned certain responsibilities to certain employees. Each employee accepted his responsibility and all departments showed marked improvements. With all departments functioning properly the mayor of Clanton can handle the affairs of the city in very little time spent in office. I realize that something I should have spent more time in the office at the City Hall. My idea is that if the departments are properly organized and checked by the Mayor, little time is required in his office.
That is my idea so again I think it well to have a new Mayor and he has my full support.—C. E. STAPP.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME XXII CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1944 NUMBER 43

Communities Listed Who Have Made War Chest Report

Advertising for the sixth War Loan will start November 1st. By all means the War Chest Drive should be completed with the quota raised or over subscribed before that date. Five counties in the State have already raised their quota. These are: Clark, Dale, Baldwin, Sumter and Monroe. Chilton County has a long way to go yet towards raising the quota.

With all community chairmen working their hardest and putting forth every effort in the next few days, we see no reason why Chilton County cannot be listed among those counties as having raised their quota by November 1st. It would be wonderful if our county could over subscribe its quota by a substantial amount so that we here in the county would have funds to draw upon for those in need. It is still possible for Alabama to be the first State to raise its War Chest Quota, as no state has as yet reported the quota raised. I don't let Chilton County be the cause of Alabama failing to be the first State in the nation to complete its quota.

Community	Quota	Raised
Clanton	$3,200.00	$2,182.00
Thorsby	650.00	125.00
Copier	150.00	65.85
Stanton & Alpine	200.00	265.35
Ma Mills & Vif	400.00	60.00
Creek	100.00	38.25
Rocky Mount	25.00	34.50
Clarendonia	50.00	61.00
Friendship	75.00	75.00
Pletcher	50.00	63.00
Walnut Creek	25.00	14.46
Thomas	50.00	32.00
Concord	50.00	50.00

The figures above do not necessarily mean that those not listed are not working and have not raised a substantial sum toward their quota, but to date, they have failed to make a report to the chairman. J. Archie Ogburn Tuesday night stated that Thorsby would definitely reach their quota this week. They were canvassing for donations at that time.

An early morning blaze of unknown origin destroyed the garage at the home of Mr. J. P. Lawrence last Saturday morning. A servants house was also destroyed by the fire. Mr. Lawrence estimated the loss at between $750.00 and $1,000.00. Included was a Model "T" Ford belonging to Richard, his son, an outboard motor, several gallons of paint and other valuables.

RAYMOND MIMS APPEALS TO VOTERS OF COUNTY

To The Voters of Chilton County: The time is here for the voters of our County to elect not only the officials who will serve us locally, but those who will represent us in our state and national government. I would like to be at home to discuss these important issues with you; I would like to write each of you personally. Military regulations forbid my doing either. Since, then, I cannot take any active part in the campaign, I would like to write a few words through the papers. In October, 1939, I was elected by you to serve you as Judge of the Inferior Law Court, which court came into existence that year. I had the honor and privilege of presiding on the first day that the court was open for business, which was the first Monday in November, 1939. I served as Judge of that court until February, 1943, at which time I entered the armed forces of the United States. At the time I entered the army, Governor Sparks appointed Victor Heard to fill my unexpired term. I feel that he could not have made a better selection. I have not been in Chilton County, but a few days in almost two years, but I am sure that Judge Heard has done an excellent job. Again, I have been selected to make the race for Judge of the Court, with Judge Heard as my opponent.

During the time I was Judge of the court, I did my best to render true justice and render decisions based upon the evidence in each case that came before me. I endeavored to show no partiality to any one that came before me. I feel that no one can justly criticize my judgment that I rendered, as being contrary to law and evidence. For more than three years I was Judge of that court, and during that time no one can justly say that I showed favors to any one in rendering decisions. I feel, and I know that every voter in Chilton County feels, that all decisions should be rendered on law and evidence and that partiality should not be shown. None of us know when this world conflict will be over. I don't expect to get back to the United States and Chilton County until the war is over. When I return to Chilton County as a civilian, I would like to know that I will again have the privilege and honor of serving you as Judge of the Inferior Law Court. I will greatly appreciate the vote and influence of all you who feel that you can support me for Judge.

Yours truly,
Sgt. Raymond Mims 34706260

MT. PLEASANT F. T. A.
Come to our Halloween Party Friday night, October 27. A short program, refreshments and several contests are planned.

How Good Is Your Word?

Are you as good as your word? When you voted in the Primary Election you made this pledge:
"By casting this ballot I do pledge myself to abide by the result of this Primary Election, and to aid and support all the nominees thereof in the coming General Election."
If you were a candidate, in addition to this, you declared:
"I further agree to abide by the result of the Primary Election in which I am a candidate and to support the Democratic nominees in said elections."
As to whether or not you feel yourself bound by either the written oath which you have taken, or by the oath which appeared on the ballot when you cast, is a matter between you and your conscience.

CLANTON TIGERS WIN OVER MAPLESVILLE

In an exciting game Friday night on the local gridiron the Chilton County High School Tigers came from behind to win over a strong Maplesville outfit by a score of 20 to 6. Maplesville scored first when a Clanton pass was intercepted by Smith and carried over the line for a touchdown. In the second quarter Clanton came back with a touchdown and Wade bucked the line for the extra point. The half ended Clanton 7; Maplesville 6. In the second half it was Clanton all the way, however, credit must be given the Maplesville boys for some good clean competition and for giving the fans their money's worth. The game was played clean, throughout, and very few penalties were drawn by either team. Clanton's second marker came in the third period, but a try for the extra point failed, leaving the score at the beginning of the fourth and final quarter 13-6. The set-up for the next score was made possible when Chas. Cox took a forward pass out of the waiting arms of a Maplesville player and returned within a few yards of the goal line. The remaining yards were covered in short order and the game ended 20-6.

TO THE CITIZENS OF CHILTON COUNTY

To the Patrons of Chilton County High School: One of the criticisms brought against this high school by some of you in the past has been that the school does not require enough work of the students, and that the work done is not of the highest quality. The teachers of the high school are aware of this weakness, and they are very much concerned about it. This year we are trying to raise the standard of work done in the school and we will not be able to do this without the cooperation of our patrons. At the end of the first six weeks of school this year we have more failing grades than we have had in any six weeks period in the last eight years. The teachers believe this is due, in part, to lack of work on the part of the students outside of school. Any high school student who is not doing two hours work each school day outside of school hours is not studying enough to be assured of success. If your child tells you that he does not need to bring any books home to study, he is very much mistaken. We have a number of students who are doing very fine work and they are ones who take their books home at night and also use their time in study hall periods to an advantage. We are anxious to have the best school possible and we are asking for the cooperation of our patrons. If you want your child to do satisfactory school work, please see that he stays at home week-day nights and does some studying. During the past two years I have had dozens of letters from our boys in the armed services of the United States and they tell me that we have failed in the past with them by not requiring them to do more and better school work. The teachers of the high school shall be glad to have any patron visit the school at any time and see what we are trying to do. We earnestly solicit your cooperation at all times. —Paterson Hicks, Principal.

J. W. Smith, Verbena Raises Some Potato

Our friend, J. W. Smith, of Verbena Route Two, made us a present Saturday afternoon of a most beautiful sweet potato. It was a red skin Puerto Rican yam, and weighed six and one-half pounds. AMENDMENT FOUR EXPECTED TO GET BIG VOTE

Constitutional Amendment No. 4, placing terms of sheriffs on the same six-year footing as other elected county officers, will be ratified by an overwhelming vote in the general election next Tuesday in the opinion of political forecasters. Carrying the endorsement and support of almost every agency concerned with better law enforcement and backed by leaders in the Alabama legislature and Probate Judges in practically every county, Amendment No. 4 seems assured of almost unanimous approval at the hands of voters. The office of sheriff is a constitutional office, and any change with respect to the terms thereof must of necessity be by constitutional amendment. At present Judges of the Circuit Court, Judges of Probate, Clerks of the Circuit Court and Tax Assessors and Tax Collectors hold office for a term of six (6) years, and the proposed Sheriff's Amendment to be voted upon by the people in November, next, simply extends the terms of sheriffs to a like period and thereby places all of such officers on an equal footing as to terms of office. Seeking to make sheriffs' terms the same length as those of other county officers, the 1943 legislature passed a bill by the necessary two-thirds majority submitting the so-called Sheriff's Amendment to a vote of the electorate on November 7th. Ratification of this amendment will make terms of important state and county officers expire at the same time, thus saving taxpayers the expense of interim elections. Pointing out that law enforcement is tending to become a more and more specialized profession, demanding trained and experienced leaders, Attorney General William McQueen declared that the consensus of opinion of leading law enforcement agencies and authorities is that the best interests of law enforcement can be served by extending sheriffs' terms as the amendment provides.

And bring him safely home at last.
God bless my daddy.

THE CHRISTIAN MOTIVE FOR LIVING International Temperance Sunday

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 4:5-8; Luke 4:4; John 6:3; Romans 12:1, 2; 13:12-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—Seek those things which are above.—Colossians 3:1.

Disciplined living should be the goal of each of us. Life is not to be lived carelessly, influenced by chance events or passing impulses. Such discipline of life would keep men from the temptations which lead them into intemperance and sin.

A life can be properly disciplined, only as it is controlled by Christian motives. Such a life has—

I. Spiritual Gladness (Ps. 4:5-8). The psalmist had faced the distressing questioning of men who derided him for his faith. They were unbelievers who demanded of him what good his religion did (v. 6). He has an answer, and it is the testimony of his own experience.

Those around him sought gladness in the harvest of grain and in the wine which was supposed to give a lift to their spirits. This was their joy. Well, the man of God had something infinitely superior. He had gladness in his heart. It was not dependent on outward circumstances—it was within.

Then note, too, that it did not rest on something that happened, or on some fellow man. "Thou (God) hast put gladness in my heart." That means real joy and satisfaction.

II. Spiritual Food (Luke 4:4; John 6:35). It is delightful to have true gladness, but man needs food if he is to grow and to work. That is true spiritually, for he must have the needed nourishment of life here also.

Jesus when tempted (Luke 4:4) because He was hungry saw beyond the temporal need, and declared that life should be controlled by a higher principle. The spiritual has a place of supremacy over the physical in the life of the Christian man or woman. The body with its desires is to be subject to the definite control of the spirit, which takes its orders from God.

The explanation of the awful alcoholic debauchery of our day is found right here. Men have given their bodies the supreme priority and they are driven by the lusts of their flesh. What they need more than legal reform or restriction of sale of liquor (and we believe in both) is the regeneration of their souls by the grace of God in Christ Jesus. Let us bring them the gospel.

John 6:35 makes known the fact that Jesus, the bread of life, satisfies every need of men. Every normal man can find satisfaction in Him. Have you tried Him as the One to meet the need of your hungry heart?

III. Spiritual Service (Rom. 12:1, 2). "Reasonable service," says the Authorized Version. "Rational service," says the Revised Version. Both are right. The man who is really reasonable will be spiritual and will render to God a sacrificial service.

Note that it is a "living sacrifice" that is said to be "holy, acceptable to God." This is not a case of a single act of deep devotion (great as that may be), but a going on in the daily walk to live for Christ. That calls for grace and power, and it is ready and willing to give both to each of His children.

That experience with God means a non-conformity to the world, which is too little spoken of and less practiced in the church today. The one who professes to follow Christ is simply not to be conformed to the ways of this wicked world. There is to be a completely transforming experience of the grace of God, that takes you out of this world while you are still in it.

IV. Spiritual Walk (Rom. 13:12-14).

Christians are the children of the morning. They walk in the light (I John 1:9). This world walks in darkness. No one needs any argument to prove that point—just look about you.

The deeds of darkness are evil deeds, and men dwell in darkness because they love evil (John 3:19). That means that the children of light must walk circumspectly and "becomingly" (that's a good word!) in this world. They may attract notice, but they are not to put on "reveling and drunkenness," yes, and also "strife and jealousy." Those go together.

The way to victory is to be clothed with the Lord Jesus and His righteousness (v. 14). That is a real "armor of light" with which we may be protected.

Note also that we are studiously to avoid making any provision for the desires of the flesh. Put things away, and with them will go the temptation to use them. Some professing Christians need to heed this word by destroying some beverages which they may have on hand—just to give one example.

Blake Howard, The Second

By CLARA BRAUTOVICK
McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

KAY hurried along through the misty shipyard, trying to catch up with the launching party ahead that was being guided to the Liberty ship S. S. Blake Howard. She was late because she'd been caught in the melee of tin-helmeted men and kerchiefed women coming off the graveyard shift. Approval lighted the tired eyes of the younger men as they passed her.

Carlene, Blake's sister, must have suggested her name, for the invitation from the shipyard read "Guest of the sponsor." Carlene never resented her as the older Howards had.

It might embarrass the family to have her here. It wouldn't hurt her—for suffering had drained her dry of emotion. She had lived in a vacuum ever since word had come that Blake had lost his life in covering the Pacific war as a foreign correspondent. She didn't even care now who won. There could never be any sort of victory for her.

Ahead, a long sleek car halted. Mr. and Mrs. Howard and Carlene stepped out and led the way. Kay stayed in the rear. As she rounded a corner she saw the shining new stern of a Liberty ship, and on its side the name Blake Howard. She lost some of her numbness and was afraid she would cry. "Not now!" she told herself severely.

Winding steps mounted to a platform built to the keel. The faces of the workmen were expectant and proud. From beneath the great hull came the sound of blocks being removed. The Howard's ascended to a smaller, higher platform. The women carried large sprays of roses. Blake had always brought just such roses to Kay. . . .

Cameras clicked. Of course newspapermen would be at the launching of a ship honoring a reporter who'd been killed covering the biggest story of all.

A shipyard representative showed Carlene how to hold and swing the red, white and blue encased bottle of champagne. Then, trotting to the microphone, he boasted that this ship had been built in twenty-six days and would carry over three hundred and fifty had gone down the ways since the war began.

Then a noted editor spoke of Blake Howard, the man. It was hard to hear everything above the roar. But Kay got the essence of it. "The curly-headed kid with the shining eyes." He told of the great stories Blake had written. But nothing of the woman he'd loved—the most important part of a man's life! The first speaker explained that the steel plates were all that now held back the ship. He said he'd count as torches burned through them. "Burn number one!" he cried dramatically.

Till now Kay had kept out of sight of the Howards. Interested, she stepped forward. Her name was called and she glanced up. Mrs. Howard, holding out a thin hand, said, "Come along, Kay."

Someone prodded Kay from behind. She found herself mounting the steps as the second order came, "Number two!"

Carlene, posing the bottle, yelled, "Take this, Kay. You're the one who should launch this ship!"

"No!" Mrs. Howard grabbed her hand and pulled her to Carlene's side. "Bot of you here!" she ordered. Kay's old awe of Mrs. Howard made her obey.

"Number three!" The ship began to tremble and lurch forward. As it started to move away Kay saw the bottle. It crashed against the hull and the champagne foamed in a weird design. The second Blake Howard slipped away from her to go into active service. Only service time Kay was glad! Looking at the bottle that she still clutched tensely, she was suddenly aware that it had broken in a perfect deep "V."

Kay thought, "I've launched a ship—Blake's ship! For Carlene had taken her fingers off. Suddenly Kay felt alive. Her eyes met the friendly ones of the Howards. "They don't resent me any longer!" she told herself, and watched the ship float away.

Someone said, "Now she goes to the fitting-out dock and in two weeks she'll be ready for service."

Ready for service! Blake had been ready. Was Kay?

Men and women had fallen into their places and were already working. They were building another Liberty ship, started even before the S. S. Blake Howard hit water! The necessity for speed. The thought that every second counted because the enemy also had that second in which to work, struck Kay all at once. As the shipyard representative thanked her and presented her with a gift, Mrs. Howard asked Kay to go home with her. "Thanks, but—" "We objected to Blake's marriage but now we want to thank you for having made Blake happy." Kay kissed the leathery cheek. "I'll come soon, but not now. I've something to do." She motioned toward the overalled women, riveting. "I'm ashamed of all this. I've wasted. I'm going to the employment office to ask the name of a school where I can learn to do my part."

WHEREAS, the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1944, which is the 7th day of November, is the time for holding the next General Election after the expiration of three months after the final adjournment of the regular session of the 1943 Legislature; and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law, and by the provisions of the Act submitting the amendment, to be given by a proclamation of the Governor to be published in each county in the State of Alabama once a week for four successive weeks next preceding the said 7th day of November;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Chauncey Sparks, as Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that on Tuesday, the 7th day of November, 1944, an election will be held at the several polling places within the State of Alabama, in the manner and form provided by law, upon the following proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901:

STATE OF ALABAMA A PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama, at the Regular Session 1943, ordered an election to be held by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama of 1901, which said amendment is hereby set out, and ordered that said election be held at the General Election in November, 1944; and

WHEREAS, the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1944, which is the 7th day of November, is the time for holding the next General Election in 1944; and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law, and by the provisions of the Act submitting the amendment, to be given by a proclamation of the Governor to be published in each county in the State of Alabama once a week for four successive weeks next preceding the said 7th day of November;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Chauncey Sparks, as Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that on Tuesday, the 7th day of November, 1944, an election will be held at the several polling places within the State of Alabama, in the manner and form provided by law, upon the following proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901:

"Section 1944. No person who honorably served in the military service of the United States between January 1, 1917 and November 11, 1918, or between September 16, 1940 and December 8, 1941, or at any time, past or present or future, when the United States was, or is or shall be at war with any foreign state, shall be required after the beginning of such service to pay the poll tax specified in the Constitution of Alabama as a prerequisite to the privilege of voting in Alabama; but, on the contrary, every such person shall be exempt from the payment of all poll taxes which have theretofore accrued and have not been paid or which may thereafter accrue: Provided, however, that if any such person is discharged dishonorably from said service the exemption herein provided is forfeited, and such dishonorably discharged person, as a prerequisite to the privilege of voting in Alabama thereafter, must pay the poll tax specified in the Constitution of Alabama as if such person had never been in such service. The term 'military service' as used in this section includes service in the Army of the United States, the United States Navy, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard, the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, the Women's Appointed Volunteer Emergency Service, and the Women's Reserve of the United States Navy. The United States shall not be deemed at war with a foreign state within the meaning of this section at a time when an armistice exists between the United States and the foreign state. The Judge of Probate shall issue a certificate of exemption to a person exempt from the payment of poll tax by reason of this section under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Governor. This section shall be self-executing and retroactive; but the legislature is authorized to enact laws designed to carry out the purposes of this section."

I further direct and proclaim that notice of this election upon Tuesday, the 7th day of November, 1944, upon the above set forth amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901, be given by publishing the same once a week for four successive weeks next preceding Tuesday, the 7th day of November, 1944, in each county in the State of Alabama in a newspaper published in said county.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and have caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed by the Secretary of State at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this 1st day of August, 1944.

Star Dust STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

MAX MARCIN, one of radio's real celebrities, really just happened into radio. He'd been a top-notch newspaperman, a highly successful playwright ("Cheating Cheaters," "Live Girls," etc.) and had made his mark in Hollywood. When he was asked to do a radio script he knew little about radio, but he dashed one off, it clicked, and now he's one of our foremost writers and producers of air shows. Listening to "Crime Doctor" on Sunday evenings, you'd have very little idea of what an expert job it is, just because Marcin is so skilled. He writes the week's show, then goes into rehearsal, polishing the sketch till it's perfect.

Everybody but Barbara Britton and Ray Milland thinks it's funny. For a scene in "Till We Meet Again" they laid face down in grass that supposedly was growing somewhere in France. The turf was carefully laid, and they spent several hours stretched out on it, pretending they'd been caught in an air raid. The last bomb burst, Ray and Barbara arose—and found they were covered with flea bites!

Betty Hutton worked so hard portraying twins in the Paramount musical, "Here Come the WAVES," in which she is tri-starred with Bing Crosby and Sonny Tufts, that she lost eight pounds.

That's a nice record that Dinah Shore chalked up overseas. She made 130 appearances before our troops; on several occasions she sang to groups of men within two miles of the actual fighting. She ate GI meals throughout the trip.

Gigi Perreau isn't doing so badly for a three-year-old; her role in "Dark Waters," the Benedict Bogeaus' production, is her sixth featured role in major pictures since she made her debut a year ago. She started as little Eve Curie in "Madame Curie," and forged right ahead.

A new star may be rising on the Kate Smith program's horizon, if rumors are true. Ted Collins, producer, who brought to fame "Abbott and Costello," "The Aldrich Family," "It Pays to Be Ignorant," and many other radio favorites, is said to be on the lookout for a new star to be featured on the Kate Smith Sunday Variety hour.

A new series of weekly dramatic programs, "Assignment Home," dealing with problems involved in the return to civilian life of members of our armed forces, begins Saturday, December 9, on the Columbia Broadcasting system, in collaboration with the army service forces. High-ranking army officials will participate, taking the microphone to deliver messages directly to the American people.

Father Ambrose Hyland, chaplain at Dannemore prison, is now in Hollywood helping in plans being made at Metro for filming of "Church of the Good Thief," a story of the chapel he founded at the institution. He has organized the Good Thief Foundation, Inc., which will use proceeds from the picture for the benefit of prison inmates. Money paid for the story has bought them a library.

Carrying a spear for John Barrymore in "Richard III" started Allyn Joslyn on his acting career. From the silent Shakespeare role Joslyn leaped to a two-word part in "Theater Guild's 'He Who Gets Slapped.'" He had to say "Very well!" It paid him 10 dollars a week. He's now getting considerably more than that—his latest picture, "Bride by Mistake," with Marsha Hunt.

ODDS AND ENDS—Sandra and Ronnie, the two Burns children, now nine and ten, got a unique birthday present—George Burns and Gracie Allen let them appear before the studio audience prior to the broadcast to do a dance routine. . . . Herbert Marshall does a suave villain in his role in Paramount's "Her Secret in Her Throat." . . . Poodles Sanford, the famous circus performer, will play a stage-coach driver in Errol Flynn's "Son of the Sea." . . . Radio is full of men who began their careers as lawyers—among them Lanny Ross, now an army lieutenant overseas; Don Amesche, and Michael Romanoff of "Road of Life" and other radio serials.

A GAY, pretty little jumper frock which has the easiest, simplest blouse to make, and a launder you've ever encountered. Notice that the "puffs" of the sleeves and the gathers of the neckline are just pulled up by means of a ribbon drawstring.

Pattern No. 8690 is in sizes 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 years. Size 4 jumper requires 1 1/2 yards of 36-inch material; blouse, 3/4 yard.

Telling Fake Fingerprints Difficult Even for Expert

A scientist recently proved that the average fingerprint expert cannot distinguish a genuine print, or one made by the finger itself, from a forged print, or one transferred from an object, says Collier's.

Eight experts were asked to tell which of four identical prints on a card were made by the two methods. Only three of the men correctly named all four, the later admitted they did it by guessing. The other five experts, incidentally, called more genuine prints forged than forged prints genuine.

Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers.

A few cranberries added to your applesauce when cooking will give it a delicious flavor.

In laundering, remember the temperature of the water is important. The hotter the water, the whiter the clothes.

The next time you make a laundry bag, put a draw string on both ends. This will facilitate emptying it.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

If you have any doubts about the shortage of new passenger car tires, a recent statement by a government agency that knows the situation should clear your mind. It points out that less than one new tire for each car on the road will be produced in 1944, even if the industry is able to achieve the goal of 22 million passenger car tires.

Tire care is imperative now, particularly with users of truck and bus coatings. Stocks are low, and it is estimated that during the latter part of the year there will be a shortage of 25,000 tires a month to meet replacement requirements on vehicles using tires of the 8.25 size and over.

Soldier of the Soil

VICTORY begins with the American farmer, working from long before sunset until long after midnight. Upon him falls the burden of feeding the fighting forces . . . the civilian population . . . and hungry millions in war-torn countries.

To the challenge of producing more food than ever, American soldiers of the soil have responded with heroic effort. Despite shortages of help and equipment, they have established records. They have contributed mightily towards winning the war.

Now you are asked to help your fellowmen in another way . . . to contribute money to give men in the armed forces needed recreation, to give books and sports equipment to prisoners of war, to give nerve-shattered men in the merchant marine a chance to recuperate. To give unfortunate people abroad and at home a chance to have life, liberty, and happiness.

The dollars you can give are needed more than ever this year. Please give generously.

FOLKS & THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

.By BEN

Clanton loses in the death of Mrs. M. A. Gore a true Christian spirit which is attested by the many friends we have heard express themselves of their personal loss in her passing. We extend our deepest sympathy to the family.

This war is full of funny coincidences. Leo Thompson tells us of one that occurred to Kenneth Thompson and Cliff Giles of Clanton Route 5. Kenneth and Cliff grew up together, played as boys together down around Yellow Leaf Creek. Both joined the Air Corps early in the war and as others, got separated. Both met this week for the first time in two years, here at home, on furlough. And each found that they had been stationed in the Canal Zone, at fields only 30 miles apart.

Joe Campbell says it ain't right, this going squirrel hunting on Sunday morning when you should be in Sunday School. Joe, being a liberal fellow and quite reasonable, says he is going to give the citizens in mind a few more weeks to mend their ways or hes going to start talking. Personally, we believe, whats worrying Joe is, that he ain't getting to go squirrel hunting too.

A friend in town who's wife was in a hospital tells about the doctor who was going to take an x-ray of his wife's jaw. When he asked how the x-ray came out the doctor told him he was unable to get anything but a moving picture.

We're glad to hear that Sleepy Miller, big-wig in the mechanical department at Clanton Motors, is much better. Sleepy has been in the Veteran's Hospital at Montgomery for the past several weeks. Word comes from Audell, that he is able to be up a little now and on the road to recovery. Incidentally, he's been goin' to fix a windshield wiper for us for the past three months, and by golly, we're goin' to make him fix it if it we have to wait three more.

A late snack, after enjoying a football game or a show, is an old American custom. Seems to me that some arrangement could be made by the local restaurants to take care of this crowd on Friday nights after the ball game. The Bus Station is the only place in town that is open after about 8 o'clock and they can't even take care of half the crowd that would like to gather for a sandwich or drink. After all, we believe the cafes are servants of the public as are other businesses, and it is their duty to serve that public that enables them to remain in business. We ask but little, here below, but we would like part of it late Friday night after the football game.

Heard a guy tell a Childersburg wunker the other day, "Say, fellow, you need a tonic. You're gettin' to look like the photo on your badge."

Son: "Pop, I got a lickin' in school today and it's your fault."
Pop: "How's that, son?"
Son: "Remember when I asked you how much a million dollars was?"
Pop: "Yes, I remember."
Son: "Well, a 'helluva lot' ain't the answer."

Give Once for All!

A million acts of kindness here at home—around the world—will be performed by dollars that you give this year to the Alabama War Chest. Nearly half of your donation goes to USO that makes a "home away from home" for boys in our armed services. Some part will provide comforts for our fighting men who are prisoners of the enemy. Some will go to the United Seamen's Service, which maintains clubs for those who convoy our ships. And some will be distributed among the nineteen agencies that aid the stricken peoples of our Allied Nations. Give ONCE FOR ALL these agencies as much as you would give if EACH solicited your aid. Let's show our boys that we—their kinfolks, friends and neighbors—stand solidly behind them in their brave fight for early and complete victory.

Nazis Dig In for Winter War;

Map indicates U. S. carrier attacks on Formosa and Philippines and U. S. land-based bomber assault on Borneo and Halmahera.

EUROPE:
Dig-In

Digging in behind their strong defenses as the battle-front was soaked by rain, the Germans prepared for a winter of warfare as Allied armies pressed their attacks on the Reich.

If the Germans prepared for a winter of warfare, however, it was not without expectations of further grand Allied assaults aimed at quickly finishing them off. Reporting that the British had massed 1,500 tanks around Arnhem, the Germans declared that they were only waiting for clearance of the port of Antwerp for the delivery of large-scale supplies before renewing their effort to outflank the Siegfried line above Kleve and drive down into the vital Ruhr industrial valley.

Although expecting an attack in the Arnhem sector, the Germans also remained on edge about Aachen, where Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges' U. S. First army had all but closed the noose on that once thriving city of 165,000, and his troops threatened to overrun the Reich's elaborate highway system radiating into the industrial Rhineland.

As stalwart doughboys mopped up street after street in Aachen, routing the enemy from the charred rubble, the Germans massed strong artillery and troop concentrations to the east of the city in an effort to thwart an American breakthrough.

With the Germans able to use up large quantities of artillery ammunition, the battle was relieved by the shortening of his lines.

With rain miring the terrain and greasing the mountain slopes, the U. S. Third and Seventh armies drove before Metz and the Vosges mountains on the lower end of the 460 mile front slowed to a walk.

As great tank battles raged on the southern plains of Hungary with the Russians edging to within 50 miles of Budapest, political strife shook the embattled country, with Pro-Nazi elements headed by fanatical Ferenc Szalasi assuming control after Regent Nicholas Horthy's abortive attempt to negotiate an armistice with the Allies.

With Horthy in Hitler's hands, Szalasi's followers went right to work seeking to root out pro-Allied elements in a desperate effort to keep the Hungarian army of approximately 400,000 men in the field with the Nazis, and assure the country's continued flow of material to Germany.

Fully capitalizing on the Hungarian chaos, the Nazis pressed their offensives on the country from the north and east as well as the south, and further tightened their grip on outlying Yugoslavia, where the Reds and Tito's storied Partisans fought into the capital of Belgrade.

Hitler's Highways

The Yanks' first opportunity to sample Hitler's famed superhighways probably will be near Aachen, Rhineland city, the tip of the Netherlands southern panhandle. From that point a superhighway spur extends to Cologne, 40 miles northeast.

The Reichsautobahnen (literal translation: realm's auto tracks) are double three-lane ribbons with 15-foot parkway between, on the pattern of the Pennsylvania Turnpike between Pittsburgh and Harrisburg.

Due to an aggressive sales program by the army, more than 95 per cent of the soldiers are insured for over $9,000, compared with only 75 per cent in the fall of 1942, when the average policy totaled less than $6,500. Upon discharge, it was said, experience showed a tendency of servicemen to reduce their holdings of insurance policies contracted during service.

PACIFIC:
Air Warfare

With Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces poised on the threshold of the Philippines, and with U. S. army and naval units closing in on Japan's inner defense system, some of the greatest air battles of World War II were fought in the South Pacific as the desperate enemy attempted to blunt American efforts to cripple his facilities for resistance against the next big move in that theater.

In over a week and a half of continuing action by carrier air craft and Superfortresses against the enemy's defense system in Formosa and the Philippines, almost 1,000 Japanese planes were shot from the sky, and the proud imperial navy, which had sailed out to fight, turned tail back to safer waters.

First proclaiming a great victory over the U. S., the enemy later tempered his claims, declaring: "It cannot be thought that the enemy with this setback will give up his plans for attacking the Philippines. . . . Meanwhile, other American air units hit Japanese installations on Halmahera to the south of the Philippines, and important oil refineries on Balikpapan in Borneo.

FOOD STORAGE: Holdings Spotty

Despite large withdrawals of cheese, shell eggs, meats and lard, food stocks in storage on October 1 totaled 1,630,298,000 lbs., with frozen fruits, eggs and poultry at an all-time high for the date.

Pork holdings at 359,992,000 lbs. and beef at 143,144,000 lbs. were the smallest since last November, while a drop in receipts and weight of hogs at marketing centers contributed to the heavy withdrawal of lard since June, with holdings equalling only 167,463,000 lbs., of which the government owned 115,225,000 lbs. Partly because of seasonal holdings, lamb and mutton stocks stood at 15,990,000 lbs.

Although there was a slight increase in butter holdings over the previous month, the supply of 139,948,000 lbs. was almost 100,000,000 lbs. below last year.

RAIL RATES: Buck Boosts

Contending that railroads would earn over two billion dollars before interest and income taxes this year, government agencies opposed the carriers' efforts to secure an overall 6 per cent freight rate increase January 1 and retain the 10 per cent passenger fare boost in effect since first authorized.

In bucking the carriers' petitions for the increases up before the Interstate Commerce commission, the agricultural agencies declared that a record production assured continued high farm tonnage, and projected that the traffic would hold up for at least two years.

Declaring that freight rate increases would bring in an additional 330 million dollars annually, and that higher farm tonnage would net 150 million dollars more yearly, the OPA said that the carriers' petitions rest . . . upon the false concept that railroads may pass on to their consumers through rate increases the increases the burdens of wartime taxation imposed on them. . . .

SALARIES:

Big Pickin's

Drawing $1,138,000 for the year ending August 31, 1943, Movie Magnet Louis B. Mayer led the nation's salary earners for the sixth consecutive year. With all personal receipts above $200,000 taxed at 94 per cent, however, Mayer turned about $900,000 back to the treasury.

Members of the movie industry continued to draw the highest salaries, with Producer Walter F. Wanger second to Mayer with $710,372; and Executive Sidney R. Fleisher of 20th-Century-Fox Film corporation $645,000.

Among the stars, Abbott and Costello each earned $394,000; Deana Durbin $282,250; Spencer Tracy $219,871; Irene Dunne $200,000; Joan Crawford $194,615; Robert Taylor $178,983; Greer Garson $159,033; and Randolph Scott $132,137.

Among the nation's big businessmen, Eugene G. Grace of Bethlehem Steel corporation and Thomas J. Watson of the International Business Machines Corp. each received over $500,000. A. Obiel of Planters' Nut and Chocolate Co., drew $374,737.

LAMBS:
Fewer Numbers

Although the lamb industry has been less of a headache to OPA than other meats, production is not bearing up as well, with federal officials reporting the third lowest supply since 1939 and prospecting of the smallest sheep population in 14 years next January 1.

With the lamb industry in fewer hands than most meats, and, therefore, easier to be kept under OPA surveillance, black markets have offered legitimate packers less competition for supplies. Prices have been regulated through controls on the finished meat and wool markets.

With hog prices showing a 159 per cent increase in prices since the start of the war, and cattle up 76 per cent, lambs have only registered a 66 per cent gain. The tight feed situation, and ratio between feed and market price, are reflected in the corn-belt's 15 per cent reduction in feeding operations this year.

Less Trimmings

Celebration of this year's yuletide may see the revival of the old-fashioned custom of bringing pocket change for Christmas decorations, what with few, if any, new light bulbs to be marketed and short supplies of other trimmings.

The only light bulbs available this year, trade circles say, will be those in the home, since no new ones will be made because of wartime restrictions and stores usually exhausted their stock in 1943.

Neither will silver or gold tinsel be manufactured this year, it was said, and supplies of lead foil "cycles" and globes will be reduced; and telephone bills will be found on counters. Because they are made of imported material, artificial Christmas trees will be scarce.

Supplies of decorative materials may help brighten up the scene, however, with some manufacturers going in for brilliant red and green paper ornaments, tinsel of spun glass and treated rayon, and glistening "snow."

FURLONGS:
Shipping Factor

With U. S. offensives in full swing and long supply lines necessitating utmost utility in shipping, the army has been able to grant only about 30,000 furloughs a month, the war department disclosed.

Soldiers overseas for long periods are being returned for rehabilitation, recuperation and recovery when the size of a particular war theater's force may be reduced; when local policemen may be given temporary duty in this country for a period of rest, and when men may be permanently relieved of overseas duty and assigned to tasks at home.

Return of one soldier from overseas actually is equivalent to a loss of four to seven men on the fighting front, the war department said, declaring that the condition arises primarily from the time required for providing for his replacement.

SUGAR BEETS:
New Process

A new process reducing sugar beet seeds to a single germ and applying a protective coating to them promises to simplify cultivation of the plants and prevent heavy crop losses.

To Phelps Vogelzang, agricultural chemist and mayor of Midland, Mich., goes credit for the new process, in which the reduction of seed to a single germ will permit precision planting, with adequate spacing to allow machine cultivation.

By applying the protective coating, seed is protected in handling and storage, with the chemical dissolving upon contact with the moisture of the soil.

CLOSE RACE

With the historic 1944 presidential election less than two weeks off, both candidates are engaged in a nip and tuck race, with Mr. Roosevelt enjoying a slight margin on the basis of popular sample poll, but Governor Dewey pressing closer as the balloting approaches.

With both candidates running almost neck-and-neck, the final outcome seems to hinge upon the voting in Missouri, New Hampshire, Oregon and Pennsylvania, with their 60 electoral votes.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Commentators and newspaper writers get a lot of free meals. Or at least they are offered a lot of free meals from people and organizations who want something. So when I was invited to attend a luncheon given by the Nonpartisan Education Association, I was a bit skeptical. I wondered. When I learned that Henry J. Kaiser, shipbuilder and entrepreneur would be there, I was more interested.

I arrived late, as I must at all luncheons, since I don't get off the air until 1:15. I slipped quietly into the one vacant chair, for a stocky, bald-headed man in glasses was making some highly emphatic remarks accompanied by gestures.

Henry Kaiser has lent his name to this franchise organization which I mentioned because he believes that the only hope for democracy is a job for everybody, and he believes that there is plenty of chance of a job for everybody in the everybody realm of the fact, and then gets out and expresses his sentiments with ballots.

(Getting out the vote is the purpose of the Nonpartisan Education Association, a non-profit, non-political corporation with headquarters at 16 East 52nd street, New York City.)

Because President Roosevelt when he was making his campaign speech to the Teamsters last month mentioned the Henry Kaiser was present, I thought Kaiser was coming out for the Democratic ticket. But he is not. He was invited by the teamsters to the dinner (with whom he has far more contacts than with the New Deal). He has no particular purpose in backing Franchise Education, Inc. Many persons of both parties are behind it simply because they believe in getting out the vote.

Any thinking person realizes the need for such an organization when he considers the facts. You can't have democracy if people don't exercise the franchise and that is exactly what the U. S. people of the United States do NOT do. The smaller the vote, the nearer dictatorship.

Expect Less Than Half to Cast Vote

The Gallup poll indicates that there will be a drop of 10 million in the vote in the national election this year. That would mean only 40 million ballots cast out of a possible 88 million.

In the Wisconsin primaries where Wilkie staked his presidential chances, only 33 per cent of the people bothered to go to the polls. In New Jersey, with the exception of one county (Mayor Hague's locality) only 15 per cent of the registered voters went to the polls in the recent primaries. In New York state, the vote dropped from 6,279,000 in 1940 to 3,368,000 in 1943.

This year there are 44,043,669 American men of voting age. Nearly nine million of these are now in the armed forces and it will be hard to do anything at this late date to stimulate them. Therefore, the greater responsibility devolves upon the members of service families at home who can exercise their franchise.

Five million families have moved, following war industries. Some of these have lost their votes but others can establish new residence or register and vote by mail in their home towns.

There are millions of first voters coming up; this year 600,000 more women than men are eligible to vote and women are lagged about carrying out this function. This year there are great issues at stake and the American is one of the few free elections going on in the world.

So much for the bed rock facts about voting.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Pineapples weighing 20 pounds are common in the New Hebrides Islands in the South Pacific, reports the Associated Press.

German school children have one or two days a week leave from school in order to collect straw, berries and other leaves and flowers for the production of a tea substitute.

Now what about this job business that voters have so much to do with? Mr. Kaiser's views on this subject will startle a lot of people.

But they will not startle many of the members of the fraternity of big businessmen who, like Kaiser, know that their bread is buttered with the same spread that covers the slice in the working man's dinner pail.

Mr. Kaiser believes in three principles:

1. High wages. (This is a hot one for the old-fashioned tycoon to swallow.)

2. Increased production. (That isn't so terrifying.)

3. Low prices. (Another bombshell.)

These are necessary, he believes, to full employment which is in turn vital not only to prosperity but the only escape from depression, dissension and war.

And what, I asked Mr. Kaiser, are the things which we have to have to achieve full employment?

Kaiser Mentions
Production Needs

Two essentials which he named immediately were: first, competition (that is, removal of monopoly). Second, "credit." ("And," his son, who is one of Kaiser's expert associates, piped up from the end of the table, "quote.")

Mr. Kaiser told a number of off-the-record stories of how monopolies had fought him, tried to keep him out of one business after another merely because they had monopolies and didn't want to face competition with a man who had learned how to make money by paying high wages, producing efficiently and selling at low costs.

As to credit, the stories he told would curl your hair. But Kaiser didn't blame the bank or the investment trusts for refusing to lend capital to pioneers. But he did offer a way out. He suggested an intermediate credit institution. An organization which would lend money on new ventures, giving them, say a three-year chance; if these ventures showed a good record then they would be normal investment for banks.

Private capital wouldn't go into intermediate financing, let the government do it under the same system as the Federal reserve system, says Mr. Kaiser.

But in the end the whole program comes back to labor. A survey of his own workers showed that over 90 per cent of them had saved money for investment and also showed that the thing they wanted to invest in first was "what?" An automobile, the answer was—a home. But there was a condition: some assurance of security—or a job.

I suppose Kaiser has built nearly two-score successful businesses (he said his shipyard had built half the ships in one-half the man-hours they had been built before) and yet real distress came over his face when he began to talk about industry in other lines as yet untouched.

"Think of it," he said, pounding the table, "58 per cent of the freight cars in this country are 20 years old, and the rest are 30 years old. And build new ones. China would be glad to pay us in raw materials we need."

Some one asked him about surplus property disposal and that led him back to ships.

"Turn those we don't need—I'll buy some—over to the countries that have lost all their shipping in the war, at a nominal rental—lend-lease. If you will—with the agreement these countries will buy the type of ship from us they need when they can, and pay us in raw materials."

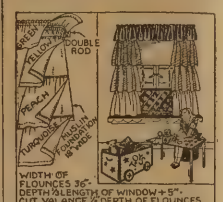

"The trouble with us," he said, "is that we measure values in dollars. It's 15 cents dollars at all that matters, it's labor." (Back to jobs again.)

Finally, he had to hurry away to an appointment. He shook our hands and begged each of us to help get out the vote this year.

"We can make this country roll," he said, and then added with a smile—"of course we'll have to wake up some of the Rip van Winkles."

Gay Windows for Children's Room

Flounced curtains are attractive for any informal room. They are often made all of one material in chintz, swiss or organdy but here four different colors of plain glazed chintz are used. The colors suggested in the sketch blends well and also would be pretty with flowered wallpaper in an older girl's room. Red, white and blue flounces with a red valance would be good looking for a boy's room. All the directions needed for making are given in the sketch.

The lattice screen painted in the curtain colors is a precaution against broken glass in a play room and is also very decorative. A wide shelf with scalloped edge nailed over the window sill gives extra space.

NOTE—The folding play table in this sketch forms the top of the chest when the legs are folded back. The chest and table are made with pattern No. 228 which also gives a full size stencil pattern for the decorations. The curtains in this sketch are from a 4-page book MAKE YOUR OWN CURTAINS which Mrs. Spears has prepared for readers. Pattern and booklet are 15 cents each. Address:

WNU RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point as a second lieutenant Robert Scoff took his wings at Kelly Field and was on his way to England when the war broke out. He is an instructor in California and has been in the States since he had been written up as "The One-Man Air Force." From an egotistical standpoint I felt the thrill that a normal person would, but by this time I was beginning to realize that one man and one ship in this type of warfare meant very little.

In the days that followed I sank barges filled with enemy soldiers, bombed enemy columns and strafed enemy soldiers swimming in the water from the barges I had sunk. But when I went back next day there were more and more Japs surging northward into upper Burma towards India. No, the title was an empty one—for even I, with my egotism of success in combat, knew by now that one man could make no real mark on this enemy that we were fighting. I had the satisfaction, however, of knowing that I was learning things. I had the experience of ten years of military flying, and I knew I was a good pilot. The day was going to come when that knowledge of mine, learned the hard way, would help train the new units that would come from home. There is no substitute for combat. You've got to shoot at people while you're being shot at yourself.

For the time being, though, there was just the one ship, and I nursed it like a baby. Flying it was a relief. I had begun to feel a part of it. Sometimes at night I'd think of my wife and little girl, but never in combat. Sometimes, coming home after striking the enemy, I'd think of them and they seemed far, far away. Towards the last of May, after I'd flown just about two hundred hours ship, I would begin to pull out slowly and count—one count for every thousand feet of my elevation above the target. Then as the ship came to the most level, if I was at two thousand feet when I reached the count of "two," I'd drop the bomb.

I let the four barges get almost to the makeshift wharf; then I dove from my cloud cover. As I got the middle two barges on my gun-sight, I made a mental resolution not to be short—for even if I went over I'd hit the Japs in the town. As I passed three thousand feet the nearest barge went under me, and I began to pull out and count: "One—two—three—pull"—putting in the extra count to insure me against being short. I felt the bomb hit go as I jerked the belly-tank release, and I turned to get the wing out of the way so that I could see the bomb hit.

The five hundred pounds of TNT exploded either right beside the leading barge or between the barge counts to shore and the docks. As the black smoke cleared, I saw pieces of the barge splashing into the river a hundred yards from the explosion. I went down and strafed, but the black smoke was so thick that I could see very little to concentrate on; so I climbed to three thousand feet and waited for the smoke to clear. Then I dove for the two barges that were drifting down the river. I must have put two hundred rounds into each of them. I got one to burning, and from the black smoke it must have been loaded with gasoline.

On my second raid I dropped a five-hundred-pound bomb on the largest building in Homalin, which the British Intelligence reported the next day had been the police station. They said that two hundred Japanese were killed in that bombing, and that between six hundred and a thousand were killed in the series of bombings. Many bodies were picked up about thirty miles down the Chinindwin at Tamu and Sittang. All four of my bombs had done some damage, and I was quite satisfied.

In British Intelligence reports I read that Radio Tokyo had mentioned Homalin. One bombing had taken place, it seems, with very slight damage, and that only to the innocent Burmese villagers, but the Imperial Japanese Army had evacuated Homalin because of the serious malaria that was prevalent there. Anyway, I always like to think that my four trips to Homalin with four 500-pound bombs of good old American Picatinny TNT had something to do with the monkey-men's deciding that the malaria was too bad along the Chinindwin.

My raids with "Old Exterminator" continued through May and into June. Some days I'd climb out of India through the rain clouds of the monsoon and fly on into Burma. The trip back would be a little more worrisome, for I never knew exactly when to let down. Almost every day, however, if I worked my take-off time properly I'd get back from the mission as the storm clouds were breaking, and I'd have a nice, welcome hole to dive through. On other days when I wasn't so lucky, I'd just have to roll over and dive for the valley of the Brahmaputra, and that's where I always came out, or I wouldn't be here to tell about it.

Some of the flights into Burma were just a waste of gasoline; I would see nothing. It follows that I would write off the more exciting ones. There's nothing so monotonous as to fly for four hundred miles with plenty of ammunition, or sometimes for two hundred to three hundred miles with a heavy bomb attached, to find the place to drop it. I'd have to come back then, and gingerly letting down through the dark monsoon clouds, find the 500 pounds of TNT as if I had a crate of eggs aboard. After all, we didn't have bombs to waste.

Early in June I did have one exciting trip. From reports of the ferry pilots I heard that the Japs were building a bridge over the river Umu, some forty miles North of Myitkyina. The very afternoon the report reached me, I went over and strafed the engineers at work on the bridge. And I nearly got shot down, but I came out of the bridge crew in their anti-aircraft with the bridge crew. When I landed at the base I helped the ground crew count the thirty small-calibre holes in my ship. My cap had one hole in it, though luckily it had not been on my head but back in the small baggage compartment of the Kittyhawk. That was pretty bad, though, for it was the only cap I had; and for months I had to wear it with all the felt torn from the crown by the Jap ground-fire. I remember that later one of the young bomber crew men asked Maj. Butch Morgan—"was when we stepped down our ships and the bomb didn't explode—whether or not I'd had that cap on when the bullet went through."

I cursed about the cap and loaded the ship for another run on the bridge. As I came in from another direction, I saw the project very low, I saw bodies of the enemy from the first strafing, but the Japs were still working on the bridge. I strafed the working-party in two passes from different directions, so low that the anti-aircraft couldn't shoot at me effectively.

STATE OF ALABAMA,
CHILTON COUNTY
Probate Court, Oct. 11th, 1944.
Under and by virtue of an order and decree of the Hon. J. Lee Smith, Judge of the Probate Court of said County and State, made and entered on the 11th day of October, 1944, I, Ora Jones, as Administratrix of the Estate of Ben Campbell, deceased, will sell at public outcry to the highest bidder, for cash, in front of the courthouse door, in said County, on the 3rd day of November, 1944, at 12 o'clock, noon the following described property, belonging to Estate of Ben Campbell, to-wit:

The Northeast quarter of Section 4, Township 23, Range 14, in Chilton

CHILTON COUNTY
TO THE CITIZENS OF

Because of the number of people who have questioned me on the streets relative to my husband's (Raymond P. Mims) candidacy for the office of Judge of the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, I would like, through the courtesy of the local papers, to make the following answer:

Since early in the year he declined to run, there is some confusion in the minds of the people. In the early Spring it seemed that the war would be much longer than we now believe. Mr. Mims at that time did not think it right to ask for the office, for he then, as now, did not wish to shirk his military duties.

The same sense of duty had prompted him in January, 1943, to resign his position and volunteer for the army. Now that the Allies have made such great gains, the termination of the European war is in sight, and the regular mustering out of service men will begin.

He believes he will be home the greater part of the next four years. He will continue in his military duties until he is honorably discharged.

He earnestly desires the support of the people that he might serve them when he returns.

Mr. Mims has been outside the U. S. since January of this year. I am speaking in his behalf because it is against military regulations for him to take an active part in the campaign. He is adhering to this regulation as scrupulously as he always adhered to the right in the discharge of his duties as your Judge of the Inferior Court.

With full realization of the fact that I am not a politician, I as his wife, appreciate the permission granted me to ask for your vote and influence. I assure you that Mr. Mims will greatly appreciate your support, and he will, if elected, again give you the best of service.

Respectfully,
MRS. LOIS T. MIMS.

(Quotation from speech accepting Certificate of Appreciation from Chief Signal Officer United States Army)

Though the Southern Bell Telephone Company is now doing the largest volume of business in its history its earnings are at the lowest rate they have been in many years.

This condition has been brought about by the fact that for a number of years the cost of operating the business has increased at a greater rate than have revenues. And while operating costs have been steadily rising, rates charged for telephone service have been reduced.

Users of long distance service alone are saving millions of dollars annually as a result of the rate reductions made during the past several years.

Though operating costs have recently increased, and telephone earnings are less, telephone users are getting more service for less money now than ever before.

OF THIS DEMOCRACY TO EXERCISE YOUR RIGHT

Next Tuesday will bring to us the privilege of exercising our rights as free citizens. This American privilege is one that is not enjoyed by millions of people in other countries and we must safeguard this sacred right by using it. Every right of freedom carries with it a duty and the right to vote, places upon each and every citizen the duty of going to the polls on election day and casting his or her

In this election year we have had so many things to do and so many vital things to think about that we have given less thought to the election and the candidates than we would have done if times had been normal, but we must remember that our system of free government depends upon us, every man and woman, and we must find time to make our decision and vote our convictions on election day. It will not be easy for many of us to find time to go to the polls and we will be tempted to stick to our business and let those who have time to spare do the voting. This is not the course of action for good citizens. Our right of suffrage is a trust for the right of suffrage and we must preserve that priceless heritage by voting when the opportunity arises.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Major Battles Shape As Enemy Attempts to Hold Philippines; Shake Nazis' Grip on Holland

With superfortresses operating from China (1) and U. S. carrier forces ranging in Philippine waters (2), important Jap supply line indicated by heavy broken arrow is threatened. Smaller arrows mark points through which enemy moves material for shipment to homeland to keep war effort going and to supply his troops operating in the far-flung Asiatic theater.

EUROPE:

Holland Battleground

While U. S. forces continued to hit the Germans hard on the central and southern sectors of the 460 mile western front, Canadian and British troops were pressed to clear the Nazis from southwestern Holland and open up the big port of Antwerp for Allied military traffic.

Bitterest fighting in Holland centered about the mouth of the Schelde river, which leads to Antwerp. Here, the enemy occupied two strategic positions, one along the south bank of the Schelde, the other on the islands blocking the entrance to the waterway.

As long as the enemy could hold these positions, so long could he train his big guns on Allied ships trying to move down the Schelde to Antwerp, to unload the vital material also needed by the British forces for their drive around Kleve, at the northern gateway to the industrial Ruhr valley.

Overcoming bitter German resistance, the Canadians gradually wore down the Nazis on the south bank of the Schelde, while Allied bombers joined in the attack on enemy emplacements on the islands, partially flooded from ruptured dikes.

While the Canadians slowly narrowed the German pocket south of the Schelde, the British 2nd army opened a drive to the northeast in an attempt to smash through Nazi lines, race to the sea and cut off the enemy from the rear.

On the central sector of the western front, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's 3rd army pushed to the south of the ring of forts guarding the city of Metz, key to the coal-laden Saar basin, while on the southern end of the battle-line, Lieut. Gen. Alexander Patch's 7th army pushed onward against strong prepared enemy positions on the slopes of the Vosges mountains, blocking entrance to Bavaria.

East of fallen Aachen, Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges' 1st army guided for a smash at the Rhineland, 25 miles distant.

Drive Into East Prussia

In East Prussia, powerful Russian forces massed along an 87 mile front chewed deep into the northern and eastern regions of the province, home of the notorious German military Junkers.

As the Germans fell back before the concentrated might of the Red army, they sought to hold up their lines in the wooded lake country, which von Hindenburg had successfully defended against Russian troops in World War I.

Forced to bring powerful forces into play to guard the southern gateway to Austria, the Germans slowed the Russian steambreaker through Hungary as the Reds smashed within 50 miles of Budapest.

News Briefs

One billion dollars in fuel could be saved each year in the existing dwellings of the United States, according to an estimate in the Bureau of Mines Information Circular. Such measures include caulking of cracks and other openings with modern caulking compounds, insulation, storm windows, weatherstrips, and other means.

Southern coastal waters support a greater variety of fish and shellfish than elsewhere in the U. S.

PACIFIC:

Major Battle

After bitter, but minor, battles in the Jap Pacific outposts, a major engagement shaped in the Philippines, with the enemy throwing in strong aerial and naval forces to back up his ground troops resisting the U. S. invasion of the islands.

Principal land fighting centered on Leyte island, where General MacArthur's forces overran three airfields and sought to bottle up the enemy in the broad Leyte valley lying inland from the coast.

Japanese resistance was ferocious as doughboys, paced by medium tanks, worked through the heavy underbrush to strike into the southern part of the valley at San Pablo, while others repulsed enemy counterattacks farther north to push into the valley beyond Palo.

Having routed the Japs from the principal port of Tacloban in the northeastern section of the island, doughboys fought their way up the coast along the San Juanico straits, and reportedly jumped the narrow waters to land on the big island of Samar.

As doughboys battered forward through the heat and mire on Leyte, important sea battles developed, with U. S. carrier planes taking a heavy toll of Japanese warships, seeking to move in western Philippine waters to bombard American land positions. In an effort to disrupt reinforcements, the Japs sent squads of bombers after units of the huge convoy supplying MacArthur's liberating troops.

CIVILIAN GOODS:

Allot Production

Nearly 800 plants with available facilities and manpower have been authorized to manufacture $152,441,000 of civilian goods within the next year, the War Production board announced.

Included in the list of articles to be produced are automotive parts, building materials, plumbing and heating items, harvesting machinery, vacuum cleaners, household aluminum, lawn mowers, electric irons, bicycles, silverware, furniture, electric lamps and church supplies.

Use of 44,700 tons of carbon steel, 512 tons of alloy steel, 162,154 pounds of brass mill products, 140,379 pounds of wire mill products, 450,148 pounds of foundry products, and 17,395,563 pounds of aluminum has been approved for the output covered by the report.

Textile Control

Primarily because of short production, WPB will have to maintain textile controls after the defeat of Germany, Chairman J. A. Krug announced. Due principally to manpower difficulties, cotton textile output slumped from 11,200,000 yards in 1942 to an estimated 9,900,000 yards this year.

At the same time, Krug revealed, already lowered inventories of rationed shoes will be further depleted with production down 73,000 pairs from estimated needs of 349,000,000.

In an order relating to domestic cooking appliances and heating stoves, WPB permitted manufacture of oven thermostats and burner valves.

Island Paradise

With a population of nearly 17,000,000, the Philippines consist of more than 7,000 islands, big and little, says the National Geographic society.

In all, the area amounts to more than 115,000 square miles—a tropical spread of luxuriant vegetation and extensive forests, with mountains (many of them active volcanoes) rising up some 9,000 feet above the surrounding countryside.

FRANCE:

Recognize De Gaulle

Long the bearer of the banner of the "Free French," General Charles De Gaulle's provisional government was recognized as the proper ruling authority in liberated France, with full power behind the immediate battle.

Effect of the Allies' action was to strengthen the tall, stiff general's hand in dealing with the country's batch of political groups, which previously had been holding out in the hope of attracting recognition in liberated France's affairs.

Upon announcement of the Allies' move, the U. S. undertook to permit the travel of necessary business or professional personnel to France; unfreeze 1 billion dollars of French assets in this country to supply funds for trade, etc.

Purge Collaborators

The scene in Paris' court of justice trying French collaborators could have been torn from the page of a story book.

Wearing a scarlet robe with a white ermine collar, Judge Auguste Ledoux sat on the bench, flanked by six jurors. Battle-worn French coats and white ties and police were also tired in black jackets, blue pants and red caps.

Unkempt and nervous, ex-collaborationist Editor Georges Suarez stood before the bench when Judge Ledoux pronounced the death sentence for contact with the enemy. Suarez's lawyer had argued that since France had concluded an armistice with Germany, the two countries no longer were at war, hence could not be foes.

As Suarez was led away, 1,500 other collaborators in the Paris area awaited trial.

Campaign Platform

Heated issue as the presidential campaign swung into its closing phases was handling of foreign affairs.

Said Candidate Roosevelt: "I will not say to you now, or ever, that we of my party know all the answers. I am certain, for myself, that I do not know how all the unforeseeable difficulties can be met. What I can say to you is this—that I have unlimited faith that the job can be done. And that faith is based on knowledge gained in the arduous, practical and eventful experience of these past years."

Said Candidate Dewey: "To hear (some people) talk, you would think that the United States and its relations in foreign relations . . . The names of Blaine and Hay and Root, of Hughes, Kellogg and Stimson are linked to such achievements as the good neighbor policy, the open door to China, the Hague peace conference, the disarmament conference, the pact of Paris to outlaw war, the World Court, the policy of nonrecognition of conquests . . . Every one of these great necessities of state . . . was a Republican . . ."

Pamphleteering Enlivens CIO's Political Campaign

Political Action Committee Making Wide Use Of Literature in Drive to Get Voters To Polls November 7.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

One thing which stands out in the not-too-breath taking electioneering which is just drawing to a close, is the highly modernized revival of an ancient art of persuasion, called by its instigators, "streamlined" pamphleteering.

You have undoubtedly seen or heard of some of the little booklets which the CIO political action committee and its foster brother, the national political action committee, have produced.

Recently I received from the director of publications, CIO political action committee, eight of its eye-catching pamphlets, which I was informed were being distributed at the rate of 1,500,000 daily in October. Most of them are illustrated in color. They look, as a commercial artist friend who examined them said, "professional." They not only look that way but they are. The CIO has recruited some of the best talent in the country for its research, copy and art staffs.

Pamphleteering has been an important function since even before Samuel Johnson edited the Harleian Miscellany in the middle of the 18th century. But this day and age calls for more than a literary style. It takes punch. The CIO's have provided it.

No. 3 in the "every worker a voter" series, entitled "What Every Canvasser Should Know" was on top of the pile I received. It is vividly illustrated with pictures that have just enough of a suggestive perk to catch your attention.

The sub-heads match. "Canvassing is like love," blurted at the top above a picture of a chap on a sofa with a girl on his lap. He is saying: "How about some political action?" Then follows a couple of paragraphs of brass tacks, common sense on the value of person-to-person selling. And from there on a simple, straightforward "how to do it" talk on getting the vote out, and a lot of sag arguments on continued action as long as—"labor day and enemy" as long as there are those who crush unions . . . as long as there are small farmers being pushed off the land . . . etc.

Three of the other pamphlets are illustrated by Howard Chandler Christy, a top notch, grotesque comic artist who is on the CIO staff. These three books, all filled with technical information in the simplest of language, are thus made more understandable by the artist's touch. "A Woman's Guide to Political Action" and "Radio Handbook."

Attractive Pictures Underscore Points

The pictures are so funny you can't help looking at them and yet they all manage to underscore a point. One sent a shiver down my back. It showed a strange misshapen radio listener, with a face that looked like a cross between a bulldog and a hedgehog, yawning menacingly into one hand while the other dialed off the loud speaker.

Not only did that book tell me to broadcast most effectively but it also told what was the best time on the air and how to get the use of it, to get the most out of it. It gave me bits of information from "can labor get radio time?" to "what assistance can you expect from us (CIO) in preparing your program?"

With ten years of radio experience I say that book is good. And no wonder. Norman Corwin (also on the CIO staff) wrote it.

I might go on indefinitely. There is the red-white-and-blue "People's Program for 1944" with striking photographs and more cartoons; there is another "every worker a voter" series on how to organize your community.

Two more in plain black and white, pretty much "straight" copy, just good, clear photographs, one entitled "The Negro in 1944" and the smaller one with a lovely rural scene framed by a picket-fence and tree-branches, "This is Your America."

The pamphlet on Negroes shows photographs of Negroes in various capacities—workers, medical students, soldiers and sailors, one at some dinner sitting beside President Roosevelt, another in a group around a conference table with other Negroes and whites.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

The women have it all their own way in one Melbourne, Australia, war plant. Now entering its fourth year of operation, this plant is run entirely by women, ages 25 to 40. Most of them were once and are now working outside their homes before they took their present jobs. Among other things the women turn out steering gears for Bren gun carriers and Telescope holders.

Parcel shipments to members of the armed services abroad do not require export licenses, the Bureau of Supplies of the Foreign Economic Administration said in a recent announcement.

The War Food Administration estimates that this year's onion crop will be 45 per cent above the 10-year average, 1933-42.

C. Reese Mullins Sounds The Alarm

Yes it is alarming to me the predicament that our Democratic party of our great county, state and nation are drifting and I might say down hill with all the brakes off. The very thing that the old democratic party has always stood for of the people, for the people, and by the white people to rule and run this great state and nation of ours seems now to have merged with the Republican party and says that it shall be run and ruled by all the people regardless of race, creed or color. It has been truthfully said just a few days ago by one of our distinguished citizens that we are at the cross roads of time. Yes the time has come and is now here for us to stop look and listen. If we take one of these roads it will lead us to higher life and the pursuit of liberty and happiness. But if we take the other road it may lead us to God knows where, possibly into dictatorship and the equalization of all races. I do not believe that God ever intended for this to be. Now our election comes off in just a few more days, and I note there are several amendments to be voted on to our state constitution.

One of which is an amendment to relieve our soldiers from paying a poll tax. This if passed, would of course, relieve all soldiers of all races, from paying a poll tax as you know and further would this not be discriminating against the soldiers that have been turned down for different imperfections, and also the many more young men that have been left at home to till the soil and keep the home fires burning? This would be bound to cause friction among the whites as well as among our whites and colored. I say let our state constitution alone like it is for the time being at least, until we all can study out just what all these amendments mean to us. If you want to change any condition, have an amendment introduced to change the Constitution of the United States to read that this country shall be run and ruled by the white people of America and cut out the clause, that there shall be no distinction as to race, creed or color. Now back to the poll tax amendment to be lifted for the soldiers only. If you are going to abolish the poll tax, abolish it for all and don't leave out thousands of whites to pay, and thousands of negroes to go free. I say let the poll tax law stay just like it is. To abolish it, would be defeating the very purpose for which it was created. Can't you see where we are drifting? As for me I am going to vote against this poll tax amendment, for if passed, in my opinion, would tend to cause more friction among the races. Why doesn't some Christian legislator introduce a bill to abolish the state law for absentee ballot voting, one of the most damnable laws that ever was put on our statute books, by a bunch of designing politicians to perpetuate themselves in office through fraud in elections. I am opposed to the amendment for increasing the terms of sheriffs offices to six years, since we have just recently passed a law, that they may succeed themselves in office. I think if our sheriff here in Chilton County holds out like he is going now that he will have no trouble in being reelected to this office again if he wants it. What we need in the state and in the United States is some legislation passed for the farmer to get a fair deal. You all know they are not getting it and never have.

I have no ill will against any race, creed or color, but I am not willing for the race that was brought over here from Africa and sold to our forefathers for slaves to rise up now and be put on equal with us in having a say as to the election of our leaders, and running our country.

In my opinion to abolish the poll tax for both the white and colored soldiers would open up an avenue for friction in the Democratic party and more fraud in elections by the unscrupulous politicians preying on the colored vote, than any one thing we could do. God knows it is bad enough now. Shame on us Democrats. I hope to live to see our Democratic party merge again back into a great white man's party, of the people, for the people and by the white people, and let the majority rule and not the money and fraud. Now and until then, (with the exception of Franklin D. Roosevelt for President) just at this time on account of the war, I shall vote for the man and not the party.

Yours for white supremacy,
C. REESE MULLINS.

HARRIS-PYLER

The marriage of Miss Marjorie Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Harris of Fort Payne, Ala., and Lt. John W. Plyler, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Plyler, of Clanton, was solemnized at the Methodist parsonage in Clanton at four o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 24th, with the Rev. O. C. Lloyd officiating.

The ceremony was performed before an altar outlined with palms and ferns, interspersed with graceful standards containing specimen chrysanthemums, dahlias and tube roses. Burning white tapers in graduated candelabra formed a background.

Candles were lighted by Miss Betty Ann Harris, sister of the bride, attired in rose; and Miss Doris Plyler, sister of the groom, wearing blue.

The nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Percy Pitts and Mrs. Raymond Mims. Mrs. Mims sang, "I Love You Truly" and "Because." During the ceremony Mrs. Pitts played very softly, MacDowell's "To A Wild Rose".

Petite Paula Nivens, niece of the groom, dressed in a net frock of delicate blue, floor length, served as flower girl.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a deep blue crepe gown fashioned with fitted bodice and heart neck-line. Her accessories were chic brown, and her corsage a lovely orchid.

Attendants were Miss Grace Plyler, sister of the groom, bridesmaid and Judge Victor Heard, best man. Miss Plyler wore a pale gold dress with a harmonizing corsage.

A reception followed the ceremony. Receiving with the bridal couple were their attendants and their parents. The mothers of the bridal couple wore corsages in tones of pink.

The bride's table, covered with a hand-made cloth of fine lace, tiered cake of all white, handsomely embossed and centered with a miniature bride and groom. Together the bridal couple cut the wedding cake. Assisting in the dining room were Misses Doris Plyler, Betty Nell Plyler, Betty Ann Harris, and Mrs. James Hodges.

Mrs. Dutch Nivens, sister of the groom, presided over the bride's book. Lt. Plyler received his wings at Stuttgart, Ark. He returned from England where he was assigned to service with the 8th Air Force last May. He has completed thirty five missions and for meritorious service was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with four Oak leaf clusters.

Out of town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Harris and Miss Betty Ann Harris of Fort Payne and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Harris of Birmingham.

After a short wedding trip Lt. and Mrs. Plyler will be at home in Clanton until November, 4th when he reports to Miami, Fla. for orders.

Victor J. Heard Makes Appeal To Chilton Voters

To the Voters of Chilton County:

Being a candidate for the office of Judge of the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, I take this way of asking for your vote and support.

It is nothing less than wonderful that we live in a country, which can and does hold elections, and give its citizens the opportunity to vote for the man or woman of your choice, to run your government, and to hold your courts, and at the same time successfully carry on a total war. Can you feel that you have done your duty, if you fail to vote on November 7th, next.

Rightfully, our government limits candidates six and tires hence, I cannot see each of you personally. However, I believe that most of you know me, and know my record, as Judge of your Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, if not I invite you to ask any lawyer of the Clanton Bar.

I have not one word to express, except the highest praise of my opponent's patriotism, by his service in the Army during this war. But I do think my record is just as patriotic. In August of 1917, I resigned the office of County Solicitor of your County, entered the Army and served until discharged in Feb. 1919. Shortly after this war started, I again offered my service to the Army and was notified that on account of my age, the Army could not use me at the time. Since the Army could not use me on the fighting front; I have done everything to further the war effort on the home front, the details of which are generally known by most of you.

The term of office of Judge of the Inferior Law Court, is four years, and I am the only one in the county, my opponent and good friend, Sgt. Raymond Mims, in his article in the papers of this County of Oct. 20th last, stated to you, that he served as judge of his Court 3 years, and on one-half months, before entering the Army, thereby failing by only one and one-half months to have served a full term.

If elected by you, I will continue to use all my efforts, to dispatch the business of the Court, and render my decisions according to law and evidence in each case, to the best of my ability. Your vote and influence, will be appreciated.

VICTOR J. HEARD

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for November 5

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

THE CHRISTIAN AND THE RACE PROBLEM

LESSON TEXT—Acts 10:9-16, 34, 35; 17:24-28. GOLDEN TEXT—Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to Him.—Acts 10:34, 35.

Now is the time to really face the race problem. It must be met, or America will see more of the regrettable hatred and violence which has already shown itself.

The only satisfactory answer—the only right answer—can be found in the Word of God. On its principles we must build in solving any problem, and that is especially true with regard to the vital matter of human relationships.

How to Solve the Race Problem I. Pray (10:9).

So often we struggle and plan and work, and last of all we pray. That should be the first thing, not the last. It was as Peter prayed that he saw clearly the need of a changed attitude toward the Gentiles.

Doubtless some Gentiles would have a changed attitude toward the Jews if they really prayed about it. In fact, all of our prejudices based on race, creed, financial or social position would look cheap and untenable if we prayed.

Effortless, efforts toward mutual understanding, education of children (and grown-ups), tolerance, all these are good; but let us not forget to pray, and to do it first. II. Listen to God's Word (10:10-16).

Peter had a special vision, an unusual revelation from God. We no longer need such a direct communication of God's plan and purpose, for we have the written Word of God, and the Living Word has come in the person of Christ.

What we need now is to read and to hear the truth of that Word—and to heed it. Everywhere in the Bible we find the declaration of man's equal rights. We learn that God hates discrimination or prejudice, that no nationality is unclean (v. 15) or unworthy of His grace and of our fellowship.

We know these things are in the Book; why do so many of us fail to listen to its message? We are bound by it whether we listen or not, so why do we not better listen and obey?

III. Be Governed by God's Principles (10:34, 35).

"God is no respecter of persons." Why are we? The expression literally means "receiving a man's face," that is, judging or evaluating him not by what he has proved himself to be, but by his outward appearance, the look on his face. God is interested in man's heart and what is in it (I Sam. 16:7). We should do well to follow His leading and not be controlled by the dress, the race, or the position of a man.

Note the basis of acceptance with God (v. 35), namely, a right attitude toward Him. No matter what a man's color or race may be, the grace of God in Christ Jesus can reach him, and bring him into acceptance with God.

IV. Recognize God's Authority (17:24-28).

God made the world. He rules the world and all that is in it. He is above man, and it is He who gives man the very breath of life.

That being the case, we all stand on the same level—we are equal before Him.

Everything God made was (and is) very good (Gen. 1:31). That means that He knows nothing in His nature of one group being despised and persecuted by another group self-designated as a master race.

All men are of one family (v. 28). It is God's Word. Let us believe it, and be thoughtful and kind toward the members of our own "family." We all know how disgraceful family fights are, and how they hurt. Could it possibly be any different in the family of God? Let's quit the bickering, and together work for God's glory! We can do it if we may.

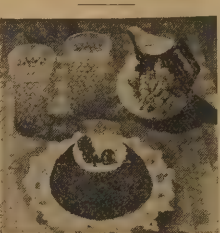

V. Count on God's Nearness (17: 27, 28).

Sometimes children fight and quarrel because they know father and mother are away and will not hear or punish. Well, God is not far away. He is "nearer to us than breathing, nearer than hands and feet." In Him we (and that means all of us) "live and move and have our being."

He is here; let us not act as though He were far away. But above all, let us recognize His nearness as our life and strength, the One who enables us to live, the One who enables us to love, the One who enables us to love Him (Eph. 5:18; Titus 3:3). But we may (and many of us have) become the true children of God by faith in Jesus Christ our Lord (John 1:12). As such, we are all brethren beloved, eager for our fellow's good and for God's glory.

Dress Up Vegetables, Serve Warm Dessert For Cool Weather

Vitamin-rich carrots are hidden in this lovely pudding along with nutritious apples. It's inexpensive, point-wise and penny-wise when you're cooking on a limited food budget.

Hot Delicacies.

As the weather becomes cool and blustery, we must shelve many of our warmer weather food favorites, but there are a host of other good cool weather recipes to take their place.

Nothing is quite so important to a person's well-being as a good, substantial hot food served piping hot, and during the cooler months, everything at a meal may be served hot—soup, entree, vegetables and dessert.

First of all, let's look into the matter of substantial vegetable dishes you can make with home-canned produce. You probably have green beans, corn and tomatoes on hand. Here are ways to dress them up:

Scalloped Green Beans. (Serves 5)

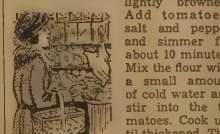

- 2 tablespoons butter
 - 3 tablespoons flour
 - 1 cup milk
 - 1/4 cup liquid drained from beans
 - 1/4 cup finely cut cheese
 - 1/4 teaspoon salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon pepper
 - 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
 - 2 cups drained, canned green beans
 - 1/4 cup buttered crumbs
- Melt butter, add flour and blend well. Add milk slowly and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add liquid from beans, mustard and cheese. Stir until cheese is melted. Add salt and pepper. Place alternate layers of beans and sauce in a buttered casserole, and top with crumbs. Bake in a pre-heated moderate (350-degree) oven for 30 minutes.

Fried Corn. (Serves 5-6)

- 2 cups corn
 - 1 tablespoon chopped onion
 - 3 tablespoons chopped green pepper
 - 2 tablespoons drippings
 - 1/4 teaspoon salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon pepper
 - 3/4 teaspoon water
- Simmer onions and green pepper in melted drippings for 3 minutes. Add corn, water and seasonings. Mix well, cover and cook slowly about 10 minutes.

Savory Tomatoes. (Serves 6)

- 1/2 cup diced bacon or salt pork
 - 1 cup sliced onions
 - 4 cups canned tomatoes
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 teaspoon pepper
 - 4 tablespoons flour
- Try bacon or salt pork until nearly crisp. Add onions and cook until lightly browned. Add tomatoes, salt and pepper and simmer for about 10 minutes. Mix the flour with a small amount of cold water and stir into the tomatoes. Cook until thickened. This may be served as a sauce over meat, fish, cooked rice or spaghetti.

a sauce over meat, fish, cooked rice or spaghetti.

LYNN SAYS

Food Flashes: If a recipe calls for canned fruit, use stewed dried fruit if you don't have the home-canned product.

If you need whipped cream to dress up your favorite dessert, take top of the bottle milk, chill it well, combine with one of the whipped cream mixes and set in a bowl of cracked ice. Beat well. Dip scissors in flour before cutting raisins or other dried fruit. Make bread pudding of leftover cake, cookies and bread. Serve with meringue, lightly browned to dress up the pudding, or orange marmalade, jam or jelly.

Use simple icings for cake or dust lightly with powdered sugar put through a lace paper doily. This saves sugar!

Another hearty vegetable dish is this one made with potatoes and onions.

Scalloped Potatoes and Onions. (Serves 6)

- 6 medium-sized potatoes
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 8-12 pearl onions
- 2 cups milk

Pare and slice potatoes thin, with fancy cutter or paring knife. Butter casserole well. Place layer of potatoes at bottom of casserole, sprinkle with 1 tablespoon flour, 1/4 teaspoon salt and dot with some butter. Cover with a layer of onions and repeat until all potatoes, onion and seasonings are used. Pour scalded milk over top and dot with remaining butter. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until potatoes and onions are tender.

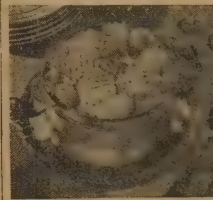

Hot desserts made with whole grain cereals add substantial vitamins and minerals to the diet:

Carrot Pudding. (Serves 9)

- 1/2 cup shortening
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 1/2 cups grated carrot
- 1/2 cup whole bran
- 1/4 cups flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon lemon extract

Blend together sugar and shortening until light and fluffy. Add unbeaten egg yolks.

one at a time, beating well after each addition. Stir in carrots and whole bran. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Stir into first mixture alternately with milk. Add flavoring and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into greased baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 55-60 minutes. Serve warm with desired sauce and top with maraschino cherries.

Tired of serving potatoes the usual way? Try them scalloped with pearl onions, golden brown and piping hot and you have the answer to starchy vegetable problem of a meal.

Apple Crisp Pudding. (Serves 6)

- 4 cups sliced apples
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon cloves
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/4 cup honey
- 1/2 cup shortening
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 1/4 cups toasted bread cubes
- 1 1/4 cups corn flakes

Mix apples with combined sugar, spices and honey. Turn into shallow baking pan. Blend shortening and sugar thoroughly; add eggs and flavoring and beat well. Mix with bread cubes and corn flakes and spread over apples. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees) 40-45 minutes or until apples are tender and top is browned and crisp.

Peach Rice Pudding. (Serves 4)

- 5 or 6 canned cling peach halves
- 2 cups cooked rice
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon or nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon butter

Cut canned cling peach halves into cubelets with scissors to make 1 1/4 cups chopped peaches. Alternate layers of chopped peaches and rice in an oiled casserole, starting with rice. Stir spice into brown sugar, and sprinkle some of mixture over each layer of rice. Make top layer rice and dot with bits of butter; cover casserole. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) for 25 minutes. Serve warm with cream, if desired, but no sauce or cream is actually necessary.

To The Voters of Chilton County:
As Co-chairman of the Democratic Campaign Committee for Chilton County, I wish to urge every voter in this county to go to the polls and vote on November 7, next.

This is the most important election ever held in the Nation's history. The National issues have been amply pre-

I wish to call your attention to the issues as regards your county ticket.
Most of your Democratic Nominees are up for re-election.

You have a very good gauge to judge these men by. Have they been loyal and efficient public servants.

I think that you will agree with me that they have performed the duties

Chilton county has prospered and gone forward during the last ten years of Democratic rule.

I wish to call your attention to the fact that Chilton county on September 30, 1944, had on hand, cash and United States' government bonds in the amount of $188,429.62.

The total debt that your county owed September 30, 1944 was $71-5/9.36. This leaves $116,860.26 on hand if all debts were paid.

And too, October 1, 1944, more money began pouring into your county treasury.

I say, Chilton County has done well under Democratic rule. Those are facts and figures and can not be disputed as they are of record in your Court House.

A healthy and prosperous Chilton County is your big local issue and the above facts decide this issue for you.

Invasion Scene, Act II

Yesterday was Act I.

Same beachhead scene. Same — except today there are no screaming bombs, no burning tanks, no convulsive shells tearing big holes in the ground. Same scene, but today the guys up there on the beach put on the show.

They're ready for Act II. They've pushed the enemy back a few miles. Here comes Act II. Here comes the U.S.O.
Camp Show!

Our boys need this show. They need it desperately, like starving men need food. For an hour or two they'll go back to America . . . back to Broadway, Hollywood, Main Street . . . back a thousand miles from this beachhead. They need to laugh, to forget.

They need it, understand?

Thanks to the folks back home, U.S.O. Camp Show units have played in every combat zone, often immediately behind the front lines. More than 90 units are playing the "Foxhole"; more than 80 units appear regularly at camps and hospitals in the western hemisphere.

It costs money to operate the world's biggest theatrical circuit. Even though most stage and screen stars donate their services without charge, it still costs a lot of money to send hundreds of other performers. Every cent must come from part of the money you give to the Alabama War Chest.

U.S.O. with its 3,000 clubs and units that make a "home away from home" for our fighting men is one of 22 war service and relief agencies which share your gift to Alabama's War Chest. The dollars you will give perform missions of mercy on six continents, in 91 countries and major geographical areas.

Victory will bring more—not fewer calls for aid. Give once for all who are fighting desperately for victory. Give generously now—at least one day's pay if you work for wages —much more if you have more to give.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens, affect-

Writes Voters TO THE VOTERS OF CHILTON COUNTY

The time for the election is near at hand and I have seen and talked with a great number of the voters regarding my race for Commissioner from the Fourth District. I have received much encouragement from all sections of the county, but have not been able to cover the county on account of gas shortage.

I have tried to do the very best I could with what I had to do with. We all know that labor is scarce and it is hard to get road machinery, but with all of this the roads have been kept in fairly good condition. You will notice from the report published in The Chilton County News, that the financial condition of the county is in good shape. The County has the money and just as soon as the war is over, and we can get machinery, materials and labor, your present officials have planned an extensive road building and paying project, and have the money with which to match
State and Federal Aid.

I have worked with the officials in our county and have tried to accommodate the people whenever possible. I feel that a public official is a public servant and that he should try to please a majority of the people at least. We all know that it is hard to please all of the people all of the time, but I have done my best. I have worked without malice, without prejudice and without hatred toward anybody and I feel that a great majority of our people know this.

I wish to say this to you as my last thought, I feel like I am better prepared to serve the people of the county now than I have ever been.
I know the needs of our people and if you see fit to elect me on November 7th, I will make every effort to discharge my duties, as your commissioner better than I have ever done.

I am,
Sincerely your friend,
J. MONROE PARRISH

Give Once for All!

A million acts of kindness here at home—around the world—will be performed by dollars that you give this year to the Alabama War Chest. Nearly half of your donation goes to USO that makes a "home away from home" for boys in our armed services. Some part will provide comforts for our fighting men who are prisoners of the enemy. Some will go to the United Seamen's Service, which maintains clubs for those who convoy our ships. And some will be distributed among the nineteen agencies that aid the stricken peoples of our Allied Nations. Give ONCE FOR ALL these agencies as much as you would give if EACH solicited your aid. Let's show our boys that we—brave fight for early and complete victory.

FOLKS & THINGS
ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Hooryay, We got a sandwich Friday night after the football game. We contacted some of the boys on the team and outfitted ourselves in shoulder pads, shin guards and a good tough headgear and were off. We started an end run from the curb in front of the Bus Station and made 3 yards to the screen door. There we were held for two downs. A quarterback sneak took us to the ticket booth, just on the inside of our objective (which was the sandwich counter) but a hard body block from a two-hundred pound blond stopped us cold. Our next try was a short kick to somebody's shin and caused a loud shriek for which we drew a penalty, and nearly a black eye. But with the tune of our old Alma Mater ringing in our ears we were determined to reach pay-dirt without losing the ball. We went into a huddle, we came out of the huddle, we had been separated by an opponent who also wanted a sandwich or a chocolate milk or sum-pink. Signals were called: "ham on rye, hup, ham on rye, hup, then everything went black. The next thing we knew, "Mitch" Williams was bending over us pouring cold water in our face and holding a sandwich he was serving at one of the booths. We grabbed the sandwich. Hooryay, we got a sandwich after the football game.

Another thing you hadn't thought of, we'll wager. That the only thing that man eats that doesn't have to be seasoned or changed in any way is the sweet potato. Mr. J. T. Franklin of Clanton Route 3, reminded us of that this week. We had never thought of it before. Put it in the oven, bake it, take it out and eat it. No salt, no pepper, no sugar, no nothing.

More sweet potato: Did you ever hear of a sweet potato exploding when put in the oven to bake? Our good friend Jeff Pilgreen tells us that the other day the better-half was baking some and there was a terrific explosion (terrific for a potato) in the oven. Upon examination they found the peeling of the potato in the pan, but the potato was scattered all over the inside of the oven. Wattness.

THE LETTER SOMEBODY DIDN'T WRITE

(From the Revell to Taps Column in the Shelby County Democrat).
It ain't the heat nor the blistered feet,
Nor the meals of Spam in place of meat,
Nor the butter like lard, nor our turn at guard.
None of these is one-half as hard
As the jolt we get, after all the sweat,
And a cheery voice says, "No mail yet."

And it ain't the breeze, like a dragon's sneeze,
That peels the hide and weakens the knees,
Nor the dirt in your gun, nor the broiling sun—
These are 'forgotten when day is done,
But our voices fall and our faces pale
If we draw a blank when its time for mail.

We can stand the flies and the sand in our eyes,
The orders, the rumors, the truth and the lies,
The mosquitoes swarm and the water warm,
And the words that reek of color-form.
What takes out flight and makes throats tight,
Are the letters that somebody didn't write.

The past week the heating units on the electric pot of our type setting machine burned out necessitating a telegram to New York for new parts. During the time it takes now to replace things like that our machine was out of commission. Gene Wyatt at the Union Banner came to our rescue and graciously gave us the use of his machine at night that we might publish last week's issue of the News on time. For this we are deeply appreciative.

BETA CHAPTER OF DELTA KAPPA GAMMA MEETS

The Alpha Beta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma met Thursday afternoon, October 12th, at 5:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Laura Little with Mrs. Gertrude Calloway as associate hostess.

The president, Mr. Ruth Waters, presided. During the session an impressive initiation service was given welcoming into the society, Miss Bonnie Clyde Griffin and Mrs. Lois T. Mims. Mrs. Verta Mae Langston from Athens Omnicron Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma was welcomed as a transfer member to the Beta Chapter of Clanton.

Plans of the state convention which will be held in Birmingham November Fourth were discussed. Many members plan to attend this meeting which will convene at the Tutwiler Hotel.

Mrs. Little's home was beautifully arrayed throughout with red roses and golden autumn flowers. Refreshments were served to fifteen members.

AMENDMENT FOUR EXPECTED TO GET BIG VOTE

Constitutional Amendment No. 4, placing terms of sheriffs on the same six-year footing as other elected county officers, will be ratified by an overwhelming vote in the general election next Tuesday in the opinion of political forecasters.

Carrying the endorsement and support of almost every agency concerned with better law enforcement and backed by leaders in the Alabama legislature and Probate Judges in practically every county, Amendment No. 4 seems assured of almost unanimous approval at the hands of voters.

The office of sheriff is a constitutional office, and any change with respect to the terms thereof must of necessity be by constitutional amendment. At present Judges of the Circuit Court, Judges of Probate, Clerks of the Circuit Court and Tax Assessors and Tax Collectors hold office for a term of six (6) years, and the proposed Sheriff's Amendment to be voted upon by saving taxpayers the expense of interim elections.

Pointing out that law enforcement is tending to become a more and more specialized profession, demanding trained and experienced leaders, Attorney General William McQueen declared that the consensus of opinion of leading law enforcement agencies and authorities is that the best interests of law enforcement can be served by extending sheriffs' terms as the amendment provides.

For Board Of Education

W. A. GULLEDGE

The Board of Education has charge of our public school system and should be made up of capable, progressive citizens. The Board of Education not only has charge of the school program for our children, but is also the largest business organization in the county in terms of dollars spent each year. Good business men should be chosen to direct our largest county organization and Mr. Gulledge has proven his business ability.

He has served one term as Board Member and is seeking re-election on his record. He has studied schools from every angle and is capable of serving Chilton County in this important place.

MORAL ECHOES
Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

"You see that rose?" Said the gardener to me, "It is too richly fed, and I have got to deprive it of its food, that I may bring it to a richer flowering." Then the gardener started taking away the plant food and the light from the rose, and soon it was dropping its leaves and drifted patiently toward death. When it stood stripped of its leaves, then the gardener feed the rose with light and soil, and new life came into every bud, and a wealth of flowers came upon the bush as had never been seen there before. Often does this same thing come true in the gardening of God, as He deals with our soul life. Many who vaunt themselves with pride and show, must be forced by the Divine hand to undergo pruning that a new Divine bloom may appear.

On the rocky coast of Maine stands a lighthouse built on a rock that is far from shore. A man and his wife were placed there to keep the light burning, and the only time they ever saw any one, was at two months interval when a relief boat would come to bring them supplies. One wintry day the husband went out to a boat in distress and the wife saw him go down with those who perished that day. What did she do? she kept the light trimmed and burning, knowing that her private sorrows must not extinguish the light that would guide others to safety. It was three weeks before the relief boat came, but during that time she stood by her post. She sorrowed, but the lights burned on. Sooner or later sorrow is going to come to you. When it comes, stay by your post of duty. Do not let the light of your life go out because you have sorrow.

When a bone is broken and the physician knows how to link the broken places, it is said that when the healing takes place, that the bone is stronger there than it was before the break.

At the age of 23 Dr. Moon was stricken with total blindness. When all efforts had failed to restore his sight Dr. Moon prayed, "My God I thank Thee for the talent of blindness; may I so invest it that at the coming of the Lord Jesus, He may receive His own with usury." At once the good doctor set about using his cultured brain for the good of others. And out of his efforts has come the Moon system for the blind that we all know about. This system has been translated into five hundred languages, thousands of blind people have been able to find their way to life and heaven. How blessed it is when one can receive his afflictions and use them as a stepping stone to broader usefulness. Dear heart, refuse to be discouraged.

I was born with weak eyes, and from the days of infancy I needed glasses to support my eyes. When I went away to college I read a great deal. As a result my eyes grew tired and gave a lot of trouble. On going to an oculist I was told to let my eyes rest. I must take them from the page and let them fall upon the distant hills. No wonder that our soul vision is hurt. We keep the eye of the soul on the things that are before us. We look at the things of this world so long and so earnestly, until we forget that there are hills far away. Your soul life will become stupid when you see nothing but the work at hand. Look up and look away to the Everlasting Hills, and rest your vision in Him.

Cardul is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:
1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion, thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.
2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

A letter From
R. L. Ousley

Editor of Chilton County News:
Clanton, Alabama

Dear Sir:

I want to urge that all qualified voters go to the polls on November 7th and vote.

I feel like with the experience I have had, I would be better able to serve the people and that we will be able to go forward in much needed public improvements. As you know we have been greatly handicapped and actually marking time during the past four years. We have much contemplated and beneficial improvements we are looking forward to, and we hope to commence the construction of hard surface roads to connect with our main highways.

Due to the shortage of gasoline and for other causes, I have not made a canvass of the entire county, and I haven't felt that this was necessary. I have been in office for two terms and the people of the county know me and what has been accomplished by the Court of County Commissioners, and I am willing to submit my right to this office on my past record. Needless to say, I would appreciate your vote on November 7th, and it would be my pleasure to serve you another term.

Respectfully,

HUGHES RALLY WELL ATTENDED

The service which was held at Poplar Springs last Sunday in honor of the Rev. J. D. Hughes was a great success.

The opening song was led by the Rev. L. Dewey Hughes, and prayer was offered by Rev. M. Lockhart. Some interesting remarks were made by the Chairman Rev. W. O. Rich. He insisted that all actions for the day be motivated by love.

The following ministers brought messages during the day: J. A. Raines, K. U. Hull, J. D. Hughes, L. Dewey Hughes, N. E. Cook, J. A. Thomas, G. C. Williams, W. W. Robinson, E. C. Hand and M. Lockhart. Brother Riley Robinson also made a very interesting talk which was enjoyed by all present. Uncle Riley is above ninety years of age. He said that he had been a Christian 76 years and was still growing in grace.

Prof. W. M. Devaughn and his children spent the day and rendered several impressive numbers that made the service very interesting throughout the entire day service. Brother Devaughn also made some very interesting remarks concerning the privilege of opportunity to return back to the old home county and mother church for such occasion.

The final count revealed that eleven ministers attended the service during the day. There would have been more had they not been providentially hindered.

The Rev. J. D. Hughes was licensed to preach in the year 1884, and was married and ordained to the full gospel ministry in the year of 1886. He was licensed at New Prospect church in Shelby County and ordained at Salem church in Coosa county. He has been preaching for 60 years.

An offering was taken for the old pioneer preacher and the people gave $38.59. An offering of $596 was also given for other expenses.

The Devaughn quartette sang for the closing number, "Land of dreams come true" and the Rev. G. C. Williams gave the benediction.

The meeting will be held next year on the 5th Sunday in September.—M. Lockhart, Sec.

ATTENTION CHILTON VOTERS.

On Tuesday of next week it will be your DUTY to go to the polls and vote for a County Treasurer. The financial report of Chilton County as of October 1st, 1944 shows total assets, consisting of Cash, U. S. Bonds and Bank time certificates, of $188,429.62. This is a lot of money in any language. Yet this sum will be increased several thousand dollars when 1944 taxes and licenses are collected and turned over to the County Treasurer.

So, I say, it is your DUTY to go to the polls and cast YOUR ballot for the man who you think can and will best safeguard this vast amount of public funds.

May I earnestly solicit your vote.

Amendment 4
Expected To Get Big Vote

Places Sheriffs' Terms
On Same Footing With Other County Officers

Constitutional Amendment No. 4, placing terms of sheriffs on the same six-year footing as other elected county officers, will be ratified by an overwhelming vote in the general election next Tuesday in the opinion of political forecasters.

Carrying the endorsement and support of almost every agency concerned with better law enforcement and backed by leaders in the Alabama legislature and Probate Judges in practically every county, Amendment No. 4 seems assured of almost unanimous approval at the hands of voters.

The office of sheriff is a constitutional office, and any change with respect to the terms thereof must of necessity be by constitutional amendment. At present Judges of the Circuit Court, Judges of Probate, Clerks of the Circuit Court and Tax Assessors and Tax Collectors hold office for a term of six (6) years, and the proposed Sheriffs' Amendment to be voted upon by the people in November next, simply extends the terms of sheriffs to a like period and thereby places all of such officers on an equal footing as to terms of office. Seeking to make sheriffs' terms the same length as those of other county officers, the 1943 legislature passed a bill by the necessary two-thirds majority submitting the so-called Sheriffs' Amendment to a vote of the electorate on November 7th. Ratification of this amendment will make terms of important state and county officers expire at the same time, thus saving taxpayers the expense of interim elections.

Pointing out that law enforcement is tending to become a more and more specialized profession, demanding trained and experienced leaders, Attorney General William McQueen declared that the consensus of opinion of leading law enforcement agencies and authorities is that the best interests of law enforcement can be served by extending sheriffs' terms as the amendment provides.

Att'y-Gen. Says Amendment 4
Will Be Aid To Law Enforcement

Head of State Legal Department Urges Citizens to Vote For Amendment 4.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Support for Amendment No. 4, extending terms of Alabama sheriffs from four to six years, came today from William McQueen, state attorney general, who characterized the proposed constitutional amendment as a measure in behalf of better law enforcement in Alabama.

"The office of attorney general has made a careful study of the proposed constitutional amendment extending terms of sheriffs from four to six years," Attorney General McQueen said. "It is the practically unanimous opinion of leading law enforcement agencies and authorities on crime prevention, with whom my office has consulted, that a six-year sheriff's term will result in better law enforcement. A term of six years affords to sheriffs better opportunities to learn procedures and technicalities with which they must be familiar to perform efficiently the duties of their office. Under the existing five-year term, many sheriffs have to spend about six months campaigning. Practically a year is needed to become versed in their duties. By the time they have acquired the needed knowledge and experience, sheriffs must once again devote a portion of their time to campaigning for the office. This is unfair to them and opposed to the best interests of law enforcement in their counties. The proposed constitutional amendment puts our sheriffs on an equal footing as to their terms of office with the Judges of our Circuit Courts, Probate Judges, Circuit Court Clerks, Tax Collectors and Tax Assessors, all of whom are elected for six-year terms. "Being concerned with efficient law enforcement in Alabama and all measures designed to achieve that end, I feel it my responsibility to urge our citizens to serve the cause of law enforcement by giving their support to Amendment No. 4 in the general election November 7th."

Naval Victories Pave Way for Assault on Japs' Inner Lines; Reds Press Back Nazis in East

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Natives on Leyte island in Philippines walk through their smoldering village, caught in cross-fire of U. S. and Japanese fighting.

EUROPE:

Russ Press Nazis

Fighting with their backs to the wall against masses of Russian men and material, the Germans doggedly slowed the Red's march through East Prussia and Hungary.

In Holland, however, the enemy withdrew from the southwestern portion of the country, with only minor pockets of resistance remaining along the Scheide river, where they had successfully blocked the Allies' free use of the big inland port of Antwerp.

In East Prussia, the Germans only succeeded in slowing up the Russian charge, originally paced by over 600 tanks and swarms of bombing planes, after the Reds drove 14 miles within the province on the road toward the capital of Königsberg. As the drive slowed, there were evidences in the Nazi home army's fevered defense preparations in the huge concrete bunkers used to impede the Russian advance.

In an effort to divert German strength, strong Russian forces opened up an offensive along the Narew river above Warsaw, making small penetrations in bitter fighting.

Gaiety Vanishes

In Hungary, great battles raged along the Tisza river, 50 miles from the capital of Budapest, with the heavy rumbling of big guns plainly heard in the city.

Famed for its spas and sidewalk cafes, Budapest took on a somber tone, with the German DNB news agency reporting: "There is no more gypsy music. Everything is rationed. Labor battalions of tens of thousands of men have started to work on entrenchments."

Even though some Hungarian generals were reported to have gone over to the Russians after Regent Horthy's ill-fated plea for an armistice, the Hungarian army remained in the fight by Germany's side, although the Germans themselves were compelled to throw in large forces to bolster sagging Axis lines in the southwestern part of the country.

According to military advices, the German evacuation of the Aegean Islands, Greece and lower Yugoslavia was said to have gained some 18 divisions, or about 250,000 men. The enemy appeared to have withdrawn the major bulk of these forces despite the pressure applied against his communication lines by Tito's Partisans, later aided by Russian and Bulgarian troops.

Escape Entrapment

Their position jeopardized by increasing Allied pressure, the major portion of the enemy force managed to withdraw, only leaving behind the isolated units on both banks of the Scheide. As the Allies brought their full weight to bear on these units, they were slowly compressed.

In Italy, the Germans increased their artillery fire in an effort to further slow up Fifth army forces bogged in the mountain mud. Indicative of the Nazi's determination to hold on to the Po valley throughout the winter was their planting of more mines, and their stringing of more barbed wire, across the battle-front.

TIRES:

Increase Quotas

With an increase of 250,000, the nation's total tire quota for November was set at 1,850,000, of which 880,000 are for passenger cars; 570,000 for tractor-implement machinery; and 390,000 for trucks and buses.

According to OPA, the quota of passenger tires should satisfy non-Limited holders up to mid-November, replacement needs of Limited holders by the end of the month.

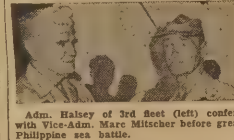

PACIFIC:

Japs Humbled

With 60 of her warships sunk or damaged, Japan's once proud imperial navy no longer dominates far Pacific waters, having given way to a U. S. fleet which is standing prepared for a grand assault upon the enemy's inner defenses.

Staking a major portion of their navy on a brazen attempt to smash General Douglas MacArthur's supply lines to the Philippines, the Japs suffered approximately 24 warships sunk, 13 probably sunk and 23 damaged by U. S. surface vessels and aircraft, which met three enemy forces in the vicinity east of Leyte.

Their supply lines secured, General MacArthur's troops continued their drive on Leyte, crushing surviving enemy soldiers onto the mountainous western end of the island. In establishing their beach-heads along the eastern coast, and then driving inland into the strategic Leyte valley, U. S. doughboys inflicted 24,000 casualties on the Japs.

In assessing the full effect of the U. S. victory in the second naval battle of the Philippines, authorities said that the enemy's losses in ships sunk and damaged seriously impaired his ability to resist the American advance for months to come.

Because Japanese repair yards already were taxed to capacity before the latest battle, damaged enemy ships will have to await a long turn before reconditioned for action, it was said.

'Situation Unfavorable'

Speaking at a mass meeting in Osaka, Premier Koiso urged the Japanese people to increase their productive effort, declaring: "... officers and men had to die for their nation because we did not send them sufficient material ..."

Since the Japs were compelled to abandon their outer defense ring, Koiso said, the situation had become "regrettably unfavorable."

CHINA:

Highlights Crisis

Impatient with Chiang Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's slowness in cooperating in the unification of the country and the rehabilitation of its battered armies, and having incurred the Generalissimo's displeasure for pressing for quick action, Gen. Joseph W. ("Vinegar Joe") Stilwell has been recalled to the U. S.

Stilwell's removal once again brought the critical Chinese situation into full light, with latest accounts stressing the political difficulty existing in the country between the Generalissimo's government and the northern Communists, and the Generalissimo's seeming desire to save his military forces to maintain his control after the war.

Ever since coming in command of the China-Burma-India theater area in 1942, Stilwell encountered difficulties in seeking to develop the Chinese war effort, being hampered by inadequate authority, the inefficient handling of the command, and finally, the Generalissimo's personal hostility to him.

MISCELLANY

No less than 140,000,000 ducks—or 100,000,000 above the whole duck population of the 1935-37 period—will fly south during the hunting season, Ducks Unlimited, the national sportsman's organization, reported.

Only American organization to go into Canada to increase the duck crop by selling life insurance on breeding areas. Ducks Unlimited has revealed that waterfowl production in its rehabilitated Canadian marshes has increased 15 per cent.

LEND-LEASE:

Food Shipments

Except for a slight increase in milk products, lend-lease shipments of food during the first nine months of 1944 were smaller than in the corresponding period last year, the Foreign Economic administration announced.

Biggest change was in beef and veal, the FEA said, with less than 1 per cent of the U. S. supply lend-leased compared with 1.1 per cent in 1943. Shipments included 12.1 per cent of the supply of U. S. eggs; 15.9 per cent of edible fats and oils; 6.9 per cent of canned fruits and juices, and 10.3 per cent of canned fish.

At the same time, the FEA said U. S. forces overseas received larger quantities of food from Britain, Australia and New Zealand under reverse lend-lease.

SURPLUS PLANTS:

Government Policy

Even as the U. S. government sought to prevent the fostering of monopoly in the disposal of surplus war plants, the British moved to establish control over facilities erected during wartime with public funds.

U. S. action was reflected in the justice department's declaration that it considered the Aluminum Company of America a monopoly, and, as such, ineligible to purchase three of the 60 million dollar government-owned plants which it has operated during the war.

In Britain, the government announced that it would lease, but not sell, the 1,000 factories it constructed to meet the wartime emergency. Government-owned plants would turn back to private ownership plants taken over for war work, with the questions of compensation for improvements, or markoffs for depreciation, left open.

DOCTORS:

Army Cuts Call

With approximately 40 per cent—or 60,000—of the nation's physicians in the services and veterans' administration, the army announced it will not recruit any more doctors from civilian ranks, meeting the needs from graduates of its specialized training program and individuals now being processed.

Because expansion in personnel and stepping up of Pacific operations have increased demand for medical officers, the navy, on the other hand, announced that it must add at least 3,000 more physicians to its present rolls of around 13,000.

In addition to the navy, it was revealed that the federal security agency and the veterans' administration also are seeking additional doctors.

AGRICULTURE:

Market Prices

With farm sale of spring pigs rising rapidly, hog prices took a spill in recent markets, with the average at Chicago dropping 40 cents in one day to $14.25 per hundredweight.

Countering the drop in the hog market, however, was a steady cattle market, with the bulk of steers selling around $16. Sheep and lambs brought steady prices.

As 141,000 pigs, including about 115,000 spring pigs, moved to 20 leading markets October 31, large hogholders were reported at some 7 per cent increase in the week's trading. In the previous week, 113,000 hogs had been shipped.

With higher prices for livestock and livestock products balancing a decline for crops, the general level of farm prices stood at 194 per cent of the 1909-14 figure in mid-October, the department of agriculture reported.

At the same time, the USDA said, prices farmers paid for commodities were 176 per cent of the 1910-14 level. Including prices paid, interest and taxes, the parity index stood at 170 for the fifth consecutive month, with the average for all farm commodities still 14 per cent above parity. Commodities still below parity included wheat, oats, barley, rye, grain sorghums, hay, peanuts and eggs.

While the all-crop index fell to 188 of the 1909-14 level, livestock and livestock products prices rose to 192. At 177, the feed price index jumped 7 per cent over mid-October in 1943.

STOCKS:

Dividends Up

Reflecting the war boom, dividends on common stocks listed on the New York Exchange showed a 7 per cent increase in the first nine months of this year over 1943, totaling 14 billion dollars.

Pace-setters were amusement stocks, which showed a 35 per cent increase; automotive, up 28 per cent; rubber, up 26 per cent; petroleum, up 14 per cent, and aviation, up 13 per cent.

War-Making Powers Issue In Peace Organization

Big Question Is Whether Congress Can Delegate Function to U. S. Representative On World Council.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

When the last election bell is collected, when the echoes of the windy argument have died on the November breeze, a lot of people will believe that when they cast their ballots on November 7 they were deciding the question of whether America was to join an effective world organization to preserve peace.

Not at all. It was plain long before the election that the question of whether the United States was willing to join an international organization with teeth in it did not depend on the candidate selected.

The day in October that Senator Ball, Republican of Minnesota, announced that he would vote for Franklin Roosevelt, and not for Dewey for President, we had a press and radio conference in his office in the Senate Office Building. As we crowded five deep around Ball's desk, somebody remarked: "Ball ought to have used the caucus to keep his head down like a bull, instead of his chin out like a bulldog, the young, former newspaper-side whether he would support Dewey until he had heard both presidential candidates speak on the subject. He listened to two one-half-hour speeches by Dewey and then, after the one by Roosevelt before the Foreign Policy association, said he would support Roosevelt because Roosevelt met "squarely and unequivocally the two vital and controversial issues on which the isolationists kept us out of the League of Nations and will fight our entry into the United Nations security organization." He insisted that the United Nations organization be formed without delay, before hostilities cease, and that it be granted power to use military force against future aggressors without requiring individual approval of each member nation.

Senator Ball went on to say that Governor Dewey "has opposed delay but has not squarely met the second vital issue. He has spoken for a strong international security organization, but in each speech has so worded his commitment that both internationalists and isolationists could find comfort and support in what he said."

I quote that paragraph at length since it is quite possible that you have not seen it in print—I copied it from Ball's own statement—and I think a great many more people, some of whom supported Mr. Roosevelt, forgot that he was going the "whole hog" and that "whole hog" in Mr. Ball's language and the language of those who are going to fight for this organization in the congress, may mean more than some people realize. It shouldn't to anyone who heard or read Mr. Roosevelt's speech and took seriously the political speeches seriously. The President said the American member of the Security Council of the United Nations, which would be made up of eleven member nations, should go to fight for this organization in the congress, with authority to act."

Constitutional Procedure Involved

This is generally interpreted as meaning: (1) Congress would pass a law stating that if the American representative on the Security Council felt the vote of the American representative of the American military forces (with those of other members of the organization) should be used against an aggressor he had the power to commit this government to support the vote of the American representative, to use American (and other) military forces against an aggressor.

As to point two, if the Russians had the choice as expressed in the conferences at Dumbarton Oaks this clause would not be effective—they argue that no step should be taken by the council without the unanimous agreement of the great powers. In the American words, the single vote of the representative of Britain, Russia, China and the United States, at least, could veto any step proposed.

But the representatives of Great Britain and the United States at Dumbarton Oaks said that they were both willing to make majority rule the basis of action. It is conceivable that if Russia were wholeheartedly in the organization, she would come around to that view.

So far the question of the constitutionality of a law which would delegate to the American delegate to the Security Council with the necessary powers, has not been debated. The New York Times points out that the Constitution designates to congress the union of power to declare war, except when American territory is invaded; but does not state that the use of force cannot be delegated. In any case the chief question is whether the people will have the courage to venture into this new realm wherein the United States government would accept the majority wishes of a group of world states, just as we accept the wishes of the majority of congress.

Then the BH quartet, again generously assisted, set forth to keep the foreign relations issue out of the campaign. This was done with a fair degree of success but not entirely to suit Senator Ball. He arose and declared that he wouldn't de-man who has served four years in the senate (two years by appointment) reminds me a little of Wendell Willkie.

There were a number of hard-boiled, anti-internationalists among the reporters in the room and some were a little cynical in their attitude. But they agreed that Ball was sincere, that he was taking the step he took not because of, but in spite of, politics. Of course, he comes from a state where they aren't quite so adamant about party lines and he won't be up for election himself for four years anyway. When he was asked if he hoped to run again on the Republican ticket he said he did but that depended on what attitude the party in Minnesota took.

All during that conference there wasn't a word said about the issue behind the issue—the step which this country has to take, the decision it has to make regarding our own policy toward extending the powers of our government to force the use of our military forces to enforce world peace.

And think it might be well to take up by point the Ball-Roosevelt-Dewey controversy and see just what issues are involved.

Issues FDR Met

Issues Sincerely

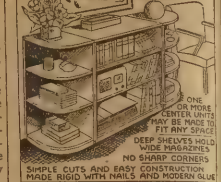

In the first place, it will be recalled that Ball was one of the "B2-H2" combination which carried on the bipartisan foreign relations committee to act on a resolution favoring the creation of an international organization to preserve the peace. "B2-H2," if you have forgotten, stood for Ball, Republican, Ohio; Hatch, Democrat, New Mexico; and Hill, Democrat of Alabama.

Then the BH quartet, again generously assisted, set forth to keep the foreign relations issue out of the campaign. This was done with a fair degree of success but not entirely to suit Senator Ball. He arose and declared that he wouldn't de-

Unit Shelves Easy For You to Build

WHETHER you have a house of your own or whether you move often, unit bookshelves are the answer to many a problem. They may be scaled to fit almost any space; you may add to them as needed and they may be shifted from one place to another according to your mood. They may start in the living room and end in the children's room or in the kitchen. The units may be divided, multiplied or used in various combinations.

You need no special skill make the three units shown. These well proportioned shelves were designed especially for amateur homecrafters to make with the simplest tools. A compass saw for the five-foot units will cut the curved shelves of the end units. Because the shelves were designed by a homemaker, a simple method of constructing them with no open dust space at the bottom was worked out and special thought was given to the width and depth of shelves so that they would have the maximum usefulness and still be made of stock sizes of lumber.

NOTE: Pattern 270 gives a full size pattern for the curved shelves of these bookcases and large diagrams with dimensions for the five-foot units. Also a complete list of materials required and illustrated step-by-step instructions for the construction of the units. To get this pattern, send 15 cents with name and address and send direct to:

Faithful Tibetans Carry Prayer Wheels to Spine

Every faithful Tibetan Buddhist carries a prayer wheel, which he constantly spins round. The Tibetans believe in constant prayer, saying that the more they pray the more likely are their prayers to be heard.

So inside every prayer wheel are hundreds of tiny pieces of paper, each one bearing the prayer of a Tibetan. The prayer is written in Tibetan, which is interpreted, means "O, Jewel in the Lotus." Every time the wheel is spun round, all the pieces of paper rotate, so that each turn means that hundreds of prayers are being sent to Heaven.

All over the country there are wayside shrines, built on a stone platform. Hangings from the sides of the platform are scores of large prayer wheels, and pilgrims praying at these shrines just wheel round spinning each wheel, releasing thousands of prayers.

Amateur Magician's

Needle Trick Misses
BARTLESVILLE, OKLA.—Richard Yeager, 19, amateur magician, went to a hospital from the effects of sleight-of-hand tricks. While giving a demonstration of "illusory" needle swallowing, Yeager became confused with his hocus-pocus. Result: Physicians were called upon to remove the steel silver.

Risked Health in Bold Experiment

Two Doctors Volunteered for Study of 'Bends.'

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Two doctors who voluntarily exposed themselves in the interests of science to repeated excursions into thin air at 42,000 feet simulated altitude, developed active tuberculosis of the lungs. This tuberculosis, it was reported by the Aero Medical Association, was not caught directly in the altitude experiments, but was caused by thin air reopening old, long healed tubercular spots in their lungs.

The report was made by Drs. Alvan L. Barach, Artell E. Johnson and Colter Rule of the college of physicians and surgeons, Columbia university. The doctors making the experiments were not identified. Both since have recovered.

The physicians were studying the "bends," a painful condition which often hits men at extreme altitudes and caused by nitrogen bubbles forming in the blood and tissues.

The chokes, an altitude sickness, extremely high altitude flying, were also described to the medical association.

The chokes are coughing, something like asthma. Of themselves, they are not dangerous, but they are danger combat aviators because a choking man cannot keep on his oxygen mask.

Scientists at the college of medicine of the University of Cincinnati, which has made studies of the chokes, said they apparently are due to bubbles of nitrogen forming in the blood and tissues.

Embolism—a high altitude sickness—somewhat like the deep sea "bends."

Since the beginning of June, well over 100 enemy agents have been arrested, mostly in Rome. Some of these already are on trial and other hearings are scheduled in the near future.

An Allied statement published in the Italian press warned that Allied intelligence has the names of many Italian spies who now are engaged in trying to help the enemy.

It urged such persons to give up now.

"Those who have been executed did not give themselves up," it said.

"All those who have given themselves up are still alive."

Captives Beat Up Nazi

For Writing to Father

OMAHA.—A German prisoner of war at the Scotts Bluff, Neb., camp who wanted to write to his father, a resident of the United States, was severely beaten by fellow prisoners, who charged the father was "not good Nazi."

The Seventh Service command announced.

The prisoner was a member of a group captured near Cherbourg.

"Two or three of the prisoners told him that he couldn't write his father because the father was not good Nazi," the army said, "but the prisoner insisted on writing and was beaten so badly he was taken to the camp hospital."

Have Gone by V-Mail

WASHINGTON.—The army and navy postal services have transmitted 789,539,390 V-mail letters to members of the armed forces overseas since the system was established in mid-1942.

The Office of War Information stated.

Deliveries were at peak for both services in April, when the army delivered 63,638,405 V-mail letters to the navy's 56,090,703.

The army has handled 689,539,390 letters since its service was established while the navy, which began operations in March, 1943, has delivered 100,002,111.

Plans are under way to establish a large V-mail station in France this fall.

ON THE ROAD TO PARIS.—The Hatfields and the McCoy's were again fighting, but not with each other as U. S. patriots reached the vicinity of Paris and the suburbs of Versailles.

They were Phillips Hatfield, W. V. Va., and Homer L. McCoy, Tex., who said they were kin to the original feud.

"This time we got a mad on against Hitler and are not quarreling among ourselves," said McCoy.

GO IS MY CO-PIL

Col. Robert L. Scott

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point at a young age, Robert Scott won his wings at Kelly Field and took up pursuit flying. When the war broke out he was an instructor in California and later he was in combat flying. He appeals to several planes and finally the opportunity comes. He flies a bomber to India, where he becomes a ferry pilot, but this does not appeal to him. He visits General Chenault and is promised a Kittyhawk, and when he gets it he becomes a "one man war force" over Burma, doing much damage to the Japs on many a lone mission. One day he gets orders to report to Gen. Chennault in Kunming.

CHAPTER XV

These were led by five of the best men of the AVG, and there was one great ace-in-the-hole that only the General and the AVG could have arranged. Two squadrons of these Flying Tigers had agreed to stay behind for a two weeks' period to help the newly formed 23rd Fighter Group. I think this gesture by those men was a real thing. Bob Neal, Charlie Bond, George E. Petack, Jim Howard, John E. Petack, Jim Howard, and others who were suffering from combat fatigue and ill health, they were some of the bravest and most self-sacrificing incidents of this war. In the two weeks that they remained, two of them gave their lives, and their sacrifice was beyond the call of duty. These men, with those five who stayed with us to lead our squadrons—Bill Rector, Schiel, Bright and Sawyer—and the AVG radio, engineering, armament, and ground personnel, were our backbone of inspiration. We of the 23rd Fighter Group salute you.

That Fourth of July, as the overconfident enemy ships came in over Kweilin, they brought a new twin-engine fighter that was supposed to be a new model. They came in doing arrogant acrobatics, expecting to strafe the Chinese civilians in the city without opposition. General Chennault watched them with field glasses from outside the line and called directions to Bob Neal, Ed Rector, and Tex Hill, who were sitting with their ships "in the sun" high overhead, at twenty-one thousand feet. At his radio order of "Take 'em," the newly formed 23rd and the AVG attached dropped down and massacred the Japs. There were soon thirteen wrecked Zeros and new twin-engine 145's around the field for the Chinese to celebrate over.

That was the 23rd Fighter Group organized, initiated, and activated in combat. When I took over things at Kunming there were three fighter squadrons and one headquarters squadron. Major Tex Hill had one squadron, the newly formed 23rd with him were such deputy leaders as Maj. Gil Bright, Maj. Johnny Allison, and Capt. Ajax Baumer. Maj. Ed Rector had another squadron, and I had the 23rd. Charlie Sawyer for his assistant in leadership. These outlying stations are about five hundred miles in the direction of Japan from our headquarters on the plateau of Yunnan and the Chinese who were with the squadron under Maj. Frank Schiel, who was very busy training the most junior members of this new fighter group in the way of combat aviation. Tex Hill led the headquarters to running and stood by for orders to begin leading the fighter forces in action to the East.

On July 10, Tex Hill led a small force of fighters, including Allison, Lieut. Lee Minor, and Lieut. Elias, up on the Yangtze. Their prime job was to escort a few B-25 medium bombers against the docks of Hankow. This objective of mission was to be a success. However, all we considered to be the duty of our fighters, for if any other target presented itself after the bombers were on the way home, we'd have to take it. Tex Hill led his flight along with the bombers, who were led by Col. C. V. Haynes. After the bombs had been released and the B-25's were heading back for base with their bomb-bay doors closed, Tex called for an attack by the fighters on the enemy shipping in the river.

One of the bomber pilots said that Tex rolled his ship over from six thousand feet and came in and shot down for the Jap gunboats below. The little gunboats were shooting everything they had at the American fighters—but that, I've learned since, was what Hill liked. Tex said he was firing over the water, and he pulled out right on the water, and they swept the decks of the enemy gunboats. The bomber pilot said that as the fighter ships would turn low to the water, they came in, each concentrating on one of the little Jap warships, he could see the six lines of fifty-caliber tracers cutting across the water. At long range they seemed to meet out in front of the fighter and then they came over the deck of the target. Then the speed of the fighter narrowed the range, the point where the fire crossed—the zero or convergence point of the guns—was right at the water's surface. The bomber pilot must have knocked in a hole that crippled the boat right away. On the second attack one of these gunboats was sinking and on fire. Hill's four fighters sank all four of the little metal gunboats.

On the next day, on another night such as this one, Hill led eight fighters, four with wing bombs, for diving bombing Nanchang. While these four went down with their bombs, Hill was to stay aloft with the other four to act as top-cover—just in case some Zeros tried to surprise the dive-bombers. Ajax Baumer said that he saw the whole thing: Johnny Petack dove for his target, one of the gunboats on the lake, but as his bomb hit the boat the P-40 was seen to explode, evidently hit by ground fire. Ajax followed the burning ship almost to the ground and saw it strike in a rice paddy near a Buddhist temple.

So Petack, one of the AVG who had stayed for the extra two weeks, was killed in action. It's peculiar how a man could fight all through those last nine months and then go down from a tricky anti-aircraft shot. John Petack had remained for the purpose of training the new pilots and his job was that of airframe defense. He was killed on this offensive mission. He was one who could have refused with honor; instead, he had volunteered for this dive-bombing flight and had been killed in carrying it out. It was the most inspiring thing he could have done.

I kept sweating out the organization of the Group, and finally on July 17, I received orders from the General to proceed to Kweilin area and take charge of fighter operations. I know my heart nearly beat my ribs to pieces, for I was at last being ordered to go out and lead the fighting. Just as I landed on this airfield in the Kwangsi province, I saw the remainder of the AVG get into the kind of a joke, too. When the Japs come we know at what altitude they are approaching and from exactly what direction. We know their speed and their number, and we know their head-on in several places we know when the Japanese roll their ships from their hangars or revetments, when they start their engines, and when they begin to take off. For the obvious purpose of defense, but has permitted us in many cases to locate lost pilots, for the navigation facilities in China are not the world's best.

Of course, the locating of lost, friendly ships took another element besides the warning net. It required the existence of intelligent radio operators who knew the country and had common sense. These men, like Richardson, Mihalko, Miller, and Sasser, with others, stayed out there with us, and if you count the AVG aces as the first factor that permitted us to carry on as a team, that didn't discredit the Flying Tigers, then these men who helped us by radio were the close second factor.

Major Ed Rector, AVG ace and squadron-commanding officer, who took heavy toll of the Japs.

Into a transport to begin their long trip home to the U. S. A. They called to me as they got aboard and I saw Bob Neal, their greatest ace, and I saw the door as he stepped in. We were on our own now, except for the five AVG veterans who had accepted induction in China, and the thirty odd ground crew.

As the transport got away and the dust settled down, I climbed out of my fighter and looked around at the country. It could be marvelous at the moment. I could have been in a movie production business—used to discuss the peculiar beauty of the place, and he'd say that it would make the greatest location in the world for a moving picture. It was a flat, tableland country, and over the ages it must have been under water. From the level ground, vertical rocky hills, like stalagmites. These were honey-combed with caves where water, when they were submerged, must have dissolved the limestone that had been in the pockets. Evidently the glaciers had melted and the valley flat as the glacier moved South, but the jagged rocks had withstood the pressure. Then, as the glacier melted, the caves had formed under water. Now the gray pinnacles of lava-like rock pointed straight towards the heavens. These one-thousand- to two-thousand-foot sentinels gave the valley an eerie appearance that always subdued my general feeling of cheerfulness. As long as I went to Kweilin, I dreaded the extra nervous tension that I knew it would produce. Add to this summer temperature of over 100 degrees, a humidity of almost 100 per cent, and a fine powdery dust that gagged you, and you can realize that Kweilin was not a summer resort.

There was just the single runway for the planes, cut there between those silent needles of stone. We had operations office in one of the natural caves, and the radio set in another. As I climbed out of my P-40, I could see neither.

Here in Kweilin I first had explained to me the air-raid warning system on which we depended. It was of course a working dream that General Chennault had developed. Many times it has saved our fighter forces in China, and without it our chances there against the Japanese would have been hopeless.

He had told his story to the Generalissimo. With the approval of high Chinese officials he had built his air-warning net, had caused to be constructed many strategic air-dromes in China, and had preached the doctrine of pursuit aviation.

The warning net is of course secret and cannot be discussed in detail. If you imagine two concentric circles, one with a radius of one hundred kilometers and the other of two hundred kilometers, around each of most of the fields and large cities in Free China, you have a general picture. In these circles are thousands of reporting stations—some within the enemy lines, some right on the enemy fields themselves. These stations are radio sets sitting on a city wall watching for airplanes or listening for engine noise and reporting it with a visual signal. There may be a mandarin in a watch tower, or a soldier, or a farmer, or a walkie-talkie radio. All reports finally get in to the outer circle, where some of the information is re-filtered, and finally it goes to the plotting room. It's kind of a joke, too. When the Japs come we know at what altitude they are approaching and from exactly what direction. We know their speed and their number, and we know their head-on in several places we know when the Japanese roll their ships from their hangars or revetments, when they start their engines, and when they begin to take off.

Also it is not a joke, too. For the obvious purpose of defense, but has permitted us in many cases to locate lost pilots, for the navigation facilities in China are not the world's best.

Of course, the locating of lost, friendly ships took another element besides the warning net. It required the existence of intelligent radio operators who knew the country and had common sense. These men, like Richardson, Mihalko, Miller, and Sasser, with others, stayed out there with us, and if you count the AVG aces as the first factor that permitted us to carry on as a team, that didn't discredit the Flying Tigers, then these men who helped us by radio were the close second factor.

So these that one of our pilots, returning from a flight, loses his position on his map because of a crosswind, because of unfamiliarity with the country, because of his own stupidity, which we call a "short circuit" between the pilot and the map, or just because the maps of China are very inaccurate. In many such instances we would have lost an airplane worth virtually millions in our combat zone, and perhaps the pilot too.

The pilot who is lost calls the radio station that he thinks is closest to him, and in code tells him the trouble. The radio man tells him to circle the base. The pilot passes for a few minutes. Down in that town, marked on his map with an unknown Chinese character, some member of this warning net sees him and reports it to the P-40. In a few minutes the radio operator gets the report and tells the pilot: "You're reported over Luening—fly fifty-eight degrees at two hundred miles an hour, and circle the base. We've got grisly funerals here."

One amusing but near-tragic instance of this orientation by means of the air-warning net happened about the time the AVG induction came to China. A certain fighter group commander had waited for several days over in India to come into China with a large flight of P-40E's. He finally came over on a transport, and eventually got tired of waiting for the P-40. He didn't know that the weather was very bad in Burma, and that the monsoon winds from the South could take them so far off course in a matter of hours and give the entire flight might easily get lost.

After a long wait he came back to Assam in the transport and led his pilots towards Kunming. First of all, he was corrected too much for the southern wind. In a very short time he was fifty miles South of his course and near two Japanese fields. His unashamed deputy leader herded him to the North. And then the monsoon wind from the Indian Ocean began to work on his navigation, and in another hour he was lost far to the North of the course. Night was falling, and the sun over China were rising threateningly.

Then the net, if it hadn't justified its existence long before, would have begun to pay for itself. The leader called Kunming, and the operator heard him. The operator said: "Circle the first town you see." The group commander began to argue at once—said he didn't have enough gas to waste circling; he'd have to go on. The net operator said: "You're over Yangpi—fly 240 degrees for twenty minutes and you'll see the lake Kunming is on."

THE CHURCH DURING WAR AND PEACE

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 5:43-48; Romans 13:7-8.
 GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called sons of God.—Matthew 5:9.

Everywhere men are talking about the coming peace. They are concerned lest having won a war we may lose the peace through the selfishness or the indifference of men. It is a great problem and one about which we are rightly concerned.

Why is it that the most important factor in assuring a just and friendly settlement of the problem is left out of men's deliberations? Why is there so little (if any) thought of God and prayer to Him for the needed guidance and wisdom?

We know that there can never be an abiding peace until Christ comes to establish His kingdom, but in the meantime, we should seek to bring Christ into the peace talks to bear on the relations of men and nations. We are to show:

I. A Higher Measure of Love (Matt. 5:43-48).

We have established its own principle of conduct based on selfish advantage. It pays to be polite to those who can favor you, so cultivate their good will by acts of courtesy and kindness. Your neighbor may be able to help you in an hour of need, so do good to him as you have opportunity.

But an enemy—what can you gain from kindness to him? Hate him, and treat him like an enemy. Christianity knows nothing of such a spirit. Even though it be necessary to fight against wicked men in order to hinder their evil plans, we need not lose our love for them. Even those who desperately use us may be loved for Christ's sake. "Consider Him that endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself" (Heb. 12:3). "Love your neighbor as yourself" (Lev. 19:18). "Love your neighbor as you love yourself" (John 13:34). "Love your neighbor as yourself" (John 13:34).

II. A Higher Degree of Loyalty (Rom. 13:1-4).

An intelligent Christian is the best citizen. He knows that all government is based on the power and authority of God, and hence he recognizes the legality and authority of duly constituted governmental agencies.

No matter how much man has perverted or degraded government, yet it is in essence the expression of a ministry of God (v. 4). How deeply ashamed that could make those who regard political office as a means of personal gain and advantage, or who use their authority to permit or promote that which is against God.

Every public official should recognize God as the giver of his authority and seek the Lord's special grace and guidance in the discharge of his duties. Every citizen should be ready to obey the laws as having a power ordained of God (v. 1), for the good of the nation (v. 4).

Here then is the solution of the political problems which are causing upheaval all over the world, namely, a revival of Christian testimony and faith, for it will lead to a loyalty on the part of the people which is quite unknown where Christianity does not bring its true influence to bear.

That kind of love for men and loyalty to government necessarily brings about:

III. A Higher Standard of Patriotism (Rom. 13:5-7).

There is more to real patriotism than flag waving and high-sounding oratory. There must be a conscientious willingness to serve the nation in willing obedience to the command or the request of proper authority.

The Christian gives just that kind of patriotic spirit to his country (v. 5). He has a heightened conscience demands it, and he responds.

Then too, there must be support of the government by the payment of taxes. Think of the thousands who are engaged in the business of evading the just share of the cost of government.

The Christian has no share in such things, for he is ready to pay his share of the expense of government as a ministry of the Lord (v. 6).

No government can function properly nor long endure which does not have the respect and confidence of those governed. There can be no such thing as a government without the respect and confidence of those governed. There can be no such thing as a government without the respect and confidence of those governed. There can be no such thing as a government without the respect and confidence of those governed.

We have said it before, but we say it again—the best thing that could happen to America politically is a revival of Christianity. Our nation's problems will be set straight and encourage the people to follow in repentance, restitution and God's blessing. Read II Chronicles 7:14.

Lady Found Squaw Was Bad Humoring the Oldster

A lady tourist, walking along an Indian reservation in the West, came upon a husky squaw carrying an aged man on her back. Gazing pityingly at the overgrown papoose, she said to the young squaw:

"It is too bad that your father is crippled and cannot walk."
 "Ugh!" grunted the squaw.
 "Then is he sick?"
 "Ugh! Him no sick!"
 "Then, why do you carry him on your back, as you would a small child?"
 "Ugh!" grunted the squaw.
 "Him in second childhood!"

TO EVERY CITIZEN OF CHILTON COUNTY:

November 17th is Home Coming Day for our people. Once each year we plan to come together in such event as will promote fellowship and co-operation among our people.

We have tried to plan a program that will mean much for your enjoyment. The material benefits, prizes, etc., fully justify your spending this day together.

It is befitting that our people leave their strenuous toil of mental and physical responsibilities and feed their minds for a while on encouraging talks from the speakers of the day and the friendly association with their neighbors.

Let me urge you to come—bring the family—your friends—your cattle. Let's have the biggest day ever experienced in Chilton county.

Sincerely yours,

ROY M. ROPER, President
Chilton County Farm Bureau

LAWS AND POLICIES SPONSORED BY THE FARM BUREAU—

1. Added $30.00 to $40.00 per bale to the income farmers got from cotton in 1941, 1942, 1943, and 1944 (Bankhead Parity Loan Act).
2. Added $15.00 per ton to prices of peanuts in 1944 as compared to 1943 (Stegall Act).
3. Added at least $5.00 per bale to price of cotton in 1944. (Bankhead-Brown amendment to Price Control Acts).
4. Added to income from cattle, hogs, milk, chickens, eggs, sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, strawberries, tomatoes, and other farm products (Steagall Act and Bankhead-Steagall farm provisions of Price Control Acts). Ceilings on many farm products have been too low but would have been lower had it not been for these laws.

These are only a few of the achievements of the Farm Bureau. This organization of farm families has achieved many other victories for agriculture.

Congress has passed scores of laws taking money out of the pockets of farmers and putting it into the pockets of other groups. Industry and labor and others got such laws by organization and making themselves heard in the Congress and Legislatures and other branches of Government where policies are made. Farmers by limited organization have achieved laws which give them some pro-

MORE FARMERS MUST ORGANIZE!
INDUSTRY IS ORGANIZED!
LABOR IS ORGANIZED!

Organized Agriculture Needs You!

Industry is strongly organized in corporations, many of which have monopoly privileges. Labor is powerfully organized in labor unions which have enormous influence in Congress. Farmers are outnumbered, three to one. Therefore, it is urgently necessary that farmers pool their strength through organization in order to make the most effective use of their power.

Farmers face many big problems after the war. They need a strong organization to help solve these problems. We should make the FARM BUREAU big enough and strong enough to do the job.

Ruses of Escaped German Prisoners Don't Fool Yanks

Hoover Praises Work of Law Enforcement Agencies in Trapping Fugitives.

WASHINGTON. — Down a Texas highway hiked two contrasting figures. One was over 6 feet tall and of sturdy frame; the other short, broad-shouldered, big tumbled. They wore khaki shirts and shorts. Thumbs raised in hitch-hiker salute, they hailed a truck and climbed to the seat beside the driver.

"Where you heading?" asked the driver.

"We're Boy Scouts," was the reply, "going to an international convention in Mexico."

The driver, suspicious of the men's accent and the hairy muscled, knotted legs extending from the shorts, halted at the nearest town, turned over the brawny "scouts" to the authorities—two more escaped German prisoners of war recaptured through civilian alertness.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover says the nation's citizens and law enforcement agencies are performing a bang-up G-man job in nabbing fugitive P. O. Ws.

Thank to this civilian alertness and local law enforcement officer cooperation, only about a dozen of nearly 550 escaped axis soldiers and sailors are still at large. Not one of the missing ones, as far as is known, has succeeded in returning to his homeland.

Some Other Examples.

Military authorities are charged with the responsibility of keeping prisoners of war in detention. The recapture of escaped prisoners, however, is the job of the FBI.

Here are a few additional examples of civilian participation in captures which the nation's FBI chief selected from his files:

Two Illinois truants saw through a prisoner's attempted disguise and offered him a lift. They drove slowly toward Chicago, making several stops to telephone state police. At Addison, Ill., the helper telephoned the sheriff at Wilton and, to be on the safe side, borrowed a shotgun.

Returning to the truck he saw the prisoner, suspicious of what the trucker was up to, running away. When the prisoner disregarded yells to halt, the trucker took aim, let go with a load of No. 6 shot and peppered the fleeing Nazi with 33 pellets. The prisoner was recaptured and removed to a hospital. He's recovering—face down.

In Mississippi an escaped war prisoner got a ride on a truck belonging to two Mount Olive, Miss., natives. Distrustful of the man's accent, they drove up to the headquarters of the town marshal at Mount Olive, forcibly delivered their Nazi corporal.

Hungry Escapee Gives Up.

Not all escapees have had to be retaken with force, however. One prisoner who fled from a Staten Island, N. Y., camp was back in the camp's cove line a little more than a day later. A hearty eater, he said he couldn't stand the hunger which accompanied his freedom and so he sneaked back the way he had sneaked out.

In Arkansas an escapee, after 24 hours' freedom, asked a farmer to drive him back to camp. He said he had intended making his way to Mexico but that after spending a day in the woods, harassed by mosquitos, he decided Hitler could get along without him.

Language difficulties frequently have figured in apprehensions. In one case causing a frustrated German to give himself up in disgust. The prisoner escaped from a camp in the state of Washington, four days later entered a Baiter, Ore., cafe and ordered a cup of coffee. After trying for some time to make himself understood in his feeble English, he reached for a paper napkin and pencil and wrote: "I am an escaped German war prisoner."

Sergeant Surprised to Learn That He Is Missing

PAWTUCKET, R. I. — "Well, what the hell!" said Sgt. Benny E. Colilli of Pawtucket when he looked at a June 4 newspaper which carried a casualty list that included him among the missing.

He was listed as missing May 9 after a raid over Austria. Air force observers reported that 30 Nazi planes had attacked his crippled bomber. But by the time the notification made the papers, Benny was back home on leave, with only a tail fin missing.

"Sure, the fortress was crippled," he related. "But we didn't crack up—we limped right back to our base."

Accident Halts Proposal, But Tar Wastes No Time

PHILADELPHIA.—Elmer Z. Kinman, waterlander second class in the United States navy, was out walking with Miss Dorothy Jackson and her mother when he was struck by an automobile. While she received first aid at a hospital he bought a ring, slipped it on Dorothy's finger while they rode to the police station to make a charge against the driver of the car, and was told the marriage would be performed without charge by the magistrate.

Wrong Approach

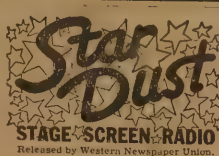

Preacher—Now, Sam, why don't you try to resist your longing for prey when you're tempted, think of your wife at home.

Sam—When I'm really thirsty, I'm absolutely devoid of fear!

Maid to Order

Housewife—Now, are there any other questions you'd like to ask?

New Maid—Yassum. Where all do Ah put yo' car aftah Ah gets mine in de garage?

JIMMY CAGNEY is settling down to work on his new picture, "Blood on the Sun," after too long an absence from the screen. During that absence he's made a four-month overseas tour, and his brother William has gone through several hundred manuscripts, trying to find suitable material for James. Two possible stories turned up for the picture following "Blood on the Sun"; no matter which is selected, Cagney will be seen as a soldier in the American army in the days of the Indian wars.

RKO executives swear that "Tall in the Saddle," starring John Wayne, is absolutely a non-formula western. Wayne never bids his faithful horse a fond farewell; Ella Raines is not a schoolteacher; Wayne doesn't win all the fights, nor does he gallop off to anyone just for the sake of galloping. And surprise—he not only kisses Ella Raines, he kisses Audrey Long, too.

For several years now Bob Hope is not broadcast before a civilian audience. Only servicemen are admitted, whether he has been giving performances abroad or here in America.

Parks Johnson and Warren Hull have starred Gie Joe and war workers since Pearl Harbor, keeping their own voices in the background. But recently Parks was riding in a New York taxi, and the driver turned around. "You're Warren Hull, aren't you?" he asked. "No, I'm Parks Johnson, but you have the right show," said Parks. "I knew it," said the driver. "Soon's you told me where to go, I knew that voice."

"Without Love," the new Katharine Hepburn-Spencer Tracy-Lucille Ball picture, went before the cameras the other day with Keenan Wynn and Patricia Morison in supporting roles. It's based on the play by the same name in which Miss Hepburn appeared.

Just for her own convenience, Joan Bennett's an inventor. She invented a patented lipsticker brush that can be carried in a purse without smearing other articles; that's just one of her inventions. At the moment she's having fun designing wall paper.

Lois Wilson, star of the silent screen, is carving out quite a career for herself on the stage and in radio. She was practically snatched from the Saturday matinee of "Chicken Every Sunday," the day before the first broadcast of the Ethel Barrymore show, "Miss Hattie," when producers wanted to make a last minute switch in the role of "Martha Thompson." Lois got the role; you hear her Sundays.

The Radio Hall of Fame has certainly lived up to its name; now beginning its second year on the air, it has brought to the Blue network nearly every nationally famous person in the entertainment field—more than 150 of them.

If you gave your dog to the army, you'd want to see My Pal, Wolf. The picture, revolving around the adventures of seven-year-old Sharyn Moffett and a dog, has a sequence showing how the army performs in transferring a pet into a perfect canine soldier.

Picture and radio people are agreed on one thing—no matter what anybody says, they're convinced that Joe E. Brown did everything in his power to cheer the boys overseas. If ever a man put his heart into doing anything, the "Stop and Go" star put his into entertaining servicemen.

ODDS AND ENDS—Dinah Shore and Jimmy Durante are among the stars who will record the Christmas "Command Performance" show for those overseas. . . . House Jameson, of "Grime Decor," named as a result of the close friendship between his father and Col. E. M. House, President Wilson's adviser. . . . Regis Toomey has been signed for a role in "The Big Sleep." Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall head the cast. . . . Dick Jones (Henry Aldrich) is writing all his letters to one Miss Betty Bacon of Los Angeles. . . . When the Eddie Cantor show performs for servicemen, it's red-haired Nora Martin the boys whistle at.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Progress of our Pacific war progress and the growing possibilities of reasonably quick recapture of some rubber areas in the Far East have made many who know the rubber industry best emphasize the need for sound policies to deal with the economic and political problems which the gradual return of natural rubber will raise.

Mexico has its own way of conserving tires. Mexican motorists are required, by government regulation, to keep their cars idle one day a week. Car owners select their "motorless day" and then must display on their windshields a sticker of a color designated for that day of the week.

IMPORTANT FOR GROWERS OF VETCH, WINTER PEAS, CLOVERS

Here are typical reports from farmers who inoculate legumes with NITRAGIN:

"My Austrian peas inoculated with NITRAGIN did a good job and grew fast and made a good yield. The uninoculated side of the field made poor growth and was a color yellow all season."

"I always inoculate vetch, clovers and peas with NITRAGIN. It is mighty cheap crop insurance."

"My neighbor tells me it made the difference of no crop and a successful crop."

"I increased peanut yields 10 bushels per acre."

It costs only about 15c an acre and takes only a few minutes to inoculate legume seed with NITRAGIN—the oldest, most widely used inoculant for all legumes. Get it from your seed supplier; just ask for NITRAGIN. THE NITRAGIN CO., 318 N. BROAD ST., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Hundreds of wounded now at the hospital, the government's lone hospitalization center in the state, will be honored on that day for the sacrifices they have made for their state and their country in World War II.

"These men," State War Finance

Chairman Ed Leigh McMillan said in announcing the day, "challenge all of us to do our utmost to make the Sixth War Loan the finest war effort Alabama has ever undertaken."

"Many of these men have suffered injuries on the battle field from which they will never completely recover," Mr. McMillan pointed out, and "I know that our people will be anxious to match their courageous sacrifice with a great effort here at home."

"War bond workers from every county, editors of newspapers, radio station people and motion picture exhibitors, all active fighters here on the home front, will go there Nov. 11, Armistice Day, to honor these men and accept the challenge to make Alabama the first state in the nation to reach its Sixth War Loan quotas."

"The Sixth War Loan begins on Nov. 20 and will close Dec. 16, but Alabama will fire her first gun in the campaign Nov. 11 when we go to Northington to see how our war bond dollars are spent to give our sons, and the sons of our neighbor states, rehabilitated bodies and lives."

"Our war bond dollars make the work at Northington possible. There isn't a county in the state that is not indebted to hospitalization program for rehabilitated sons."

"Our dollars are fighting dollars—for they support every battle front—but they are healing dollars, too."

"Our fighting sons challenge us to meet their sacrifice . . . to make our state the first in the nation to meet its Sixth War Loan quotas. We cannot . . . we will not . . . let them."

WHERE THEY ARE AND HOW THEY ARE

Sgt. Charles G. Davis of Maplesville, son of Mrs. Mae C. Davis, was radio operator on one of the first Troop Carrier C-47 aircraft to cross the German lines and drop paratroops on the fields of Holland in the recent and mightiest of Allied Airborne operations. He flew through flak and machine gun fire to drop troops on a small field near Arnhem.

Sgt. Davis is a veteran of the Sicilian and Italian Campaigns and has seen foreign service since May 1943, when he landed on the coast of North Africa.

Prior to entering the service he was employed by Tennessee Coal and Iron Co., Birmingham.

Second Lt. Shelton Bean, 24 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Bean, of this city, has reported at the Coffeyville Army Air Field, Coffeyville, Kansas, a Third Air Force installation, for 10 weeks of training as a photo-reconnaissance pilot.

Lt. Bean, a machinist in civilian life, completed the AAF flight training course on June 27, 1944, and was awarded his wings and commission at Luke Field, Phoenix, Ariz.

We just had another letter from T-5 John M. VanDerveer, Jr., and he is now in Belgium. Sure travels fast, that guy.

VanDerveer says, "Boy, what I wouldn't give to be able to swap this rifle for a composing stick and this pup tent for room behind that old stone, there at the News office." Well, who knows, maybe this war will be over sooner than some might expect, and we could sure use your assistance there too, Cpl. VanDerveer.

AN EIGHTH AAF BOMBER STATION IN ENGLAND

When "The Saint" was two-thirds of the way down the runway she still had too much speed and ground men quarter of a mile away were futilely yelling for her to "Get that tail down."

The end of the field was looming up when the pilot finally let the tail wheel touch the runway, and then everyone knew why it had happened that way. The tire was as flat as a G-I pancake.

The same ground men who had been accusing the pilot of making a nasty landing changed their tune. Under the new conditions it was a beautiful landing, but no one had a chance to congratulate the crew right away because the ambulance had taken over to remove the wounded.

"The Saint," a B-17 Flying Fortress with a lot of downright crust, had demonstrated her ability to take it during a battle in the clouds four miles over Germany.

Fighters hit the formation just after "bombs away" and for a few minutes the Saint's crew was as busy as they'd ever been before. When the smoke had cleared away several enemy fighters were piled up on the German countryside and a few B-17's had joined them, but the Saint was still plugging along.

The pilot, Second Lt. John H. Herzog, 26, whose wife lives at 1546 Hayes Street, San Francisco, says The Saint handled well in spite of a score of jagged shell holes. The elevator trim tabs were hit, the oxygen system in the right waist was knocked out, and one of the superchargers was done for.

If there had been another enemy attack about then The Saint couldn't have offered much opposition. None of her guns were manned. The one in the ball turret was of no use because the gunner's vision was hampered by shattered glass, and the other gunners who weren't injured were busy administering first aid to those who were.

The radio operator, Sgt. David W. Gaston, 24, of 1602 Pendleton Street, Columbia, S. C., had been hit in the right leg by a shell. It was so bad the leg had to be amputated at the knee a few hours after The Saint came back. Minor injuries were suffered by the tail gunner, Sgt. Daniel C. Alred, 20, of Clanton, Ala., and the engineer Staff Sgt. Theodore R. Pardue, 24, of Seattle, Wash.

Sweet potatoes should appear frequently in the family meals during the next few months because there is a plentiful supply, advises Marie Amos, extension service nutritionist. "While many families do not want sweet potatoes day after day, most people will enjoy them at least three or four times a week during the months they are available," she says.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskell, D.D.

Luther Burbank is authority for the statement that all plants are sensitive. He said that he would not employ a man who used alcohol for all plants were influenced even by the smell of alcohol. Nor would he employ any one who smoked to help him in his delicate experimental work with his plants. If a plant will respond to the most delicate outside forces, then what must take place in the heart of a child as it touches this life. The most sensitive thing in all the world is a child life. Parents can do with a child and for a child, just about all they want done. Parents should see to it that only the most beautiful, character developing, Christian influences touch that delicate, sensitive plant that we call a little child.

As I stood at one end of the Golden Gate bridge at San Francisco I admired the works and the skill of man. The builder of this bridge so arranged the hook up of the spans as to give the bridge a sway of as much as eight feet under this pressure but it did not since there came along a seventy five mile gale, and this bridge bent twelve feet under this pressure but it did not break. The bridge bent and swayed under the power of the blow, but it did not break. Men, women, things, or nations are made so as to have bending powers, as the blasts of life hurl themselves against us. England is now bending under the blasts of the Robots, but England will not break. Unless there be a flaw in the make up of your character and life, you are not going to break under pressure. I saw an old oak tree sweep the ground with its top when the terrific winds blew, but it did not break. The trunk of that tree had no flaw.

I sometimes think that we are like unto a lot of bewildered children attending a kindergarten, trying to learn how to spell out the word God. The letters are in our hands, but we are so ignorant, or we have such limited skill, until we can not put the right things together. If we only knew how to look for God, we could find Him everywhere.

Many Alabama farmers are obtaining their winter wood supply from low, bottom lands they are clearing and developing into pasture.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Anglas Chambers, who died six years ago, November 3, 1938.

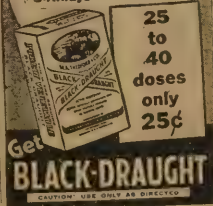

The world may change from year to year,
Our lives from day to day.
The loving memory of you
Shall never fade away.
We often think of you
And of the way you died.

When you left, you couldn't say goodbye,
Only those who have lost, can tell.
The pain of parting without farewell.
Sadly missed by family.

THIS advertisement has to do with the extension of electric service to new customers. If you have applied for electric service, if you haven't yet received it, you want to know if there are real reasons and what those reasons are.

Here are the facts: Some—not all—materials necessary for extensions of electric service within certain limitations, have become more plentiful. Copper wire, poles and transformers, essential in the delivery of electric service, are still "tight". But if all controls on electrical materials were removed overnight, and if we could get immediate delivery on them, there would still be some delay in getting electric service extended to you.

The reason? Manpower shortage; every electric extension, even a short one, must be "engineered" before being built. There's more to electrical construction than merely connecting wires. Electrical engineers are scarce—the army and navy took them quickly—there's so much electrical engineering to be done in modern warfare. Those left with us are not super-human—they can do only so much work, so the engineering, although as well done, isn't as quickly done as in peace time because there aren't enough engineers to do it. The armed services have also taken a good share of the experienced electrical construction men—so again it's a case of getting as much done as you can with the skilled men you have to do the work.

IF we had all the materials needed and IF we had all the skilled men we need, instead of telling you "we'll extend electric service to you as soon as we can" we could tell you fairly definitely when your turn would come.

We like to do things promptly. We don't like to ask people who want to be our customers to be patient. We can generate—instantly—all of the electricity they will use. We like to tell it. That's our business; delay represents no gain for us. We're just as anxious to get electric service to you as you are to receive it. We will extend it as quickly as conditions will permit. We hope that the time will be soon; the exact time will depend on getting enough materials and the necessary skilled men to assemble them into serviceable electric extensions. And that time depends on the course of the war which we, too, are anxious to see won.

Electricity is still cheap, and will be after the war.

OUR TRIP

We were studying about water when Mrs. Thomas asked us if we would like to take a trip to the city water plant.

We wrote rules of conduct for the trip and questions to ask Mr. Thompson and the man who cares for the plant. We wrote a letter to Mr. Thompson asking for permission to go. He wrote us a letter saying that we could come at any time we would like to if it would come in line with our work. We asked Sarah Madge to call him and tell him we would like to be there Thursday morning. He said he would meet us there, Thursday, October 19.

We started Thursday morning, walking two abreast. Monise Henley was one of the parolmen.

When we got there we met Mr. Thompson's nephew. We learned how the lime and alum are put in. We saw how the reservoirs and pumps work.

When we were through we thanked the man and started up to the filling station to buy drinks. When we were through, we went back to school and started to work.

Otis Deloach.

OUR TRIP

One day we decided to make a trip to the city Water Plant. It was a grand, delightful day. But the walk caused us to pant.

When we got there, we looked around. Before we went up the stairs. There were so many pumps and things.

I just had to stare!

When we got to the top, I had to stop.

For what do you think I saw? Lots of vats, machines, and pools. And water that was raw!

I believe we really learned a lot on our trip to the city well. I should like to tell you more. But it's moer than tongue can tell!

Lloyd C. War, Jr.

A TRIP

Twas to the water plant we went (One Thursday morning bright, To learn how water's purified And made for us just right.

We saw the lime dropped into it. Then came the alum bit by bit. That make our water pure and clean. The filtering pools were also seen. 'Tis pumped to us from Yellow Leaf. The trip in time is very brief. The pumps were busy as could be. Storing water for you and me. At Miller's stopped we for a bite. That we might work with all our might.

CLANTON WATER PLANT

In our room we have been studying about water. We decided we would like to visit our water plant.

The class wrote Mr. Thompson to get permission to visit the plant. Mr. Thompson gave us permission.

We went on Thursday October 19, 1944.

We left school at ten and arrived at ten-twenty. We had a nice trip there and back.

When we got to the plant, Mr. Thompson was waiting for us. As you enter there is a plate that tells that the plant was built in 1939 by C. Fenn Jones. There were four compartments of water. Two compartments were of mud and two of clear water. The water comes from Yellow Leaf creek. When it goes through the first two it is partly purified. There are two other compartments inside. When the water runs in those it is completely purified. Some of the chemicals used are alum and lime. On our way back, we stopped at Miller's to get some drinks and get a bite. Then we started back to school. We got here at eleven-forty-five. We had a nice time at the plant.

OUR VISIT TO THE WATER PLANT

We studied a section in one of our health books about water. Our interest in the subject grew until we wrote Mr. Thompson to find out if we could visit the water plant. In a few days we got a letter from him, extending to us the desired privilege. We left Thursday morning about ten-fifteen.

Our class was a happy class that morning. On the way down there we saw many pretty things. We saw many pretty trees and wild flowers.

When we got to the plant, Mr. Thompson was there with his nephew who is in service. They showed us through the plant.

Mr. Thompson said that our water comes from Yellow Leaf creek. We saw some of the mud that comes out of the water. We saw the alum, lime, and chlorine put in the water to purify it.

On the way back we stopped at Mr. Miller's filling station to get a drink and cakes.

We had a very nice time. Every one was very tired when we got back to school.

WHY FISH BITE AT TIMES, NOT OTHERS

AUBURN, Ala.—Two pieces of work have about solved the mystery as to why game fishing is usually good in the spring, fair in the fall, and poor during mid-summer and mid-winter.

Years of study and observations at Norris Lake, Norris Tennessee, have convinced biologists of the Tennessee Valley Authority that good fishing in the spring and fair fishing in the fall are due to a scarcity of fish food, while poor fishing in midsummer is due to an abundance of small young fish for the large fish to eat. A study by the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries reveals that since fish is a cold-blooded animal its rate of digestion is slowed down by low temperatures. This makes the fish need less food and much harder to catch during the winter months.

These facts led officials of the Tennessee Valley Authority to reverse their previous position of advocating a closed season and to request the Tennessee Conservation Department to leave Norris Lake open to year-round fishing throughout 1944. "These findings are in keeping with results of experiments conducted at Auburn which show that there is no need for a closed season on bass or other fish in farm ponds in Alabama," says Allen M. Pearson, extension fish and wildlife specialist, Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

TAKE YOUR FERTILIZER NOW

War Food Administration WARNS
NOW OR NEVER FOR 1945

There's a crisis in the making!

If stocks pile up in fertilizer plants and agents' warehouses, the stream of supply will choke up. They must move fast or the lack of man-power will cause a paralyzing shortage.

Take the Chilean Nitrate situation for example. To supply the quantity needed for 1945 crops, many cargoes must be unloaded each month at each port, then moved out by train and truck for immediate allocation. It must move out of agents' hands as fast as it moves in. If not, the choke-up starts and works back to the ports, even back to the ships.

Already there's a threatened shortage of nitrogen, due to sharply increased war needs. Unless you help

Storage Tips

Pile all materials on dry boards in barn or shed.
Pile materials separately.
Keep piles close together.
Destroy the bags when you use the contents.

Skeeter Fly High

By LEALON MARTIN JR.
McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Released by WNU

THE last tinge of red had faded from the far edge of Lake Palourde. Eddie LeBlanc sat alone upon the levee bench and watched the dusk thicken. He thought, it'll soon be dark; wonder why Cicely and Jim aren't back. He tried again to put the bitterness out of his mind, but it was of no use. His best friend at camp—whom he'd brought home here to Timbalier on their week-end leave from Camp Shelley—and his girl! His girl!

With the twilight the mosquitoes came out of the marshes. Their humming was the high-pitched whine of fighting planes moving to attack—and they came in numberless legions to settle on everything that was man's in Timbalier.

Eddie slapped lightly at them. Skeeters didn't hurt a Cajun, but the sight of so many made him think of the old song. Softly, he sang:

"Oh, skeeter, he fly high, oh,
Skeeter he fly low, oh,
Skeeter he no care, oh,
Who he bite or why, oh!"

But the song only brought back his trouble to a greater degree. "Cicely, I guess, is like the skeeter," he said half-aloud. "She don't care no more. It was the first time he really faced facts and now his mind raced back over them."

"Me, I would like for you to make the visit with me in Timbalier on the week-end leave," he'd invited Jim Blake back in Camp Shelley. Ever since they'd entered camp together as rookies the shy Cajun had looked up to Jim and his assurance, admiring his air of knowing his way around.

Jim had taken him up on the invitation—and Eddie's woes had begun.

Before they'd been in Timbalier an hour Jim was bored to exasperation. "For Pete's sake, Eddie," he'd said soon after they stepped from the puffing little lugger that brought the daily mail, "is this all there is to it?"

Eddie had looked at the fifteen or twenty little, three stories, the schoolhouse and church. He hadn't ever thought of it that way, but he supposed it was not much to an outsider, particularly a man like Jim. "Out, yes, I'm afraid so," he said apologetically.

"And what do we do to kill time?" Eddie shrugged. "Me, I had thought tonight, Friday, we'd visit my girl, Cicely. But she's gone to Aunt Marie till tomorrow. Saturday night is the dance."

"Yeah," said Jim, "but can't we step out tonight? Get a couple dates?"

"But Cicely, she is my girl," protested Eddie. "We have an understanding."

Jim, looking disgusted, changed the subject. That night, and it passed off all right. The next day Jim was bored despite all Eddie's efforts at entertainment.

By Saturday evening Jim was in a mood that Eddie recognized. He'd ended in the guardhouse when he'd started a night out feeling like that at camp.

Jim cut in three times on Jules Lemain and Elise Gaudreaux who, next to Cicely, was the prettiest girl on the floor. When he started back a fourth time Eddie saw Jules reach back to his hip pocket, patting his knife. "Come, Cicely," Eddie told her. "I want you to dance with Jim."

He stopped Jim just in time. His friend had taken this as meaning he didn't mind much of Cicely's time being appropriated. Cicely hadn't seemed to object, but Jim had stuck with them even when Eddie walked her home.

"See you tomorrow, Babe," Jim called as she went in.

All the next day, their last twenty-four hours, it had been a threesome, with Jim doing most of the talking. Cicely was smiling and responsive. So, when Jim suggested, just before dusk on Sunday evening, that they walk to the store for a coke, Eddie sulked behind. It seemed as if Cicely was lost to him.

Now the thought returned: Wonder why they weren't back—and suddenly he heard them coming. He sat up and the mosquitoes rose and then swarmed down again.

"Look, Babe," said Jim, leaning close to her when all three were seated upon the bench. "Will you write to me?" He took her hand, but dropped it. "Damn!" he exclaimed, scratching furiously, "these things bite like hornets!"

"They don't worry me," Cicely said. "Do they, Eddie?"

"No, me, I don't mind skeeters," Eddie replied, "they don't hurt Cajuns."

But Jim was busy now with his ankles. Then the black cloud lighted on his unprotected neck. For a moment longer he fought the battle.

"Say," he exclaimed, jumping up abruptly, "I can't stand these any more! Going to the house." He went away and Eddie saw happily that he was on the run. He looked at Cicely and the light in her eyes made his heart leap. Softly he began to sing:

"Oh, skeeter, he fly high, oh,
Skeeter he fly low, oh,
Skeeter he no care, oh,
Who he bite or why, oh!"

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

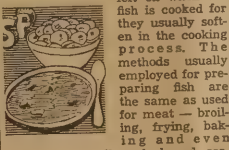

Fish for Dinner... Have It Often (See Recipes Below)

Fish Foods

Those red point problems won't iron out by themselves. They need the expert guidance of the home-maker who makes a hobby of working out her point budget to suit her own particular needs.

We've discovered lots of delicious foods since food rationing began, and not the least of those is fish. It's a fairly inexpensive food and gives you a wealth of protein, vitamins and minerals.

Fish may be purchased whole or as fillet or steaks. Scales may be left on when the fish is cooked for they usually soften in the cooking process.

The methods usually employed for preparing fish are the same as used for meat—broiling, frying, baking, and even boiling. If well cooked and seasoned, fish can be a welcome addition to your table.

Broiling Fish.
When using a whole fish for broiling, clean thoroughly, then wipe dry and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Brush the broiler pan with fat and place fish on heated rack, about two inches from broiling unit. Broil until fish is well browned and flakes when tried with a fork. It will take from 6 to 12 minutes to broil the fish, depending upon its size.

If you are broiling fish filets, brush them first with melted fat and sprinkle lightly with flour to give them a crispy surface after broiling.

Baked Haddock with Dressing.

(Serves 4)
2 haddock steaks (about 1 1/4 pounds)
1 1/2 tablespoons chopped onion
1/4 cup chopped mushrooms
3 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon water
1 1/2 cups fine bread crumbs
Place steaks in shallow, buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Sauté onion and mushrooms in butter for 5 minutes. Add all remaining ingredients. Spread over fish. Bake in a moderate oven for 30 to 35 minutes. Serve plain or with celery sauce. Strips of bacon may be placed on top of dressing before baking.

Tartar Sauce for Fish.

1 teaspoon minced onion
2 teaspoons chopped sweet pickle
1 teaspoon chopped green olives
1/2 tablespoon minced capers
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar
Drain first five ingredients and fold into mayonnaise. Add vinegar. Bass, halibut, perch, pickerel, pike or trout may be substituted for the haddock in the above recipe.

Mackerel with Bacon and Onions.

(Serves 4)
1 pound fillet of mackerel
Salt and pepper
1 cup sliced onions
4 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup fine, soft bread crumbs
2 slices crisp, broiled bacon

LYNN SAYS

Fish Sauces: For white sauce variations you'll enjoy the following: Add 1 tablespoon chopped shallots to 1 cup medium white sauce; or 1/4 pound sliced, blanched almonds, toasted with butter; 2 chopped hard-cooked eggs; 1/2 cup cooked shrimp with 1 hard-cooked egg; or 1/4 cup grated cheese.

Fish Stuffings: To 1 recipe plain bread stuffing, may be added: any one of the following: 1/4 to 1 cup sliced, sautéed mushrooms; 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper, 1/4 teaspoon sage; 1/4 cup ground onion, 1/4 cup grated raw carrots; 2 tablespoons minced parsley, 1/4 teaspoon savory seasoning and 1/4 teaspoon celery seed.

Arrange filets in shallow, greased baking dish. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Sauté onions gently in butter until tender but not browned. Turn out on fish, sprinkle with crumbs, and top with bacon. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) until fish is done, about 15 minutes.

Salmon and Vegetables.

(Serves 6)
2 tablespoons diced onion
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups cooked peas
1 pound salmon, cooked or canned
2 cups diced, cooked potatoes
Dash of pepper
1/4 cup sour cream

Cook onion in butter until tender but not browned. Add liquid from cooked or canned peas and cook until reduced to 1/4 cup. Place potatoes in shallow baking dish, add peas and sprinkle with pepper. Break salmon into large pieces and arrange on top of vegetables. Combine reduced liquid mixture with sour cream and pour over vegetables and fish. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 40 minutes until vegetables have absorbed most of the liquid.

Fish Fritters.

(Serves 4)
1 pound small fish
3 eggs, separated
3 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon minced garlic
1 tablespoon minced parsley
Cook fish, remove skin and bones; mash. Beat egg yolks light and thick, then add remaining ingredients. Fold in whites of eggs which have been stiffly beaten. Drop by spoonfuls into hot fat and fry until brown. Serve with tomato catsup, tartar sauce, or egg sauce.

Scallops are another excellent fish to serve when you want something different for a meal. They lack fishy taste and smell and are boneless and easy to fix:

Fricassee of Scallops.

(Serves 6)
2 pounds scallops
2 tablespoons butter
1 onion, sliced
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup stock from scallops
1 tablespoon minced parsley
Salt and pepper
1 egg yolk
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Simmer scallops 5 to 6 minutes. Melt butter, add onion and cook about 3 minutes. Stir in flour until well blended, add stock and cook until mixture thickens. Add parsley, salt and pepper. Beat egg yolk, and add to hot sauce gradually. Cook for 2 minutes, then add scallops and lemon. Serve at once.

Household Hints

A small bowl of vinegar placed in a room will absorb tobacco smoke.

To pick up broken glass from the floor, wet a newspaper and gently wipe up the glass with it.

Line the container in which you remove ashes from the furnace with wet paper to keep down the dust.

In wringing out pillow cases in the laundry, always insert the closed end into the roller first. This will prevent possible bursting of the seams.

So you are having trouble starting wooden screws with a screw-driver? Well, put them through a piece of cardboard first and then hold the cardboard while the screw is starting into the wood.

CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1944

NUMBER 46

Sixth War Loan

Drive Starts

Monday, Nov. 20th

District Thirteen of the Alabama War Finance Committee will back to the limit the "Alabama First" slogan in the Sixth War Loan drive.

District Thirteen will meet the challenge of Alabama's wounded—the challenge which asks "So You Think It's Over"—by marshalling every idle dollar and turning it into a healing as well as a fighting dollar, announced John P. Furniss, district manager.

Composed of Chilton, Perry, Marengo, Dallas and Wilcox counties, District Thirteen intends to show its fighting sons, and those who already have suffered wounds at the hands of the Japs and Germans, that their sacrifices are not going unheeded here at home, he said.

At a meeting in Selma, district and county War Bond leaders resolved to surge ahead toward the state's "Alabama First" goal, mapping campaign plans and organization strategy to assure a quick victory in the Sixth War Loan.

Chilton County's official quota was announced as: Official E Bond quota $180,000; Victory E Bond quota $308,000; official total quota $488,000; Victory total quota $608,000.

COUNTY WAR CHEST

CHAIRMAN REQUESTS ALL WORKERS TURN IN COLLECTIONS

All Community War Chest Chairmen and all other War Chest workers that have funds on hand are asked to please turn in these funds to the War Fund Treasurer, Mr. Frank Callen, at the Peoples Savings Bank or to the County Chairman at the Yellow Front Store.

It is very necessary that this be done at the earliest possible moment. Funds that are not in the bank can not be counted against the quota. We lack several hundred dollars yet. However it is thought that if all workers will turn in their collections that we may have enough to reach our quota. The Sixth War Loan drive is about to begin and the War Chest Drive must be completed at once.

HILLBILLY RAMBLERS TO PLAY AT BAKER SCHOOL

The Hillbilly Ramblers will be at Baker School, Friday night, Nov. 17, at 7:30 o'clock with a new concert. Admission 15c and 25c.

To the People of this Community

The Victory Volunteer goes by many names in the Sixth War Loan. Sometimes he or she is called a Gallant, sometimes a Blue Star Brigadier, or perhaps a Bondholder. Whatever the designation, he or she is performing a practical patriotic service in the community in the next few weeks you will meet many of them at work in the theatres, at your workshop, in the banks and in your home.

Remember one thing: you do not do them a favor when you buy an extra War Bond. You help your country, your fighting relatives and friends and yourself. The Victory Volunteer gives you the time and his energy in a great cause. He or she makes it easy for you to do your duty by buying at least one extra $10 War Bond over and above your regular Bond purchases.

EVENING SCHOOL FOR COLORED FARMERS OPENS NOVEMBER 16, 1944

The Chilton County Training School Community Evening School for adult farmers, both men and women will open November 16, at 8 o'clock.

Our theme for the session is as follows: "Make Home More Livable", to the farm men and women in the Training School Community as well as those throughout Chilton County, here is a tremendous job confronting us and we must combine our efforts, our thoughts, and our time, to plan to carry on in a successful manner. There are those who are depending on us. Have we considered their dependence to the extent that the urge has penetrated deep enough to move us off in "double-time," with a well planned program that will prove advantages to all concerned?

Let us meet and organize as never before on the above mentioned night. The home and the farm must harmonize for success. Let us start now and plan for our vegetable plants and crops in 1945.

If the home is comfortable, the work is easier. Let us help each other to do, our share. "Study yourselves to be workmen approved unto God that needeth not to be ashamed."

We are expecting Rev. Bennie Sanders to speak to us on the opening night, so we are counting on you to be at your post and help us carry the ball across the goal.

Thanks to you in advance for your attendance.

Rose V. Lee, Teacher of Voc. Home Eco.

B. T. Whittington, Teacher of Voc. Agr.

Football Season AT HOME

The Clanton Tigers will be out to annex their sixth victory Friday night of this week when they take on the foot ball lads from Wetumpka. Last year Wetumpka won on their own field and this year Clanton will be trying to even the score. The locals have won five games to date while losing two. Selma and Hurt have scored wins over them. Wetumpka has a rugged team this year and has been winning consistently all season. The tigers will have a full evening's work if they stop the lads from down the river.

Wednesday night of next week the Clanton boys will close the foot ball season with the team from Prattville. This game was moved over from Sept. 29th due to rain. The Prattville team is plenty big and heavy and has been giving every team trouble it has played during the year.

Both games will begin at 8 o'clock.

To the People of this Community

Five billion dollars of the 14 billion dollars our country needs to press the war against our enemies must come from individual investors. That sounds like a lot of money. Actually success or failure of the Sixth War Loan is up to each individual American.

Every war loan has been oversubscribed because Americans by the millions have shared its responsibility. Americans such as you have recognized the need of extra War Bond purchases over and above their normal payroll savings.

There is no such thing as a little fellow in a War Bond drive. Your War Bond purchases, multiplied by the War Bond purchases of your friends and neighbors, become fighting power which saves lives of Americans on the battlefronts and brings us nearer our common objective.

FDR SWEEP:

Dems Gain

Showing almost the same strength as in 1940, President Franklin D. Roosevelt won his bid for a fourth term hands down, while Democratic strength was increased in both the house and senate.

With FDR polling a tremendous vote in the nation's large metropolitan areas, he overcame Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's edge in the rural districts, where the latter did not run entirely up to form.

Conceding defeat early in the morning of November 8, Governor Dewey declared the Republican party emerged from the election revitalized, then asked for divine guidance of the President in the difficult years to come.

EUROPE:

Bloody Fairland

Pine and fir woodlands glistened brilliantly on the eastern edge of the Hürtgen forest below Aachen after all-night rains, but death stalked this fairland.

Guarding the gateway to the vital Rhineland center of Cologne, the area was bitterly defended by the Germans, who brought up additional forces to hold down the doughboys' relentless advance.

As the enemy grouped toward the east, U. S. artillery pumped smoke shells into German positions to direct dive-bombers, who then came arching in to drop their explosives and strafe enemy columns.

As is the case of all wars, little places made big news, with such obscure towns as Vossenack and Schmidt gaining attention as pivot points in the fighting. Neither side asked quarter thereabouts, as infantry crept forward under heavy artillery and air bombardment, only to find stubborn machine gun and mortar fire.

In Holland, Allied troops completed occupation of the southwestern portion of the country after the German withdrawal. With the enemy knocked off of both banks of the Scheldt river leading to the big port of Antwerp, Allied minesweepers cleaned the vital waterway for a resumption of traffic.

Although describing fighting on the western front as local in character, the Germans did not view it without apprehension, claiming that Allied objectives were to gain springboards for a general grand offensive and that they were using not more than 25 per cent of their troops.

As a result of recent fighting, the British 2nd army in Holland improved its position for a drive around the northern Siegfried line of Kleve down into the Ruhr. The U. S. 1st army was poised for a thrust at Cologne; the U. S. 3rd maneuvered for an advance on the coal-laden Saar basin, and the U. S. 7th fought to the threshold of the Vosges mountain passes into southern Germany.

At Austrian Gateway

On the eastern front, fighting centered around the once happy Hungarian capital of Budapest, gateway to Austria. With the Russians battering at the city, the Nazis called upon reinforcements to check their drive.

As the Reds threw shells into the capital, and their war planes bombarded it, thousands of panicky residents streamed westward from the metropolis. A leftist revolt to take over and rout Ferenc Szalasi's puppet government failed, and Hungarian generals whose loyalty was doubted were executed.

FARM WAGES:

Rates Vary

That larger or more productive farms within an area tend to pay farmers higher wages than do the smaller ones is strongly suggested by the findings of a recent study of various aspects of farm wages, the department of agriculture reported. Farms with larger or more profitable operations can better afford to employ higher-grade workers and can outbid for the services of workers of equal quality.

PACIFIC:

Fanatical Foes

Even as swarms of aircraft fought overhead in the Philippines, equally bitter fighting raged on the ground, with U. S. forces striving to clear the northwestern part of Leyte island.

Having cleared the northeastern portion, doughboys moved on the other half after rounding the end of the mountain range below Carigara Bay, and pressing down the Ormoc valley, where the enemy was well established in hill positions.

In pressing down the Ormoc valley, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command called upon heavy concentrations of artillery to smash Jap entrenchments and rake their supply lines from the little port of Ormoc where they had previously landed troop reinforcements.

Other doughboys seeking to reach Ormoc through the mountains from the southeast met fanatical Japanese hazard attacks, with sword-waving enemy officers leading chanting, shrieking, yelling troops in charges upon U. S. positions. One impassioned Jap clambered atop a U. S. tank and tried to saw off the big gun muzzle with his sabre before being picked off by fire. Still another Jap climbing onto a tank seized communication apparatus and sought to direct the driver into political broadcasts before he was discovered and shot.

Pressing continued dogged Jap resistance, was the appointment as commander in chief of enemy forces in the Philippines of Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, who spurred the early conquests of those islands.

Besides lashing at shipping, U. S. carrier planes also attacked oil storage depots, shops and hangars at enemy airfields on the Philippines, meeting varying resistance.

Remaining on the job, Jap propaganda agents sent a kamikaze flyer (one who dives his plane into a target) and a sub had sunk two U. S. aircraft carriers, and another U-boat had torpedoed "several oil tankers and transports off the American coast."

Remarking on the job, Jap propaganda agents sent a kamikaze flyer (one who dives his plane into a target) and a sub had sunk two U. S. aircraft carriers, and another U-boat had torpedoed "several oil tankers and transports off the American coast."

CIGARETTES:

Short Supply

With more people smoking cigarettes, service demands greater than last year, and manpower and machinery problems besetting manufacturers, the industry has not been able to keep pace with the tremendous market, spokesmen said.

Success in selling smoking to women greatly contributed to the increase in per capita cigarette consumption from 790 in 1926 to 1,877 in 1943, it was said. From 89,400,000 cigarettes marketed in 1926, the figure jumped to 257,700,000 last year.

Although cigarette production in 1944 is expected to exceed that of 1943, almost twice the number of smokers will go to servicemen, it was said, thus limiting civilian stocks. Though wartime difficulties prohibit further increases in output, a rise in leaf tobacco production will bolster manufacturers' supplies for future use.

MISCELLANY

The colors of wild animals represent all hues of the rainbow; red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, violet, white, gray, black and white, and black.

According to recent surveys, 33,450,000 families will have flower gardens. Of these, 95 per cent in turn will at least keep their present size and 40 per cent enlarge plantings.

XMAS SHOPPING:

Toys

Although selections will be limited, supplies of toys should be ample to meet demands, with more wood and fewer paperboard items available than last year.

The trend in toys has shifted from military to construction and farm types, merchandisers said, with housekeeping and educational and pre-school toys also receiving a heavy play. Serious shortages in dolls are expected, however.

Metal toys will continue to remain scarce, but some will appear on the market as a result of the government's permission to manufacturers to use materials frozen at the start of the war. Most paperboard will be used in toys normally made of it.

Gifts

Although shortages will develop in some goods, there will be plentiful supplies of men's and women's wear on retail counters for Christmas shoppers, surveys showed.

For the little women, rayon hose, negligee, housecoats and lingerie will be available in quantity, it was revealed, while for men, neckties, scarves, robes and sweaters will be in good supply.

Although merchandisers said that there is a trend toward the purchase of utility items, such articles as decorative glassware and pottery are expected to sell heavily. On the other hand, decreases in buying of so-called victory items was predicted.

Because of limitations in some lines, buyers were again counseled to clear their shopping early.

WORK INJURIES:

Cut Output

With the manpower situation tight enough, workmen's injuries caused a loss of 58,000,000 days in 1943, with accidents generally traced to unsafe working conditions and individual carelessness.

Although 6 of 10 important war industries incurred smaller losses, 1 out of 25 workers in industry as a whole suffered disabling injuries, which are those keeping a person off a job for at least one day.

Accident rates varied widely, from almost 1 out of 5 workmen for logging to about 1 out of 50 in tank construction. A little more than 1 out of every 10 workmen in the miscellaneous lumbering products industry suffered disabling injuries while the rate for heavy ammunition was about 1 out of every 25.

With half the decrease occurring in 1942, U. S. farm production declined 4,748,000 to 25,521,000 persons in the last four years, the department of agriculture reported.

Actually, the decrease was greater, with 1,650,000 farm people entering the services and 4,650,000 moving to other parts, but this loss was balanced by 1,650,000 farm births in excess of deaths.

Entrance into higher paying industrial jobs accounted for much of the loss in farm population, it was said.

WAR LOAN:

Seek 'Easy Money'

Seeking to absorb some of the easy money now outstanding and reflected in so-called luxury spending, manufacturers have set a quota of 5 billion dollars for individuals in the Sixth War Loan drive of 14 billion dollars getting underway next week.

With the public being reminded to salt away available cash now for rainy days, the treasury has aimed at some of the money being spent on travel, amusement and other diversions.

As an indication of the extent of so-called easy money, New Yorkers wagered some 300 million dollars at racetracks in six months, with gamblers pointing out that at least three times that amount is usually bet on the outside.

The 14-billion-dollar goal of the Sixth War Loan compares with 20% billion actually raised in the Fifth; almost 16% billion in the Fourth; almost 19 billion in the Third; 18% billion in the Second, and nearly 13 billion in the First, for a grand total of about 88 billion, treasury figures revealed.

ROBOTS:

Quick Job

Guided only by army field reports and later by parts of the German mechanism, Ford engineers rushed through the construction of a jet propulsion engine for a robot bomb. To be tested by the army, the engine was built in the strictest secrecy, with only trusted production men in widely scattered sections of Ford's Detroit, Mich., plant taking note of the scores of precision parts needed.

Drawings of the jet propulsion engine were completed upon a close study of badly damaged parts and metal of the German mechanism, flown over from Britain.

SUGAR:

Supplies Tight

In a review of the sugar situation, the U. S. department of agriculture reported that the commodity will continue to be in relatively short supply so long as the Japanese control the Philippines and Java, sugar beet crops in the U. S. remain small, and the next year, Europe's imported needs are abnormally large and demand in this country is maintained at the present high level.

Robot Gives World Taste
Of the War of Tomorrow

Destructive Power of New Weapon May Be Turned Against Both Armies and Civilians in Future Conflicts.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

By the time this reaches print, the true story of the robot and the whole story, including the last chapter, may be revealed. Perhaps it will be withheld until Germany is on her knees and the heavy crosshairs which has descended over the last, desperate blows of the cornered animal can be lifted.

The part of the story which is now being revealed is that of a menace which dropped to a low in August of this year, when only 4 out of 101 bombs aimed at London reached their destination, began to rise again after that until, at this writing, V-1s are falling on the British capital and vicinity three times a week.

What is more, only the V-1s are being mentioned. Although the V-2, a rocket much larger than the V-1, was described for a while, and a more mysterious V-3 was mentioned some time ago, today no word is spoken of them. The reason mentioned is that war damages are being repaired in London by some 132,000 laborers. This total is 40 per cent of Britain's total building personnel. Only 40,000 men were employed for the work in 1941 during the battle of Britain.

The attacks now going on, like all of those since the Allies took over the invasion coasts and captured the launching sites, are made by robots launched from the backs of planes piloted by live pilots. It is generally admitted that they will keep right on coming as long as Germany is in the war. The robot war isn't over. Londoners are still moving nightly in the shadow of death.

The British formation service has released a film which tells the story of what happened when the V-1s were coming over from the launching platforms. It is a terrible human document. As one woman correspondent who has just come back from the front remarked: "That is worse than anything in France."

Broke Full Force
Of Attacks

A man who knows robots pretty well from first-hand contact told me: "If the flying bombs (V-1s) had been launched as the Germans planned to launch them, in the quantities in which they were able to produce them, and from the launching platforms already installed, they would have been sent against London at the rate of a thousand a night, every night."

That, of course, would have meant the annihilation of any city. Briefly, the developments which broke the German plan were these: In April of 1943, British secret agents stole its vague reports of German plans for some type of long-range bombardment.

Intelligence service discovered a new weapon being developed on the Baltic coast; the RAF made photographs.

Many pictures were taken and finally a large factory was discovered at Peenemuende, an island in the Baltic, with a miniature airplane-shaped jet on the ramp. Scientists deduced that the weapon produced, jet-propelled plane.

Peenemuende and other manufacturing sites were destroyed. By winter, 100 ramps were discovered similar to the one at Peenemuende all along the French coast. They were bombed, repaired, re-bombed. By the following summer new ones had been completed.

Secret service pieced together a description of the bomb. Defenses (barge balloons, etc.) were prepared.

The first robot attack began at the time of our invasion of Normandy. In the first month only 40 per cent of the bombs were brought down by defenses.

The defenses were changed; the defense belt was moved to the coast so the gunners could get an uninterrupted view of the oncoming robots. By July, 74 per cent of the robots were being brought down.

The RAF with speeder fighters helped to get many. The situation improved until August.

All this is highly condensed and only suggests the tremendous work involved as well as the loss of 450 British and American aircraft including many heavy and medium bombers, involving approximately 2,900 pilots and aircrew.

That is past history. The future, as I say, is shrouded in mystery. As for the present, the method of carrying the robots on the backs of live-piloted planes makes it possible for the enemy to approach their targets from any direction. So the attempt is made to stop the thing at source and so-called "intruder" planes try to linger over the German airbases where it is known the pick-a-backs take off and destroy them as they rise. Some are destroyed there. For the rest, it is an endless patrol of the North sea and the Heligoland Bight, searching the whole heavens for the planes themselves or trying to spot the robots after they are launched and dive-bomb them down or pick them off with anti-aircraft guns. They will entangle themselves with the wires from the captive balloons.

The robot has not yet said its last word.

Hits 'Inconsistent'
Diplomacy of U. S.

Before we can get any sort of international organization working, the United States of America, must have the confidence of the other nations of the world.

We, "US," have a pretty good reputation, a "reservoir of goodwill," as Wendell Willkie called it. But we have also a few blots on our escutcheon. And it might be well for all of us to read a book which, although I cannot agree with all its conclusions, fascinates me.

It is called "Our Jungle Diplomacy," and was written by a former member of the American foreign service, William Franklin Sands, in collaboration with Joseph M. Lallely. It made me think.

Mr. Sands' thesis is that our diplomacy has been operating "in a jungle of our own creation," and he tries in detail certain specific examples to show where he believes our diplomacy has led. His findings are startling: Japan's annexation of Korea, he says, follows the pattern laid down by the United States in regard to Hawaii. Pearl Harbor, he boldly traces back to Panama!

Mr. Sands has some rather jolting ideas on power politics. He says that although the United States has no consistent foreign policy, we have, nevertheless, indulged in power politics. But he hastens to add, power politics is not per se, unwise or immoral. (It depends on the power.)

But whatever has been the long-range effect of our diplomatic conduct in South America, Sands believes that "the chief fruit of our jungle diplomacy is the disastrous war in which we are now engaged."

I would not go so far as to say that a less jungle diplomacy on our part alone could, under existing world conditions, have preserved the peace in the face of a confirmed aggressor, but I must admit that our statesmanship has not acted as much of a pacifier so far.

Sands quotes the famous saying of the great military authority, von Clausewitz, to the effect that "war is the continuation of a nation's policy by forcible means," and then he says that since we had no policy to extend the war, the Pacific is an extension of Japanese policy. Sands also (and makes a very convincing argument) that that point was clear when the Japs took Korea 40 years ago.

And then he comes to this striking conclusion:

"Two courses were open to us . . . we might have prepared to challenge the rising power of Japan . . . or we might have adopted a policy 'of gradual retreat in the Pacific and of genuine conciliation in the Americas, which might have enabled us to avoid the clash of power politics in the Far East, might have made the Pacific more plain, and might have made our moral position less equivocal in Latin and Asiatic eyes.'"

Read "Our Jungle Diplomacy" as an stringent to inflated national egotism, and the rest of the book is a refreshing mental menthol.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Some 11,000 practical farmers in two-thirds of the nation's counties, cooperating with the department of agriculture extension service, are checking land values and other factors in preparation for service as personal advisers to veterans interested in farming.

Japanese papers now number only two pages a day.

The median level of education of American soldiers in this war is the second year of high school. In 1918 it was the sixth grade.

The Japanese have announced that they are planning to manufacture large quantities of "synthetic beer" that will be shipped to the fighting front to "comfort" Japanese soldiers.

Produce for Baptist Orphanage to be Collected

NOVEMBER 22

The produce for our Children's Home at Troy will be collected at Thorsby, Clanton and Verbena on Wednesday, Nov. 22nd. The Clanton and Unity Associations always combine their efforts through churches every year in this important work.

The produce will be collected on the same day at all places mentioned above. Heretofore the goods have been mostly sent in by freight, but it will be carried this year by truck.

Pastor Dailey of Thorsby will look after the produce at that place. The official representatives, M. Lockhart and J. Watts Moore will work jointly at the peach packing house in Clanton where the produce will be collected there, and Mr Q. C. Meroney will be in charge of the produce at Verbena.

All the churches of both associations have been recently notified by card, but this is another reminder that someone be sure to take this matter up with their respective churches and see to it that your church is represented at the most convenient place mentioned above.

It is very, very important that all fruit in glass be thoroughly packed. It is not so much trouble for each church to pack a small lot of fruit, but it is a real problem to pack several hundred jars when it is brought and sat out on the platform. It will be highly appreciated if you will see to this.

There are four items that are not so badly needed at the home as others. They are: tomatoes, peach, grapes and blackberries. Vegetables and dried fruits as well as feedstuff is needed most. But let us be remembered that whatever is sent will gladly be carried to the Home.

There are plenty of empty jars at Mothers' Warehouse in Clanton that can be secured by those who desire to take them to fill for the home.

Let us see if we can't get some more jars. If you wish to send jars, it will be taken care of by those who are in charge at the peach packing house and sent in to the Home. The representatives, M. Lockhart and J. Watts Moore, Representatives.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1. Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion, thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.

2. Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic cramps.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

Rev. Dr. W. Haskew, D.D.

Read this old fable and think of what you are in life. One day a cold firebrand and a burning lamp started out together to see what each could find, and when the day was over the smutty old chunk where once fire burned, sat down and wrote in it's diary that it had found nothing but darkness that day. Everywhere there was darkness. The lighted lamp also returned when the day was over and wrote in it's journal that it had found light on every yard of the journey that day. What made the difference? The old smutty chunk carried no light and there was no light, while the lamp carried its light and there was light everywhere. We make our days by what we carry with us. Carry no joy, and no happiness will return.

The phone rang at a large concert hall and a lady's voice was heard to say, "At your hall last night I lost a valuable diamond and I want you to see if it can be found." The theatre manager replied, "Hold the line and I will see." Search was made and the stone was found. He hurried to the phone to inform the lady, but when he called she was not there. He sought everywhere that he knew to find the owner, but she could not be found. She did not follow up her call. How often do we act that way when we make a request of our Father. We fail to follow up our call.

Did you know that the best steel is the steel that has suffered the most. It has been in the furnace again and again, it has often been on the anvil, often in the jaws of the vice; it has felt the teeth of the rasp it has been ground by emery; hammered and filed until it hardly knows itself, and when it comes out as one of the best barber razors. Oh that we could know that what we call our misfortunes often prove to be God's best blessings to us. Our hardships become the moulders of our souls to give us durability and power.

On the way to a party a young man said to himself, "If my girl does not drink tonight, I will not." She was offered the whiskey but she gave back a firm, "No thank you." When the boy was offered whiskey he gave back the same reply. That night that young lady pulled her boy friend thru. If girls did not drink today, we would not have so many drinking young men.

1945 FOOD SUPPLY IS EXPECTED TO EQUAL THAT OF 1944

Auburn, Ala. --- Estimates reaching here from the economists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture indicate that the total civilian supply of food will continue about the same as this year.

Very broadly and briefly here's the national food supply outlook for meats, poultry and eggs, milk and cream, butter and lard, fruits and vegetables.

On meats for the civilian: Next year, the economists say: Moderately more beef and veal, considerably less pork, and moderately less lamb and mutton. In all, less meat per person next year, but more than average in the years before the war.

Poultry and eggs: Economists expect civilians will eat at least as many eggs per person as this year, but a little less chicken.

Milk and cream: About the same next year as this.

Butter and lard: Less butter and moderately less lard is in prospect for civilians in 1945.

Fruits about the same as this year. Probably more citrus.

The economists doubt that civilians will get as many fresh vegetables as in this year of record acreages and high yields, but civilians will probably eat more vegetables than they did before the war.

Sen. Bankhead Endorses Farm Membership Drive

Following statement was just made by R. M. Rober, President of the County Farm Bureau, from Sen. Bankhead in reference to the importance of a STRONG Farm Membership.

"I favor membership by farmers in organizations because unorganized groups cannot effectively present their views to Congress and State Legislatures in the interest of agriculture, producers, and cannot adequately influence the passage of legislation hostile to their interests. The number of members of any organization, whose representatives appear before a Congressional Committee, is one of the first considerations asked by the members of the Committee. The Committee wants to know how many people the witness represents.

Many measures will come before the next Congress of importance to Agriculture. I hope the Alabama Farm Bureau will greatly increase the number of its members.

There are many reasons why Alabama farmers should join with their fellow farmers in this growing movement throughout the United States to have the interest of rural people adequately and effectively represented in the consideration of the many post-war subjects which must be considered."

J. H. BANKHEAD, U. S. Senator.

FOLK & THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Remember Joe Ware? We ran across Joe in Birmingham last Saturday morning. He has just returned from several months overseas. Looks good and is okay except for a Jap souvenir in his head. Left quite a scar but Joe won't talk about it much. Says he is keeping that "under his hat."

Then there is the story about the small business man who sold his business and promptly re-invested his money in a skunk farm. "Now the government will keep it's nose out of my business," he said.

Going around town, too, is the report that Hitler has shaved off his mustache. He thought it looked too much like Dewey's.

Bob White and the Mrs. asked us out last week to see some souvereigns sent them from the South Pacific by their oldest son. We haven't been able to make it yet but we are anxious to see it all. From their personal account it sounds very interesting and we'll tell you more later. Last year Charlie who is in India sent them a whole raft of stuff which was carved from ivory. Which was very beautiful. We imagine this stuff taken off dead Japs isn't so beautiful, but tell a much more important, if tragic story. We say Bob down at the blacksmith shop the other morning having the sharp edge taken off the long knife that the Japs carry. Just in case Mrs Bob catches up with him and craves his scalp.

We're sorry to learn of the serious illness of Judge L. H. Reynolds. No man has done more for Chilton County than has the Judge. No man is prouder of his county than he. From the bottom of our hearts we wish Judge Reynolds a speedy recovery and hope that he enjoys many more years of serving his county, his state and his nation. He is a true, patriotic American.

This ain't nice -- He, "Give us a kiss like a nice little girl," She—"All right, but you'd like it better if I gave you one like a bad little girl."

How about some peanuts for a subscription to the NEWS? In years past we have had more peanuts than we knew what to do with, but this year seems like everyone must be hoarding their old peanuts. Come on. Bring them in. We'll allow you market price for them.

One of the nicest storekeepers in town is M. T. Holliman at the Yellow Front Store. Courteous, efficient, with a wide experience in store managing, Mr. Holliman is a man you will enjoy doing business with. Make him a visit, talk to him personally. You'll agree, and you'll continue to trade at his store. This does not constitute an endorsement by the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps. We're just trying to sweet-talk him into saving us some cigars next week.

We're glad that Rev. Lloyd and Mrs. Lloyd have been returned to Clanton for another year. They are two lovely people and we wish them every success in their work here, the coming year.

NEWS OF—VERMONT—SCHOOL

The attendance at Vermont school is still good. We finished up our Junior Red Cross enrollment.

Vermont boys played Enterprise in basketball Friday, Nov. 10. Enterprise winning 28-16. We enjoyed being with Enterprise very much.

Our former teacher, Mr. Broadhead is still in California. We enjoy reading the letters he writes us.

The sixth, fifth, fourth and third grades had charge of the Chapel programs last week. We enjoyed it very much.—Virgil Chambers, reporter.

When giving gifts of homemade articles include a few scraps of the material for mending or remodeling.

and Mrs. A. P. Turner.

Mrs. Tommie Joe Fulford has gone to New Jersey to be with her husband.

Mrs. Barney Mizell spent the day in Selma last week. We are glad Frances Bryant is much better, he got his arm broken a few weeks ago.

When making wash dresses it is a good idea to sew an extra piece of the material to the underside of the hem. In this way the material will be washed with the rest of the dress and will therefore match perfectly for patching later.

DR Victory As Dems Gain In Congress

Sweeping into office many senators, representatives and governors, favorable to President Roosevelt's foreign policy, the Democrat's presidential and vice presidential candidates received a total of 413 electoral votes, or 36 less than received in 1940.

While President Roosevelt's vote was less than in 1940, he will have with him a far more friendly congress than has been true for several years.

GAIN GOVERNORSHIPS

Unless late servicemen votes change the picture, which is not considered likely, the Democrats will have a total of 25 governors to 23 for the Republicans, as against the previous listing of 26 Republicans and 22 Democrats. Republican ex-servicemen were defeated in Ohio, Massachusetts, Missouri, Idaho and Washington. The Republicans captured the governorship in Indiana and North Dakota from the Democrats. It is possible that the 15,000 servicemen votes in Utah may change the present line-up.

ROBERT PAIGE has climbed to success in the movies the hard way; he made nineteen pictures in two and one-half years, none of them strictly Grade A. But the break he finally got worth the struggle was the role of the popular Deanna Durbin in "Can't Help Singing," a technicolor musical on which Universal spared no expense. Bob's an extremely likable young man whose greatest cross is the fact that because of stomach ulcers he was turned down flat for the armed forces. He's doing a whale of a job, entertaining at camps and hospitals, but says he knows every man there is wondering why that big husky — he stands six feet two — isn't in uniform. He would be if he could!

Years ago Henry Gladstone, Mutual network commentator, included among his boyish hobbies the two sports of harness racing and dog breeding. Now they're paying dividends. Pathe News has announced that Gladstone will be the commentator for two new films, "Harness Racing" and "School for Dogs," both of which are slated for national release this month.

Gloria Dea, who plays a clown-dancer in Charles R. Rogers' "Delightfully Dangerous," worked in the daytime; her fiancé, Jack Statham, an orchestra leader, worked at night. And they wanted to get married. But they couldn't cope with the time problem. So Rogers held up the picture for 20 minutes recently while the ceremony was performed, with Connie Moore acting as official witness.

Hal Walker, assistant director at Paramount for 14 years, was made a director at the urgent request of Bing Crosby and Bob Hope. His first picture is "Road to Utopia," not yet released, said to be the best of all their "Road" pictures.

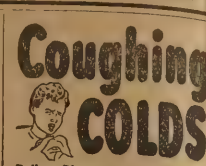

Alan Ladd's collecting signatures of movie stars, and he really works hard at it. When he started "Two Years Before the Mast" his little daughter Alana's Irish nurse handed him her autograph book and firmly requested that he fill it for her. Good nurses are rare — so Ladd takes the book along whenever he goes anywhere where he's likely to encounter movie celebrities, and the nurse is happy.

Bob Hope, star of Samuel Goldwyn's "The Princess and the Pirate," so far is the only representative of the show world to have his statue in "The Living Hall of Washington, 1944," collection of 50 statues of notable men in wartime in the Smithsonian institution. Sculptor Max Kalish posed him in that Hope calls "My ladies and gentlemen gesture" — with hands clasped.

You'll see Fred MacMurray with a luminous face in "Murder, He Says," a face guaranteed by Paramount for $1,000,000. Studio technicians figured out that they could coat Fred's face with phosphorus mixed with grease paint, ignoring the fact that Peter Whitney was to hurl a blazing torch at him, missing him—but possibly igniting the phosphorus. Executives got jittery—hence the insurance.

The October Network Hooperatings are pretty interesting. "When a Girl Marries," by Elaine Carrington, leads the list of the top 10 time shows, with "Kate Smith Speaks" next, and "Our Gal, Sunday" in third place. "Stars Over Hollywood" leads Saturdays. The program having the most women listeners per set is "Songs by Morton Downey"; for the men it's "Cedric Belfrage."

ODDS AND ENDS—Henry McNamara, poem-reciting Englishman on "It Pays to Be Ignorant," has an ambition, to beat his wife at golf—the women's Eastern champion. Frank Farnum, Western star of silent films, made his comeback in Columbia's "Tonight and Every Night." Rita Hayworth picture: Farnum's 19-year-old daughter, Jerry, makes her dancing debut in the same film. Paulette Goddard has had the same dressing room ever since she's been at Paramount; other stars have changed with every increase in pay. . . . Claudette Colbert loves to design her own dresses—but her dressmaker refuses to follow Claudette's designs.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Many rubber items in common use are shaped at the factories in extruding machines, which in general appearance and action are much like the ordinary kitchen most grinders. Rubber, mixed with chemicals, is extruded in any shape desired—round, square, rectangular or tubular.

The critical operating temperature in a tire is about 240 degrees at its hottest point, and is reached quicker in a synthetic rubber tire than in one made of natural rubber. Speed, load and inflation are chief factors in developing tire heat, which accounts for tire users being cautioned about respecting them.

Correct?

Captain—What would you do if I walked by at night when you were on guard duty and you called "Halt" three times and I kept going?

Rookie—I'd call the corporal of the guard, sir.

Captain—Why call him?

Rookie—To haul away your dead body, sir!

Grocer—Why do you say that?

Bill—No. What are they?

Joe—He would and she would!

Thanksgiving Favorite... Turkey With Cranberries! (See Recipes Below)

Turkey Talk

This time every year we set aside a day of thanks—thanks for the bounty of the year, our good fortune, our harvest. We may have worried about ration points, about balancing the budget, but hasn't it been a good year in spite of it all? Yes, so good!

Our day of thanks is appropriately celebrated with as good a feast as can be set upon the table. The turkey is frequently the queenly bird that sets the tone for the whole dinner, so let it be proud and beautiful.

To Roast Turkey.

Rub inside cavity with salt, 1/4 teaspoon or less to each pound of bird. Place enough dressing in the neck to fill the cavity nicely. Fasten skin to the back. Stuff cavity well but do not pack too tightly. Truss, then grease skin with unsalted fat which has been melted. Lay in pan on a rack, preferably on one side, back up. Or, place in V-shaped rack breast down, and keep in this position throughout the roasting period.

Cover with fat moistened cloth, then roast at constant temperature until tender, turning bird to the opposite side, still back up. Turn bird breast up when about half done. Do not sear, cover or add water to the pan. Sprinkle melted fat on cloth as it dries out.

Cut trussing string between drumsticks after about an hour of roasting. This releases the drumsticks slightly for better cooking of the thigh, improves the appearance of the bird on the platter and facilitates carving.

Testing for Doneness.

Move the leg by grasping end bone. If the drumstick joint breaks or moves easily, the turkey is done. If a thermometer is used, it should register an internal temperature of 190° F. when placed inside in center of inside thigh muscle. If placed in the center of the stuffing, it should register 180 degrees F.

Roasting Time Table

Weight	Oven Temperature	Total Roasting Time
8-10 lbs.	325 deg. F.	3-3 1/2 hrs.
10-14 lbs.	325 deg. F.	3 1/4-4 hrs.
14-18 lbs.	300 deg. F.	4-5 hrs.

Speaking of Stuffing

There are several different types of stuffing which may be used for the bird. There is the basic bread stuffing which may be varied in at least five different ways:

(For 12-16 lbs. of turkey)
1 1/2 pounds loaf bread, stale

Lynn Says:

Trussing Turkey: Insert needle through breast through rib at the base of the thighs. Draw cord through and pull string across by pulling cord through openings formed by folding wings triangular shaped onto the back. The needle does not go through the flesh here. Tie cord at the side (where needle was first inserted) making body of bird compact. Put in part of dressing through vent opening. Then insert needle between two bones at each drumstick joint and bring cord around to the tail, through the backbone. Tie securely.

The neck opening offers a place to insert part or all of the stuffing which should be filled to make breast and neck well rounded.

Fold neck skin under wing tips and string to keep in stuffing and make a nice appearance. After roasting remove cord before serving.

3/4 pound butter or substitute
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/4-1/2 teaspoon each, marjoram, sage or 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1/2 cup minced onion

Cut bread into small cubes, with crust removed, if desired. Drop into a large mixing bowl. Add butter which has been cut into cubes. Measure seasonings and blend with bread and butter. Mix in onion and stuff bird.

Variations

Celery: Add 2 cups finely chopped celery which has been sautéed partially.

Eggs: Add 4 well beaten eggs. Oysters: Add 1 pint or more of drained oysters, chopped or left whole if small.

Add raw or preheated in 2 table-spoons of the butter.

Sausage: Add 1/2-1 pound sausage meat or tiny sausages cooked until browned and thoroughly done. Break meat into small chunks before cooking. Omit or reduce butter.

You can add more holiday spirit to your meal if you bring glorious red cranberries, spiced with lemon and cloves to your turkey dinner as a relish:

Spiced Cranberries. (Makes 1 quart)

- 2 1/2 cups sugar
- 1/2 cup water
- 2 2-inch sticks cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon whole cloves
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- Grated rind of 1 lemon
- 4 cups fresh cranberries

Combine sugar, water, spices, lemon juice and rind and boil together 5 minutes. Add cranberries and cook slowly, without stirring until all the skins pop open. Chill to serve.

In the matter of pumpkin pie, either pumpkin or cooked squash may be used. Be sure that it is seasoned according to the recipe as most people object to a too prominent flavor of spices that jumps out at them when they eat the pie:

- Pumpkin Pie.
- 3/4 cup brown or white sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ginger
- 2 whole eggs or 4 yolks, beaten
- 1 1/2 cups sieved pumpkin
- 1 1/2 cups scalded cream or milk

Mix sugar, salt and spices thoroughly. Add eggs. Blend and then beat in pumpkin pulp. Add scalded cream. Have previously prepared pastry lined pan that has been allowed to dry in a refrigerator for several hours. Pour in about 3/4 of the pumpkin mixture. Place on bottom of preheated oven, 400 degrees F. from which rack has been removed. Quickly pour in remaining mixture. Bake 10-12 minutes. Place pie on a rack quickly replaced in oven. Bake until custard is set. Cool on a rack.

VOLUME XXII

CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1944

Parents Urged To Protect Children From Diphtheria

Health Officer regrets to report that in different parts of county and in the adjoining counties there has been a marked rise in diphtheria cases, and some of these have not recovered. It is with shame that the Health Department has to make the above announcement. In a number of cases had the family heeded appeals and instructions from the time, this disaster could have been avoided. Eighty per cent of the cases of diphtheria occur between the ages of six months and 4 years, and more than half have had an opportunity to receive the services or protection from the time the child is 6 months old up to 6 years of age. As less than 30 percent of the pre-school population has not the protection available at this office and the offices of the various doctors in the county, the tragedy of this disease will continue to occur. The method of getting this protection is very simple and that is required is that a child 6 months old be carried to the family physician or the Health Department and receive a (shot) of diphtheria and a fortifying dose repeated as early as possible after an interval of 30 days. Let your Health Officer urge that take part of the responsibility in protection of the child which is up to you and dependent upon your protection and guidance in all aspects of its life today. This service is always available during morning hours from 8:30 to 12:00 at the Health Department. M. Moore, M. D. County Health Officer.

To the People of this Community

"Sad little personal belongings are strewn all over these bitter winds." Thus wrote Ernie Pyle from a beachhead in Normandy. More than 2,000 bundles of these belongings, carefully collected and packed by the armed forces, are sent monthly from a Kansas City depot to homes throughout America. That's the current price of victory over enemies who forced these "housewives" war upon you are enveloped with heartaches and draped with tears. How long this terrible ordeal stays in business is up to you. Every second prolongs the suffering. Every extra $100 War Bond in the Sixth Extra Loan helps to shorten the fighting. Can you do less than lend your money for speedy victory?

Making Quota Early, Theme For Sixth War Loan

The Chilton County War Finance Committee, headed by Chas. Cox and Vic Heard, has adopted as its slogan for the 6th War Loan: "Chilton County Makes Quota Early." As this is written news has been received that Winston County has already made its quota. Chilton that is a challenge! In adopting this theme the committee feels it will be a special tribute to Chilton County's own sons and daughters in the Service. These boys and girls who are taking Chilton County's place at the battle fronts will be proud to say, "We are from Chilton County, Ala. She was one of the first counties in the nation to make her quota in the Sixth War Loan." Chilton County, we must not let their pride down. Let's do this job right, right now! They are doing their job right for us.

C. C. H. S. Parent-Teachers Meet

On Tuesday afternoon of last week the High School Parent-Teachers Association was called to order by Mr. Patterson Hicks, who introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Roswell Owens, and the Glee Club. Mrs. Owens gave one of the most inspiring talks ever given on "Children and Religion". The Glee Club under the capable direction of Mrs. Raymond Mims, sang several numbers which were lovely and the voices were also lovely. Miss Mary Clyde Mims and Joe Mullins, Jr., accompanied the Glee Club on the piano. Following the program a brief business session was held with the President, Mrs. J. E. Gowan, presiding. The minutes were read by the secretary Miss Margarite Perry and reports were made. Mr. W. A. Guldge gave a brief talk following the business session and the meeting was dismissed by Mrs. Gowan.

Farm Bureau Homecoming Is Big Success

The Home-coming Celebration, sponsored by the Chilton County Farm Bureau last Friday, was a great success with several thousand folk attending. The program got under way about 10:30 with the Rev. S. J. Ezell's invocation, after which there was group singing, led by Mrs. R. P. Mims and music by the Chilton County High School Band. Principal speakers on the program were Patterson Hicks, school principal, making the welcome address; P. O. Davis, director of the Alabama Extension Service, whose topic was, "The Business of Farming," and John-L. Liles, Jefferson County Agent, who spoke on, "Farmers Working Together." Hundreds of pounds of barbecue with camp stew was served to the crowd at noon, after which some of Chilton County's finest Dairy Cattle was exhibited. All in all, it was a most successful day and Chilton County Farm Bureau officials along with other prominent merchants and business men should be congratulated on this first Annual Chilton County Homecoming.

AMERICAN LEGION TO SPONSOR PROGRAM

To insure that no hospitalized service person is missed this year, the American Legion Post No. 6 is joining in the National Program of seeing that Christmas gifts are provided for all wounded, sick or disabled service men and women in Government hospitals. This program has been given nationwide publicity by Eddie Cantor in his radio programs. At the last meeting of Post No. 6 Julian Evans was elected chairman and N. J. Robinson of Cooper as vice-chairman of this program for Chilton County. The Legion asks that all who will send a gift to make some man or woman happier at Christmas. Have their gifts wrapped and ready not later than December 20. Special tags have been printed for each gift, leaving space for name of giver. Gifts will be carried by truck to all Veterans Hospitals in Alabama. Let us all give to those who gave.

W. M. POLK THANKS VOTERS

I wish to take this opportunity to thank the many citizens of Chilton County for their loyal support of the Democratic Ticket and their support of me, personally, in the November 7th election. I will strive in every way to merit your confidence.—W. M. Polk.

MR. DERAMUS, WE'RE SORRY

Last week we accidentally stated in the item about Bob Oglesby's new home being across the street from Farmers Gin & Warehouse Company. "This should have read, 'Plante a Gin & Warehouse Company.'" Mr. Deramus, we're sorry.

Amendment Four Fails To Pass By Small Margin

Montgomery — Voters of Alabama ratified by an overwhelming vote a constitutional amendment exempting from poll tax soldiers of all foreign wars, past, present and future, it was shown by official tabulation at the capital of the vote cast in the November 7 election. Under the terms of the amendment, a soldier in time of war is exempt from poll tax while still in the service, as well as after being honorably discharged, the amendment providing that poll tax shall not be required "after the beginning of such service." The amendment also applies to those who entered the armed forces more than a year before Pearl Harbor, or between September 16, 1940, and December 8, 1941, as well as after the actual outbreak of war. The amendment, No. 2 of those submitted to voters in the recent election, was voted by a vote of 143,023 for, 27,065 against. Veterans of World War I already enjoyed exemption from poll tax under an amendment adopted a few years after the last war.

Proposal to extend the term of office of Alabama sheriffs from four to six years was defeated by a close vote, the official count showed. This proposed amendment No. 4 lost with 80,181 votes against to 78,812 for.

Defeated by a decisive majority was proposed amendment No. 3 providing that political parties polling as much as 25 per cent of a county's vote in several elections must select their candidates in party primaries. Opponents argued that such change would be unwise at a time when primary laws of Alabama and the South are under fire from outside critics, and the proposal was rejected, 76,819 votes against to 47,209 for.

Three other proposed amendments were ratified: No. 6, doing away with the requirement that State bank charters must be renewed every 20 years; No. 5, abolishing the fee system in Walker county; and No. 1, abolishing the fee system in Houston county.

For president, the count showed Dewey getting more votes than Aikido did four year ago and a substantial drop in Roosevelt's vote as compared with four years ago. The vote for presidential electors was: Democratic, 198,918; Republican, 44,540; Prohibition, 1,095; and Socialist, 190. Four years ago the vote was 297,726 Democratic and 42,814 Republican.

To the People of this Community

The best way to observe the defeat of Hitler is to buy an extra War Bond. In thousands upon thousands of American homes today there is pride and sadness. From these homes have come fighting men who did bring us this far on the road to decisive victory over all our enemies. It will take more sweat, more tears, more toil, more and greater individual War Bond buying before we see Japan in the ruins these barbarians of the Pacific planned for us. How much more blood and tears depends on every individual American war worker and Bond buyer. The Sixth War Loan symbol—a bomb hurling down on the Rising Sun—can only come to reality with your individual help. Buy at least an extra $100 War Bond for the least you can do to back up your fighting men.

AT ONE of the first committee meetings of the "American Scriptures," intermission feature of the Philharmonic Symphony Sunday afternoon concerts, the distinguished council waited and waited for Carl Carmer. They swapped stories of his absent mindedness—there was the time he'd completely forgotten a faculty meeting, the time he'd interviewed a famous actress, and worn one white shoe and one black one. The famous gentlemen of the council were in something of a tizzy over the absence of the famous author who's heard in "American Scriptures." Finally they phoned him—and discovered that the meeting had been called for the following day!

Chungking, capital of wartime China, played an important role in the first American air raid on Tokyo, in 1942; it was there that Doolittle and his men were to meet after bombing the Jap capital. So Metro's "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo" was booked for a world premier in Chungking as well as in New York. Spencer Tracy has the brief but important role of Doolittle.

Johnnie Johnston, rising young movie and radio star, is proving that performers have to have the stamina of a coal heaver these days. Recently out of a hospital bed after an appendectomy, Johnston, who sings romantic songs with Paul Barlow's orchestra on the new CBS "Music That Satisfies," appeared at five shows a day at the theater where Lana Turner's "Marriage Is a Private Affair" was playing.

Phil Baker, star of CBS's "Take It or Leave It," claims he was the highest paid movie actor in Hollywood. He got eight weeks' pay for one week's work—when he reached Hollywood, the "Take It or Leave It" film was complete except for his sequence.

Johnny Morgan seems to have grabbed top place among the comedians of 1944. In addition to his Monday evening show he will soon be seen in a new Broadway musical comedy, and is headed for Hollywood in the spring.

A talented new crop of top-line performers, writers and technicians will emerge from veterans of this war, a survey of the results of the first few weeks of NBC's "Welcome Home Auditions" reveals. One of every three veterans interviewed has been found worthy of professional employment. Auditions are held Wednesday and Saturday mornings, and interviews are held in Radio City all week.

Goodman Ace, of "Easy Aces," once named a character for two of his friends, and innocently offended an individual of the same name in Brooklyn. Now, whenever possible, he has each actor use his own name. Judge Begley, Florence Halop, the secretary, and all the others are real people. Mary Hunter, who's "Marge Hallo" is an ex-convict. "Marge" was an established script name when Mary joined the cast.

ODDS AND ENDS—Tom Andrea, first member of the "This is the Army" group to receive an honorable discharge, has been assigned to a long-term contract by Warner Bros. Jack Carson gets the leading male role in "Wildcat" opposite Jean Crawford. "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" will be produced by RKO as a musical. The Air's "Grand Ole Opry" celebrated its 19th anniversary in radio November 28. Film stars Lloyd Nolan and Claire Trevor take a radio flit to cope with crime and criminals in the Mutual network thriller series, "Results, Inc." He plays a detective agency boss, and Claire, his secretary.

"HALT! Who's there?"
The sentry's cry, ringing out in the still cold night, broke into Laura's thoughts as she was hurrying home. How silly it was to have planned a surprise visit to the marine base without a telegram in advance! And here was a silly guard who would make her stop to give a password she did not know.

"I'm Laura Archer, Colonel Archer's daughter," she told the grim-faced leatherneck who was barring her path with rifle at the ready. "Advance and be recognized," he ordered and, as Laura approached, she saw that he was lean, tanned and tall. She fumbled in her purse for her identification card, then realized that it was in her traveling bag at the station.

"I'm sorry, I haven't my I.D. card, but I am Colonel Archer's daughter."

"Any other proof? Otherwise, you don't move on," the guard broke in. Laura knew she was wrong, but she wouldn't let a hooey get away with turning her from the post where her father was commanding officer.

"You just call the colonel," she ordered curtly.

"Look, lady, don't you know any less than the Skipper?" the guard asked. "I can't be waking him up at O-one-hundred to ask him to come out here."

"If you don't, you'll be up for office hours tomorrow," Laura threatened.

"Corporal of the Guard, Number Seven," the marine sang out and, when the shouts for him had echoed down the line from sentry to sentry, out of the shadows on the double came the husky noncom.

"This lady says she's Colonel Archer's daughter, Corporal, but she has no identification," the sentry reported. "She threatened me with office hours if I don't call the Skipper."

"I wouldn't call him out in this storm for another stripe," the corporal vowed. Turning to Laura he asked, "Are you really Colonel Archer's daughter? I've been here seven months and I've never seen you around."

"I've been off to school. Please let me in," Laura pleaded.

An hour later, having been grilled by the men on duty, a tired and infuriated Laura was sent to her father's quarters, where she was admitted on assurance from the sleepy colonel that she really was his daughter.

Next morning, when Laura came tripping down to her father's car, she found that square-jawed, lean and hated face behind the wheel.

"Where to, Miss Archer?" Private Gillespie queried.

"My father will be out in a minute," she answered. "The colonel will tell you where to drive."

Private Gillespie's neck reddened. He offered weakly, "I'm sorry about last night, Miss Archer, but you know the General Orders."

She turned her upturned nose toward the parade ground and began a close inspection of a platoon which was drilling there. Private Gillespie watched in the mirror. "Nice looking platoon," he ventured. "That D.I. was my bunkie in boot camp. He sure does put them through, doesn't he?" He continued his monologue, his warm drawl melting the icicles from his listener. He told her his name and about his ranch back in Texas. Then he brought up the sore subject again. "I said I was sorry about last night, Miss Archer," he began, but just then he had to spring out to open the door for Colonel Archer. He was ordered to drive to the parade ground where the colonel was to inspect the recruits completing basic training that morning.

Laura decided to see the review from the car.

The Early Shopper Gets the Toys—
There Aren't Enough for Everybody

Stock of Playthings
Is Larger Than Last Year, but Still Short

Eager-eyed kiddies will have to be content with about half as many toys this year as they used to get before the war, when they came dashing in to the parlor on Christmas morning. As everybody knows, all kinds of civilian goods are scarce, including toys.
It's a wonder, in fact, that there are any toys on the market, in the midst of a great war.

Both toy factories and toy makers are busy making war materials —percussion caps for torpedoes and shells, gas masks, and a thousand other things. They make toys out of scraps and leftovers, and substitute like wood and pasteboard. But at best they couldn't make nearly enough to satisfy everybody this year.

With wartime prosperity putting money into everyone's pocket, fathers and mothers, uncles, aunts and cousins have a good deal to spend on presents for the children in their families. But they can't buy all they want to, because there just aren't enough toys in the stores to go around. Besides this, there are two million more youngsters in the country than usual—a result of the rising birth rate of the war years.

Few Metal Playthings.
Metal toys will be represented by a few articles, but in general steel and iron playthings will be missing.

Wooden playthings like blocks are not so hard to get, but it's still a good idea to shop early. A record-breaking demand for toys of all sorts is anticipated, and many children are going to be disappointed, because of shortages.

fits, are in "fair supply," manufacturers say. Apparatus made of glass, porcelain, plastics, wood or pasteboard is being substituted for metal articles. For instance, a microscope included in some of the science sets has a plastic tube and base.

A survey of the toy supply situation conducted by the Toy Manufacturers of the U.S.A. reveals such shortages as these:

Less than 15 per cent of the normal supply of sleds with steel runners was on hand. Sleds with wooden runners will be fairly plentiful, but all in all, the total number

Planes and tanks and siege guns naturally dominate the childish mind in these war years. These model fighting machines are made of wood and cardboard. They are simple but sturdy. The WAC uniform the little girl wears is a novelty this year.

Steel-runners sleds, tricycles and bicycles, coaster wagons, construction sets, and a thousand other things will be very scarce. Some manufacturers have been able to make left-over stock of old fabricated before the war restrictions went into effect, and others are using scrap material, so a small quantity of metal toys are on the market. Back in peacetime, play-things made of cast iron, steel, copper, aluminum and so on, constituted nearly half of all the Christmas presents.

Toys made of rubber are very rare. So are plastic goods. Tires for doll buggies are being made of "mud" which is residue from reprocessed rubber, but these are about the only such articles on the market.

Wood is being used to make lots of things formerly made of metal and other scarce materials. There are trucks, for instance, of polished hardwood on sale. Tanks and siege guns, battleships, steam shovels and many other mechanical toys are made largely of wood, with metal parts. Cardboard and wood combinations are also numerous, particularly in the games division.
A cardboard and wooden circus is a favorite this year.

Enough Dolls and Teddy Bears.
Girls are more fortunate than boys this year, for dolls are being turned out in sufficient quantities to meet the demand. There are both hard and soft bodied dolls in the stores, made of everything from cotton to porcelain. The fancy models have moveable eyes, curly hair, pretty dresses and all the other trimmings. Stuffed animals are on hand in sufficient numbers to take care of ordinary demands. Teddy bears are plentiful, if it is offered for early Christmas shoppers, at least, since there are 100,000 buggies on sale throughout the country. These are made of wood, with metal wheels. Doll dishes, of china and scrap plastic, and cast-iron cooking utensils are being offered, and tiny furniture can be had.

Hobby sets, such as chemistry out-could operate their entire plant at near capacity.

Another organization busily at work on the toy situation is the Office of Price Administration. This government agency has to set fair ceiling prices on every toy item that is to be offered for sale. More than 3,000 articles have been examined and priced and many others are pending a decision. In a big warehouse in Washington OPA officials look over samples of all sorts of things many of them new to the market, such as transparent plastic ducks and giraffes, wooden telephone sets, and pasteboard dolls.
It's a big job to put fair price tags on all these things, but the OPA hopes to complete its task before Christmas.

FOLKS GATHER 'ROUND
FOR PARLOR GAMES

Games that all the family can enjoy together take the spotlight in Santa Claus' 1944 pack. Catering to the wartime necessity to "stay at home and like it," a variety of easy-to-learn, quick action parlor sports are ready to help the juvenile and grown-up contents forget about limitations on the family car and relax from worries and responsibilities.

Revivals of old favorites that were crazes in the horse and buggy age head the list of escape-type games that will be relatively abundant in a season when Santa Claus' Yuletide pack is short of a great number of familiar play materials. While great numbers of games are being sent to servicemen overseas, there are some left for the home market.

Among the parlor pastimes back in the days of the ROCK, PIT and FLINCH, but MONOPOLY, the real estate trading game, continues to hold craze honors. FINANCE is another of the robber baron speculation games that appeal to both families and service men as a happy escape.

SORRY, the English board game that won top favor during the Blitz, is another home seller this winter with American families.

For arm chair strategists there are game inventions inspired by the exploits of America's armed forces.

CAMELOT, the lively battle game, is a favorite with service men who has a large family following, too.
Some of the Christmas games will be a helpful adjunct to spelling as well as arithmetic. DIG, a streamlined word-building game that uses miniature gold miner's picks with sticky tips to grab the letters, offers opportunity for keen competition that incidentally inspires Junior to improve. CROSSWORD LEXICON, based on four-letter words built with cards, is another spelling game that provides good competition for all ages. Once the youngsters have a chance to show their mettle unself-consciously, many a parent will be surprised to find himself hard-pressed to hold his share of winner's honors.

Household
Hints

To clean under the piano, place an old sock moistened with polish over a yardstick.

A little skim milk rubbed over leather chairs several times a year will keep the leather soft and prevent cracking.

Add salt to the water in which eggs are to be cooked. This makes the shells more brittle and easier to remove.

In order not to scorch milk, rinse the pan with water for several minutes before heating the milk.

Wax your book shelves. This will permit books to slide in and out easier and cause less wear on them.

If candles are soiled, rub them with a cloth dipped in alcohol.
Or they may be rubbed with lard or other fats.

Never use a big unsightly knot when sewing. Even a tiny knot should be hidden on the wrong side. Most dressmakers do not use a knot at all in the ends of basting threads because in removing basting the knot may catch in the threads of the fabric and pull them. Three or four fastening stitches at the beginning and end of basting will hold it securely.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Bob Windham, down at City Grill wants to know the meaning of a word. We can't tell you exactly what the word was, now, but it was really a sixty-four dollar word. Seems it meant something about the illuminating of a heavenly body, or something. Anyway it was a word we hadn't used before. We got to make a note of that.

George McCain, in case you hadn't noticed, and "Chick" Fiquette have swapped homes. Olive, "Chick" and family have gone to the country to stay, while Mae, George and Co. have come back to the city. In the deal "Chick" bought the farm too. We don't know whether it was his desire to get back to the soil, (omit that 'back', we don't think he's ever been there), or whether it was a desire to enlarge his stables. Everybody is happy over the deal, anyway. And when they're happy—we're happy.

Who in the world would ever think that Red Glasscock was vain. 'Course this is supposition, but last week when Miss Kathryn Tucker, of the Birmingham News came down to take pictures of the leaders in the Farm Bureau Homecoming and Barbecue, we called Red to come around to get Miss Tucker and accompany her on her picture and story getting tour. Well, Red said he would be right around. Thirty or forty minutes later Red was up in his car, got out and came in. Now the first thing the lady said to us when he got out of the car was—quote—"That really looks like a county Agent, doesn't it?"—unquote. And did-gone if we don't believe Red went by his house and changed clothes to get his "picture took" before he came over, 'cause he really did look like a County Agent, in capital letters. Boots, kakhi trousers and all.

Mr. W. F. Glenn of Clanton, Route 4 is really a man of his word. Early last week he came by and told us that he would come Friday with some sweet potatoes. Well, neither of us thought about Friday being a big holiday at the time so it was agreeable. Friday we just happened to come to town in the afternoon and run across Mr. Glenn. He had the potatoes in his wagon and was looking for us. Of course he had found everything closed. But holiday or no holiday, he said he would bring the potatoes, and bring the potatoes, he did.

Here goes our neck again: We do not agree with those who insist on putting the cute little girls out front with the larger Band Majorettes at the football games. These larger girls work hard to fill their places and it isn't fair for the smaller girls to steal the lime-light. It is only natural that most attention go to the smaller girls when they appear along with the older ones and that is why we think the "power-that-be" should let the little fellows appear in their own turn.

Fannie Jo Broadhead is "cute as pie" in her new Majorette costume. Band leader Burton can take a bow on his work with the Band too. He has a nice little Band and one that Clanton and Chilton County should be proud of.

Good thing we got a long neck. The cutest thing in town for her sort and size is little Minnie Wade. At the half in last weeks game she stole the show. We believe she had about every fan at the game cheering for her.

Clanton was full of visitors last Friday for the Farm Bureau Homecoming and Barbecue. Among others were the Pat Smiths. Both have many friends in Chilton County and always receive a warm welcome here.

Comes a letter from Mrs. Clyde Chandler, of Billingsley, who after telling us how much she enjoys the News each week (which makes us very happy) gives us this thought to pass on to you: "LOST—Somewhere between sunrise and sunset, two golden hours, each set with sixty diamond minutes. No reward is offered, for they are gone forever."

The Office of Defense Transportation reminds us to remind you that little more than a week remains for you to meet that December 1, deadline if you are to mail your Christmas packages in accordance with their request. This will enable your presents to be delivered on time and, too, the District Office says, you will have a better selection of gifts if you shop early. So far as we are concerned, a sock is a sock, and a handkerchief is a handkerchief. Whether it be bought on December 1, or December 31.

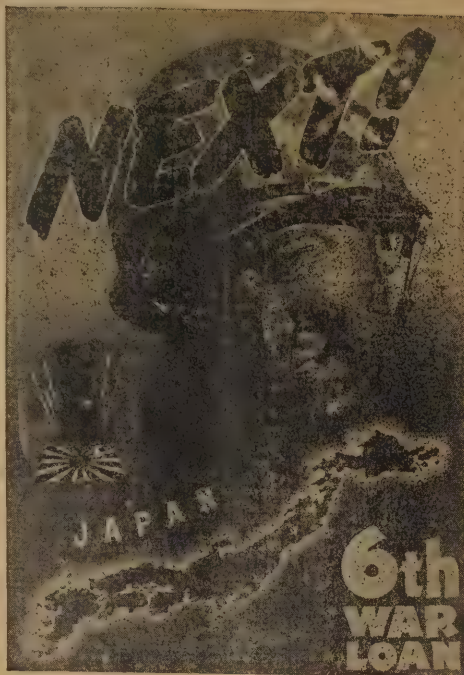

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy shown us during the illness and death of our husband and father, Mr. John W. Carter.

We also wish to thank Bro. Stuckey and Bro. Williams for their kindness. May God bless each and every one of our prayer.—Mrs. Sallie E. Carter and Family.

A moistened sponge sprinkled with mustard seed will sprout and can be used as a table decoration.

Honey should be stored in a dry place at room temperature. Otherwise, it absorbs moisture and will ferment as any sugar syrup.

6th WAR LOAN

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

The night fighting on the Normandy front is directed by one who is far away from the guns. A skilled and a well trained man is located where the sky is clear and where he has an uninterrupted view of the elements. When German plains approach, this man touches a button and the sky guns are wheeled into position and then firing starts and soon the German planes are driven from the sky, or else they come flaming down to earth. The soldiers in the gun pits do nothing but load the guns that fire the death missiles. After firing a few times the smoke envelops the gun and the men can not even see the sky. Out there on the observation place there is a man who can see and he directs the firing of the guns. Gods ministers are the men who are located where the sky towards heaven is clear. Laymen may be under a smoke screen, but why not obey the instructions of that pastor who has a clear vision of God?

I want you to recall that old-time story of the farmer who attended his first church gathering. He listened to the churchmen as they discussed the poor attendance at church and Sunday school. Then they asked the farmer to speak and this is what he said, "Folks, when I go to a farmers convention I never hear them discuss the question of how to get the animals to come to the trough. They seem to know that if they fill that trough with good food, the creatures will come to get it." I am wondering if that farmer meant to say that one reason why people do not go to God's house today is that they got so little real gospel food.

A new flagman was on the train and growing tired of carrying his lantern, he hung it up in the front of a coach and left it there. In the rear coach he met the conductor and he was asked about his light. Rather sharply the conductor said, "Keep your lantern with you, then when you need it, you will have it." Many a man seems to be a shining light on Sunday at church, but on Monday he hangs up his light and wanders off into business. Better take your religion with you in daily life, then when you need it, you will have it with you. Carry your light with you in your job.

State To Build New Home For Health Offices

Montgomery, Ala. — A movement in behalf of architecturally attractive and commodious community health centers to house Alabama's 67 county health departments was launched recently by Dr. B. F. Austin, State Health Officer.

"The people of the State have every reason to be proud of the health protection service they receive from their county health departments, but in many counties they have no reason to be proud of the quarters in which these county health units are housed," he said. "Some are crowded into the basements of courthouses and others carry on their work as best they can in congested quarters elsewhere. It is rare indeed for a county health department to have a separate building for its own exclusive use. Like the State Department of Health, these local public health agencies cannot do their best work unless they are properly housed and equipped. I hope many counties will provide new health centers for their county health departments as soon as possible when materials and supplies become available after the war."

Dr. Austin paid a tribute to Colbert county, which recently opened a community health center which he described as a model for other counties to emulate.

TAKE YOUR FERTILIZER NOW

War Food Administration WARNS... "NOW OR NEVER FOR 1945"

There's a crisis in the making!

If stocks pile up in fertilizer plants and agents' warehouses, the stream of supply will choke up. They must move fast or the lack of man-power will cause a paralyzing shortage.

Take the Chilean Nitrate situation for example. To supply the quantity needed for 1945 crops, many cargoes must be unloaded each month at each port, then moved out by train and truck for immediate allocation. It must move out of agents' hands as fast as it moves in. If not, the choke-up starts and works back to the ports, even back to the ships.

Already there's a threatened shortage of nitrogen, due to sharply increased war needs. Unless you help smash the bottle-neck by taking your nitrate as soon as it is offered, the shortage will become acute. Thousands of tons will pile up at U.S. ports or on the docks in Chile. The only place Chilean Nitrate does you any good is on your crops. Get yours now... while you can.

Storage Tips

File all materials on dry boards in barn or shed. File materials separately. Keep piles close together. Destroy the bags when you use the contents.

Buy Your Fertilizer NOW... Take it NOW... Store it Till It's Needed

This message is published to assist the War Food Administration and the fertilizer industry... to help you get the fertilizer you need.

Smokers Asked To Fight Black Market

Initial complaints of alleged illicit sales of cigarettes prompted District OPA Director Dr. A. H. Collins to caution smokers today that they alone hold the key to whether a full-fledged black market develops from the present acute shortage.

"The shortage," he said, "is obviously aggravated by smokers buying in advance of normal needs to build up personal supplies. Some are apparently willing to pay more than legal prices and are thereby sowing the seed for a black market which will eventually only deprive them further of the cigarettes they cherish."

Commenting on the initial complaints of illegal sales, Dr. Collins said OPA is investigating sales at retail and at wholesale in an effort to combat the black market threat. In promising rigid enforcement of OPA regulations, which require cigarettes to be sold at March, 1942 prices plus a small addition for certain taxes added since that date, the District OPA Director said violators are liable for criminal prosecution as well as treble damage claims.

Under existing regulations all cigarette retailers are required to post ceiling prices in plain view and are prohibited from exceeding legal price by such evasive methods as "tie-in" sales. Individuals are urged to report any suspected violations to their local War Price and Rationing Board.

Our War With Japan

The Sixth War Loan marks a new turn in the war both on the fighting and the home fronts. It points our tremendous war effort definitely in the direction of the Pacific. During the first five war loans Americans were primarily thinking in terms of beating Hitler.

Now our government asks us for a loan of 14 billion more dollars of which five billion dollars must come from individuals. Why? Haven't we nearly finished off our so-called Number 1 Enemy? Can Japan hold up our powerful war machine very long? Your son, brother and friend in his Pacific foxhole wouldn't raise such questions because they are up against realities, not day dreams. They kill or are killed. They pray every waking moment for a sky-darkening cover of friendly planes. They thank America for giving them the finest medical care in the world when their rendezvous with destiny in a Pacific jungle is at hand. They know the war with the Japs is just beginning.

Here are some other Pacific realities so that you will understand why there must be a Sixth War Loan and why it is absolutely necessary that it be a success:

The Allied Military Command has estimated that it will take years, not months, to lick Japan.

Japan's present army numbers about 4,000,000 with 2,000,000 more men available and fit for military service who haven't been called up to date. Another 1,500,000, between the ages of 17 and 20, are not yet subject to the draft.

The Jap Air Force is growing.

In addition to millions of native workers, Japan has a potential slave force of 400,000,000 conquered people. 50% of Japan's labor force is made up of women. Another 25% boys and girls under 20, the balance men. The Jap workday is twelve to sixteen hours with two days off a month. The Jap cannot leave his job, change it, or strike. The highest daily wage equals about three American dollars—30% to 75% of which goes to taxes and compulsory savings.

The Jap, as our men in the Pacific know, will fight to the death. As far as the Jap is concerned, the outer Empire—the men who defend it—are the expendables. The Jap will fight the Battle from inside the inner Empire.

The Jap believes that we shall weary of war too easily and too early.

In the invasion of France, supply ships had an overnight run to make. In the coming Battle of Japan, ships in the Pacific will have long-reached round trips that often take five months to make.

These realities are worth thinking about before you keep your home front rendezvous with a Victory Volunteer. Perhaps you will feel that the national personal Sixth War Loan objective—purchase of at least one extra $100 War Bond—is entirely too small for you. The better we face the realities confronting our forces in the Pacific the quicker the whole bloody business will be over and the sooner we will welcome home our fighting men. That's an American reality to work for with all our dollars and our sweat.

DO YOU WANT MONEY TO SPEND
LATER ? ARE YOU PATRIOTIC?
ARE YOU SAVING YOUR MONEY
NOW BY LENDING IT TO YOUR COUNTRY?

Have you ever thought "What is a War Bond?" If you have not, won't you give a few minutes of deep thinking now to this matter of great importance to you, to your country and to those boys and girls fighting for us and our country.

What is a War Bond? It is a Certificate of Deposit that draws interest, a Certificate and GUARANTEE by Uncle Sam.

1. That you have deposited that amount of money with him—loaned it to him.

2. That you can get your money back from him any time you want it after 60 days.

3. That he will pay you interest on this money at a rate higher than any other Government Bond.

4. That if you leave this money with him for 10 years he will pay you back $4.00 for every $3.00 you invest with him now.

5. That this loan to him now is a loan to help supply the vast materials needed to finish the war.

6. That you have invested in Freedom and the Future of America for your children, and the boys and girls returning home from the war.

7. That you are doing your part to back them up in their efforts to make peace and keep war from American soil.

8. That the money you have invested in these Bonds is money saved and not splurged today to create a false prosperity during war times.

9. That it is money you will have to spend when the war is over to buy things you need and can then get. In buying these things then you will be helping to make jobs for the millions now in war work, and the millions now in Service that will be needing peace time jobs. (Mr. Farmer, if you have saved in Bonds money to buy manufactured goods when the war is over those making these goods can continue to buy your products and pay you a reasonable price.)

10. That (summing up all these other guarantees) you have invested money at a PROFIT TO YOU; helped in the war effort, and that you will have money, with which to buy the many, many things that you cannot get now, but can buy after we are through BUYING WAR BONDS —If you have SAVED NOW IN BONDS!

Charlie Cox says: "To buy War Bonds will give you a clear conscience. You will not feel embarrassed when you meet a wounded soldier—of which there will be thousands."

KIDS—Don't forget to tell daddy about that fine Shetland Pony, Saddle and Bridle.

GROWN UPS — Don't forget that $50.00 Bond and that $25.00 Bond. BUY BONDS NOW!

GO IS MY PILOT

Col. Robert L. Scott

WNU RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point as a second lieutenant, Robert Scott was his pilot at Kelly Field, Texas, and takes up wings flying. When the war broke out he was an instructor in California and told he is too old for combat flying. He appeals to several generals for a chance to fly a combat plane and finally gets a break. He flies a bomber to India, where he becomes a ferry pilot but this does not appeal to him. After visiting Gen. Chennault he gets a Kittyhawk and soon becomes a "one man air force" over Burma. He is made commanding officer of the 2nd fighter group, taking over the AVG, and leaves for the Kewella area to take charge of fighter operations.

CHAPTER XVII

The surprise was that another plane had now been found several miles from the bomber. It was supposed to be a fighter, being smaller, and it had burned upon crashing. I therefore received credit for two enemy planes destroyed on my first aerial combat. I felt very proud indeed.

We found the reported prisoner, but he was dead. While being questioned he had tried to escape, had killed several Chinese, had wounded others, and had been shot mortally wounded. Lieutenant Chuck got to him before he died, but was unable to get any valuable information.

My first aerial engagement started a story in Delhi—I found out about it four months later. It had been my first aerial combat, I felt very proud indeed. We found the reported prisoner, but he was dead. While being questioned he had tried to escape, had killed several Chinese, had wounded others, and had been shot mortally wounded. Lieutenant Chuck got to him before he died, but was unable to get any valuable information.

Major Tex Hill was the Squadron commander of the outfit that I came to live with at Hengyang. He was a blue-eyed Texan, lean and lanky, six-foot-two of fighting blood. I imagine if he had lived in the frontier days of the American West, he would have been a gunslinger. He was around the Pecos River—had a gunman on the side of the Law. I used to shut my eyes out there, sitting on the alert in Hunan, and think about him. I could picture him that drawing Texan pistol slowly through a border town with two pearl-handled d's swinging low at his hips. Walking with his arms stiff at his sides, and watching with his cold blue eyes the "villain" who was approaching the other way. I could almost hear the hot lead spitting from those guns as the two shot it out, and I could always see the villain fall, with his smoking gun. Tex would always have won, for he was the greatest fighter that I ever saw, the most loyal officer, and the best friend.

I'd seen Tex shoot down Japs in the sky, and I had followed on his wing to learn the tactics of the AVG. I know that if there is any man I owe my life to during the months I fought in China, it is Maj. Tex Hill. Seeing what he handled his ship; seeing his coolness on the alert, and his keen desire for action. I can hear Tex now, after he had interpreted the plotting board with little red flags showing the positions of the approaching Jap fighter ships. I can hear him saying: "Well, gentlemen, I think we'll take 'em." And he would smile as he pulled on his helmet and goggles.

Tex was the son of the Chaplain of the Texas Rangers. Before the AVG days he had been a Navy pilot flying off carrier decks, and in the Flying Tigers he had been second only to Bob Neal as the leading ace. Tex was the most truthful man I ever met—even his subconscious thoughts were truthful. He used to tell me that one day after the Chinese Kait-shak had pinned a medal on him for shooting down some Japanese planes over Tounghoo, he had asked him the next time he shot down one of those Japanese planes to please think of him and dedicate it to the people of China. Tex of course said, "Yes, Ma'am."

I imagine that most any man among us would have said "Yes" to the Madame, and in the next time we shot down a Jap we would have told the great lady all about it. We would have remembered after the fight what we had promised her, and we would have gone in with the Madame and told her what we had promised her. But not for that. He told me, "Colonel, I promised her that, and I really meant it. And I've shot down about twelve Japs since that promise four months ago. I know I never can remember to think about her when I'm in a battle—I'm too busy."

Well now, you hold that picture of Tex Hill for a minute while I show him to you in another light.

One day over Hengyang, after we had broken the Japanese wave with our assault and support and there were some fifteen Zeros burning around among the pagodas of this Hunan capital, I saw an odd sight down below. There was one lone Jap, doubtless the suicide Samurai school, for though his buddies had either been shot down in their attempted strafing attack or had turned for home, this arrogant follower of the Shinto shrine was striding the field alone. Two of us rolled to go get him, but from the end of the field towards the river I saw a P-40 pull out of a dive and head for the Jap. It was Tex Hill.

As the two fighters drew together in this breath-taking, head-on attack, I saw their tracers meeting and for a second I didn't know whether the ships ran together or both exploded in the air. As the smoke thinned I saw the P-40 go through and out into the clear, but the Jap crashed and burned on the field of Hengyang. Hill and the Jap had shot it out nose to nose, and once again I thought of the days of Western gunplay.

Things kept right on happening at Hengyang, for after all there are Japanese bases fanning out in many directions—East, North, Northeast, South, and Southeast. Some of them were within an hour's flight of our field. Hankow was the one to the North on the Yangtze. The Japs sent their bombers to worry us on up there, and before we could get to them they made life miserable for us. They had gotten tired of sending their day bombers down, for they lost too many; so now they had resorted to a period of constant night attack. Just when the full moon in the clear sky would begin to light the ground like daylight, the Chinese interpreters would begin to state the little flags into the Map, and we'd know that the Jap was on the way. We'd be just about to sit down to supper after a hard day's work on the alert. We'd leave the houseboys' calls of "Jin-bao," (air raid), and we'd rush for our planes that had been assigned to night duty. Sometimes the attack was a surprise, and one of us would return without seeing them and go wearily back in the moonlight to the hotel, get some tea and a cookie, and crawl in the bed.

Just about the time the head hit the pillow and the body felt a little comfortable the alert would go again. I'd hear the tinkle of a small dinner bell and the plaintive voice of one of the houseboys—"Jin-bao, Jin-bao—please get up, master—Jin-bao." Off we'd go again and into the sky. Sometimes the Jap would feint two or three times to make us use valuable gasoline. Sometimes he'd circle Hengyang by fifty miles per hour and go back to Hankow. We'd spend the night between the hotel and the alert shack; but after all, as we used to say, you weren't supposed to be comfortable in a war, and we were no exception.

Sometimes, though, the Jap didn't feint. General Chennault got to pick the best and most experienced pilots for the night interception missions. For the night we used two or four ships and place them at different altitudes over the field, and wait for the Jap in the light of the moon, with our light on. On this particular night Johnny Alton was at 13,000 feet, and a thousand feet lower we had Ajax Baunier. I'll tell you about Johnny now, but we'll take up more on Ajax later. This was mostly Johnny's fight.

Alton was a superior airman, fighter pilot, and officer, and was the night ace of the AVG. A Florida ideal combat leader. A Florida ideal combat leader. A Florida ideal combat leader. He knew the P-40's better than anyone I have ever seen, for he had instructed the British in their use in the United Kingdom and then had flown over to show the Russians how to fly and repair them near Moscow. He might be was about to carve his name with his six fifty-calibre guns in such a manner that few of us would ever forget it, and certainly no Chinese in the city of Hengyang would ever forget the night.

We got our four ships into the air at staggered altitudes. We heard the radio reports from Richardson giving the latest positions of the Japs. Reported over Changsha. Then North of the field. Then all was silent while we waited. In our positions over the field we placed ourselves down-moon—that is, where the bombers would have to fly between us and the moon and thus silhouette themselves against the full orange light.

Then I saw the five bombers striding the moon. They were at 13,000 feet. I know I swore because I listened and I could imagine the cursing of every one of the others who were at the wrong altitude, for we could not change altitude until the first attack. But they were at Johnny's height, and I listened for him to say that he saw them. Down the field they told us later that you could hear the moan of one Allison engine as a P-40 moved in for the attack, could hear it above the sound of the ten radial engines on the enemy bombers.

The seconds dragged, and then we heard Johnny say, "Okay, I see 'em." And now we saw their exhausts, looking like ten bush-burners. The first Jap second, as the enemy bombers moved towards the target that was our field, all was quiet, and I wondered if Johnny had lost him in the darkness. Then I saw him, so clearly, that the enemy ships that he seemed to be in formation with them—and clearly over my radio I heard Johnny Alton say, "Watch the fireworks!"

Six lines of tracers went into one of the bombers and glowed brighter than the two bush-burners of exhaust fire. The first Jap bomber trailed fire, slowly turned on its back, and spun crazily towards Hengyang, right over the town. Below I could see a few flashes from the exploding enemy bombs, but most of them seemed short of the target area and very scattered. Johnny's tracers were still going into the enemy ships and I could see their return fire now, but it seemed to go in no certain direction. I had moved in closer, trying to get to the altitude of the fight.

On the ground the mechanics and the crew chiefs were still going. Below I could see a few flashes from the exploding enemy bombs, but most of them seemed short of the target area and very scattered. Johnny's tracers were still going into the enemy ships and I could see their return fire now, but it seemed to go in no certain direction. I had moved in closer, trying to get to the altitude of the fight.

The lone fighter was sliding over behind the other bombers, and the second one was exploding and turning over. The third one tried to turn, seemed to hang for seconds against the full moon, then dove in a pitch that got steeper and steeper. Several thousand feet below our level it exploded and burning gasoline fell with it. The light of the three burning bombers combined with the brilliant moonlight to make the night like day.

The number four enemy ship had turned back now, with an engine shot out, but Ajax Baunier got it ten miles North of the field. The last enemy dove out and turned for home when he saw his three leaders burn, but Baunier followed him thirty miles North and shot him down in flames.

From the ground, the watchers told us later, they could hear the fifty-calibre guns above the noise of the smaller calibre Jap guns. Within seconds after the attack, there were three ships burning around the city walls, and none of the formation got home.

But something was the matter with Alton. We could see his ship but it was not flying normally. Every now and then it would stream fire that was more than just a backfire. On the ground they could hear his engine missing badly.

Alton called in that he was hit, but would try to land his ship on the field.

To land a crippled fighter in daylight is quite a feat but to attempt to land one at night, one that has been shot to pieces and is hurt in flames any second, is more than that. We knew why Johnny was taking the chance: we needed that ship if he could get it on the field, even if it was to his use. We needed the parts that could be salvaged. It would have been perfectly all right if the pilot had gone over the side as soon as that engine began to fade out that night. Whether or not he had been shot down by three bombers, he would have "hit the silk" and floated to safety in his chute. But Johnny must have said, "The hell with that, we need this ship—we always need ships. To keep old P-40's that are few in flying condition we had to rob parts from every airplane that we could salvage after a crackup. This is called 'cannibalizing' in the lingo of the mechanics in the Air Corps, and covers a multitude of sins."

THE CHRISTIAN VIEW OF INDUSTRY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 19:15-26; II Thessalonians 3:10-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—Let him that stole steal no more; but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing that is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth.—Ephesians 4:28.

Work is a blessing, and the proper attitude toward it is an important part of the life of a Christian. Industry has found its best and most dependable workers among those who believe in Christ. It has also come to realize that the strengthening of the faith of its workers makes them better workmen; hence we see all over the land the interesting development of chaplains in industrial plants. That activity rightly placed, and properly conducted, can be of great value to both the individual and to industry.

Our lesson rightly deals with the individual. Christianity is a personal matter, a man's attitude toward God and toward the man rather than the mass.

I. We Are Accountable for Opportunity (Luke 19:15).

The king in this parable is Christ, who has now gone away, to return when God is ready for Him to set up His kingdom on earth. In the meantime His servants have been given that which they should be using for Him.

Two things stand out in this story. First, the fact that Jesus is coming again. There are many scoffers who deny that blessed truth (I Pet. 3:3, 4). There are many believers to whom the promise has become but a formal truth in a confession of faith or a creed. But the failure of men to recognize truth and their unwillingness to hold it precious, do not alter the fact. Jesus is coming again!

When He comes, He will have many things to accomplish, but—this is our anxiety—first one of the most important is that there shall be an accounting with His followers (who are supposed to be His servants) regarding the life they have lived. What are they doing with the time that He has given them? What are we in that day? It depends on what we are and what we are doing right now.

The basis of His judgment appears in the following verses, where we learn:

II. We Are to Be Rewarded for Faithfulness (Luke 19:16-26).

When believers stand in the presence of Christ to answer for the deeds done in the day (our deeds were judged at Calvary), it will not be a question of what church you belong to, or what family name you bear, or how much money you have amassed. No, the only question asked will be: "Have you been faithful in trading with the gifts, the abilities and the opportunities which God has given you?"

Note that there are three different judgments here, but all on one line. The first man represents those who with all diligence and zeal seek to grow spiritually and to serve the Lord with glad abandonment. All that they have and they give to Him for His glory and for the winning of others to Him. They will be commended by the Lord and great will be their reward!

The second man, with equal opportunity, did accomplish something, but not too much. He represents those who do want to serve the Lord but with no special zeal, no great measure of sacrificial endeavor—just "average" (what an unfortunate standard!) Christians.

The Lord is fair. He does not deprive them of their reward. In the measure that they have been faithful, the Lord shall find joyous service for Him. But observe that there is no special word of commendation in this case, and there is a limited reward.

The third man represents those who profess to be in fear of God. He seems to demand so much of them and they are not ready to give it. After all, they say, we want to enjoy life. Why should the Lord expect so much of us? Not only do they lose all reward, but the Lord must take away even that which He has already given.

III. We Are Commanded to Work (II Thess. 3:10-12).

From the day that God put Adam in the garden of Eden to care for it, honest work has been the lot of all mankind—yes, and his honor. There is no place in the economy of God for the man or woman who is able to work but is not willing to do so. "If any will not work, neither let him eat" (I Cor. 10).

Apparently, there were some in the church at Thessalonica who perverted the teaching of the Lord's return, who said that if Jesus were coming any day there was no use working. They had turned the truth of God's command around. The point is that since Jesus may come at any time, we should all be doing our utmost to accomplish all we can so that we may stand in His presence with joy, and not with shame.

Curtaining Your French Doors to Harmonize With Window Treatments

By Ruth Wyeth Spears

How to make French door curtains harmonize with the window treatment in a room is a question that always arises. Frequently, over-draperies are omitted for the doors even though they are used for windows. The same glass curtain material is then used as for the windows but a heading and rod is used both top and bottom. However, over-draperies add dignity.

Either a wooden or a metal rod extending well beyond the sides of the door frame may be hooked in place as shown here in the diagram. This permits the doors to open without interfering with draperies.

NOTE—This sketch is from a new book, let by Mrs. Spears called MAKE YOUR OWN CURTAINS. This 28-page book is full of smart new curtain and drapery ideas.

Normandy Rehearsals All But Razed British Villages

Last winter in England, 3,000 inhabitants of eight villages and 180 farms, occupying 25 square miles in South Devon, complied with the request of their government to move away so that American troops could use the area for rehearsals as a training ground for the invasion of France, says Collier's.

As these "Normandy rehearsals" were live-ammunition battles, most of the houses, churches, shops and farm lands in the area are so wrecked that it may take years for the returning inhabitants to restore them to anything like their original condition.

I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen—To Germany

Although frequently played on programs of Irish songs, "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" has no Gaelic connection. It was written about 70 years ago by the American composer, Thomas Westendorf.

It is a promise made to his wife, Kathleen, that he would take her back to visit her old home in Germany.

MULTIPLE RELIEF EASES COLD MISERIES LIKE A DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION

Many doctors prescribe a combination of ingredients for relief of cold symptoms. Colds don't show up as a single ailment, but as a complex series of miseries. Grove's Cold Tablets are a combination of eight active medicinal ingredients. SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Nearly 2,000 rubber tires daily were required in North Africa to replace tires lost or destroyed in action.

As a result of the diversion of the petroleum by-product to aviation gasoline, about 50 per cent of the butadiene produced for synthetic rubber processing so far in 1944 came from alcohol plants.

When you wonder about the shortage of civilian tires, bear in mind that in the time it takes to build one 50-inch airplane tire at B. F. Goodrich factories, seven 22-50 truck tires or sixty 6.00-16 passenger tires could be made. And airplane tires are "mushy" these days!

Good Management
Secret To Better
Egg Production

Recent egg prices, we feel sure, have caused serious thinking about increasing egg production. Now is the time to put into practice these methods of managing that your birds that tend to increase production.
There are two ways to get an increased production: One, increasing the number of laying hens and maintaining your present rate of production; two, keep the same number of hens, and increase the number of eggs per hen.

All of the pullets old enough for winter egg production should be in their laying quarters at this time.
The birds should have been carefully inspected for external parasites, and if lice are present they should have been treated with Sodium Fluoride using the pinch method, or using two drops of "Black Leave 40" applied on the thigh underneath the wing.
The house should be carefully inspected to make sure no mites are present.

Frequent oiling of the perch poles with discarded crank case oil or an annual treatment of creosote oil or carbolineum will control mites.

When putting the pullets in the house, divide them into several groups according to maturity, that is, the ones that are now laying to go in one pen in the house, the later maturing ones in another pen and the still later maturing birds in another. By this process of management you will develop a more uniform flock, and get a higher egg production from those that are ready to lay at this time.

The bird, for the remainder of the year, should be kept confined to the laid house until at least noon time.
This will stimulate mash consumption which will increase egg production.

It is better to put out mash daily rather than once a week, but be sure to keep a good quality mash before the birds continuously. Feed grain at the rate of 10 to 12 pounds per 100 birds daily. Normally we prefer giving this to the birds in the afternoon around 4 o'clock, and feed them a sufficient quantity so that they will consume all of it by 7 or 8 o'clock the next morning. Wet mash at noon, pounds of dry mash wet with buttermilk or water is another means of stimulating more mash consumption.
The birds should be given at least 3 to 4 pounds of green feed per 100 hens per day.

When birds are brought into the laying house from the range in the Fall of the year a good many flocks have a tendency to develop cannibalism or feather picking. This may be prevented by feeding a total of 3 per cent salt in the mash for five consecutive days each month. It should be well to put this in the mash to prevent cannibalism from starting rather than trying to stop it after it has made some headway.

Sixty-six percent of the egg is composed of water, therefore, a liberal supply of fresh water before the birds all the time is absolutely essential if we are to expect maximum egg production.

With the number of birds that you put in the house no doubt you will have one or more dying each month.
The intestines of these birds and the ones you kill for table purposes should be split open to see if you have any intestinal parasites or worms.
If any worms are found present then treat the flock immediately.

Men Critically Needed Says War
Manpower Commission

"The War Is Over—All But The Fighting." This statement was recently made by an American Soldier in the midst of the fiercest fighting on the Holland Front, after he had learned that the plate glass windows were boarded up in his home city in anticipation of an early victory celebration, and that thousands of war workers were either leaving their jobs or reporting very irregularly to them. Apparently, what this American GI said in disgusted sarcasm is the almost criminal belief of many Alabamians, according to Ernest L. Marbury, State Manpower Director. As direct evidence of this fact, Mr. Marbury said: "In the face of constant active recruitment and continuing appeals to all types of unemployed, part-time or virtually non-essential workers to make themselves available for critical war jobs, the sharp decline in the number responding is most discouraging. During August, 1944, 16,811 fewer workers came into our 30 local offices of the United States Employment Service in Alabama than was true in July. The September decline of 13,705 showed a decrease of 30,516 workers under July, or more than 30 percent of the total.
Preliminary reports for October indicate a continuing decrease at an alarming rate. Over-all essential war employment has not gone up, but workers seem simply to have vanished. Many high urgency plants indicate increased absenteeism."

"A brief glance at the other side of the ledger shows Alabama is producing many products and items now vitaly needed at the fighting fronts, with each plant and industry thus engaged being in critical and immediate need of additional workers. To cite only a few: Heavy artillery and other ammunition, hand grenades and landmines; lumber for crating these and a number of other badly needed supplies and that building of ships for their transportation. Plants producing these and other essential war material in Alabama need more than 30,000 additional workers, practically the number represented in the July to September decline."

"After a break-through in France and the widespread belief that Germany was on the verge of collapse, there was a general let-down. However, any straight-thinking person must have realized now that to continue on the assumption that the war is over might be extremely dangerous, and result in the needless sacrifice of thousands of American lives. Certainly, to do so will allow the war to drag on for many unnecessary months and contribute the biggest let-down we could possibly give the men who are fighting these battles for us."

Mr. Barbury further states that Alabama can regain its rightful place as one of the top war production states in the entire Nation if: (1) All workers in war production stay on their jobs, and work a full day, every day.

(2) All farmers, when they can be spared from necessary farm work, make themselves available for war jobs.

(3) All other physically able persons now employed, employed part-time or in absolutely non-essential work, go at once to the nearest local U. S. E.
S. Office, which will direct them to an essential war job in which their services are critically needed.

A LETTER TO THE EDITOR

First, we want to thank the Lord for our church. We want to thank the Lord for our pastor, Bro. Cook and family, and the confidence we have in them.

Don't forget that we have preaching service every second Sunday and fourth Sunday. Every one come and bring somebody with you. As for myself, I can't attend regular through the winter on account of the bad weather and my health, but my prayers are with the church and other Christian people that the Lord may save our great nation. We realize that He has all power, but we look around and see so many things to lead our people away from the church—young people and old.

Will you just stop and think that we only have one life to live, and while we live on earth is the time to get ready to live. There is just only one way and that is through the blood of Christ. We owe our life to the Lord for what He has done for us.

He died on the Cross that we might live.

Please remember if you read this letter, just to ask yourself a question:
If I was to die tonight, where would my soul spend eternity? If you are not ready to meet Jesus in peace, just remember that He has all power, just give your heart and life to Him and live forever.

It would be awful on the day of Judgment to be cast out in to outer darkness, where there will be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth.
We all have our trials and troubles,
I know that; I am not perfect and have done things contrary to His will, but as Paul said, the things that I use to do, I do them no more though I be weak, yet, through the Lord we are made strong.

So, I want to ask all Christians, when you read this letter, to remember us—myself and wife. We have raised our family and they are all gone out in the world. We have one in the Navy and one grandson in the Navy. When you go to prayer, remember us, because it is through His love that we are living.

We have prayed for our church that we might let our light shine out to the world that it might be as a light set on a hill; that it might shine that those who are in darkness might see the light and come to Jesus before it is too late.

May the Lord bless you all in my prayer.—A Subscriber, W. F. Gilliland, Clanton Route 2.

Ready For Says County Chairman

Secretary to the mailing of Christmas cards on December 1st, Mrs. Joe Williams, Chairman of the Chilton County Tuberculosis Association, has completed arrangements with Postmaster Lowe, for the delivery of Seals to the residents of Chilton County. The post office has always cooperated with us in getting our drive off to a good start by having the Seals mailed to all parts of the County at the same day," she said. "This Postmaster Lowe informs me the post office is particularly interested in the Seals because they carry a picture of a postman. This is in connection with the 40th anniversary of the first Christmas Seal Sale, which was started by a Danish postal clerk. In view of consideration for our local community, I hope Chilton County residents will make their returns as soon as possible. Although the sale to support tuberculosis control work until Christmas, it will be a great help to postal employees if returns are made before the big Christmas mail begins."

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

In the notice of Clanton's Homecoming in the News Magazine "Alabama" last week it was stated that during the celebration there was an inpection of "prize fairy cattle." We do not know what "Fairy Cattle" are, but we got a bull yearling down at our house that is a "little devil."

Don't fail to read the City Ordinance in this issue of the News. It is regarding our Taxi condition here. There is also another effecting your gasoline dealers and yourself. Read the one "Ordinance No. 2-R" and if you understand it please come by the office and tell us what it says. We read it four times and set it up in type and still wonder what it is going to cost us. We'll tell you fellows, now, it'll be lots less trouble to comply with it, than to try to get around it, or find a loop-hole in it.

This is a good not to tell on Gene Gore, our Plumber. Course this is just the way we heard it and could be a little exaggerated: Gene and his helper went to a lady's house to see about some plumbing. The lady said: "My goodness, I called for a plumber last July." To which Gene replied: "Sorry, lady, we got the wrong house. It's the party who called last April we're looking for."

A gentleman is a man who is clean inside and outside, who neither looks up to the rich nor down on the poor, who can lose without squealing, who can win without bragging, considerate to women, children and old people, who is too brave to lie, too generous to cheat and too sensible to loaf, who takes his share of the world's goods and lets other people take theirs.

What with the Clubs and Civic organizations of Clanton falling in line with nice contributions, Mrs. J. E. It is estimated by President Gowan that the robes will cost that amount and according to her latest report cooperation has been wonderful. MUSIC APPRECIATION CLUB HELD REGULAR MEETING

The Music Appreciation Club held its monthly meeting on Tuesday afternoon, November 21st, at the home of Mrs. Claud Craig which was most charming with beautifully arranged fall flowers.

The meeting was called to order with the club collect, Mrs. W. H. Klinger Club President presiding. After the business was dispensed with, a most interesting topic was given by Mrs. Joe Mullins on, "The Growth of the Opera," from its beginning in the 17th century, to its present day place in the hearts of music lovers.

After the program the guests were invited into the dining room, where a beautifully appointed table was laid for tea. The centerpiece was a crystal bowl of white chrysanthemums with white tapers burning in crystal holders. Mrs. Grady Hefflin poured tea.

Members present were: Mesdames Brooks Connell, Grady Hefflin, W. E. Huddleston, J. C. Jones, W. H. Klinger, Luther Little, Joe Mullins, Reid Mullins, J. R. Oglesby, J. T. Searcy, Reddie Taylor, W. A. Willis, Earle Ellis and the hostess, Mrs. Claud Craig.

The next meeting in December will be an open meeting to the public with an organ recital presented by Mrs. John Francis Hagan, the former Beverly Hester. The date to be announced.

Week Of Prayer For Foreign Missions

Again it is our privilege to unite with Baptist groups around the world in the observance of the Week of Prayer for Foreign Missions, December 5-8.

The theme for the week is, "Justice to the Nations Through Christ." The week's motto, "Christmas for Christ," should prompt every man, woman and child to give generously and sacrificially to the Lottie Moon Christmas Offering for Foreign Missions. Our Foreign Mission offering last year amounted to $152.50. We must not love Him less this year! Surely we will want to demonstrate that our love and concern for the world's needy millions has been quickened and deepened during these past months.

Tuesday and Thursday the meetings will be held at 3:00 p.m. Wednesday we will meet as a church family with friends at an open meeting at 7:30 p.m. Many are working to make this a truly impressive and inspirational service. We hope the attendance will be large. Friday the W.M.S. will observe the Day of Prayer Around the World, meeting at the church at 10:00 a.m.

An opportunity will be given at the close of each service to make a love-offering for Foreign Missions.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

MAYOR THOMPSON WRITES IN REGARD TO GAS TAX

To The People of Clanton:

Both our county papers this week published certain Ordinances which were adopted at the last Council meeting held. One Ordinance in particular I feel should carry a brief explanation as to why such action was taken as it affects the consuming public; namely, the 1c per gallon gasoline tax.

Considerable study has been made by the Council and myself as to the financial status of our City with regard to income, operation expenses, bonded indebtedness and interest payments. Study has also been made of the immediate and long range needs of the City in order to plan a program to fill the needs and desires of the citizenship to make it a better place to live. Requests for more and better street maintenance; together with a long range street improvement program have been voiced to us more than any other one thing to date.

Good streets are now commonly considered a necessary part of our living. In order to have them, it quite naturally requires considerable revenue to support such a program. It was with this in mind that the Council unanimously passed the one-cent gasoline tax which is to be used exclusively for the financing of our street program. We want each and every citizen's support of this tax and we promise very worthwhile results in return for your support. Before filing any protest to this Ordinance or discussing it to your friends, think first what it will actually cost you in dollars and cents to support it. You already know approximately your monthly gasoline consumption; from this you can readily ascertain the direct cost to you. My findings show that there are only two towns of Clanton's size and larger in the State which do not already have a similar tax. You will also find that with the tax added, the price you will pay in Clanton for gasoline will not be any higher than the average over the State.

As I have stated previously, I at all times welcome your constructive criticism; we want your whole-hearted cooperation to help us build a better City—our opportunity for such is great. Let us work to that end.

Respectfully,

F. LEO THOMPSON.

PETE JARMAN SYMPATHIZE WITH BEREAVED ONES

November 23, 1944.

Mr. T. W. Bryan, Clanton, Alabama, Dear Mr. Bryan:

I am grieved to learn that your fine grandson, Colonel Dowdy, has paid the supreme sacrifice, and hasten to express to you the other bereaved ones, my deep, heartfelt sympathy.

One of the tragedies of war is that it takes many of our finest young men. While I know we are never prepared to give our loved ones up, I am impressed that you should take consolation in the realization that no higher honor can come to a man than to give his life for his country.

The Government presents to the family of each member of our Armed Forces who dies in service an American flag, measuring 5x9' 6". It is available upon filling out a simple application, which may be secured from the Post Office in any county seat, and submitting proof of death. The notice received from the Department is sufficient proof.

With heart-felt sympathy, I am,

PETE JARMAN.

The weather has been bad for the last two Sundays. We have not had many out for services in a long time, but we expect to have up a heater by Sunday. Bro. Kerbie came last Sunday and preached. There was not many out to hear him on account of the rain.

We are planning on having a Xmas program at this place and a tree. We want everybody who will to be with us Sunday to begin planning for this program.

We are sorry Sister Parker is away. We welcome her back soon. Let us keep our Sunday School going. Everybody come next Sunday at 10:30 and bring someone with you.—Reporter.

HIGHLAND

Sunday was our regular preaching day. The attendance for both Sunday School and preaching was good, although the weather conditions were bad.

Our pastor, Bro. E. C. Hand, delivered two wonderful sermons, which were enjoyed by all.

We are glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Shaw move into the community. We invite them to join our Sunday School again.

Let's all come next Sunday and improve our Sunday School.—Reporter.

PRIZE WINNERS NAMED IN CONTEST AT HOME-COMING

The Chilton County Home-coming Celebration, sponsored by the Chilton County Farm Bureau, was a gala event for the county with several features that were of particular interest. Among these was the dairy show which was sponsored to show the importance of good breeding and management of dairy animals. Although there were fewer animals entered than anticipated, there were a number of very good dairy animals brought from all over the county including the dual purpose breed of Red Polls.

Judges were Mr. C. E. Teague, Extension Dairy Specialist from Auburn, and Mr. A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent of Shelby County. As the cattle were judged Mr. Teague and Mr. Lauderdale explained to the spectator their reasons for placing each animal as they did. Animals were criticized in such way that the merits and faults of each animal were brought out. After each class was judged the judges gave the onlookers an opportunity to ask questions concerning qualities of any animal.

Prizes were awarded to owners of dairy animals that placed in each class. The winners were as follows: Registered Jerseys 1 year — C. C. Haum.

Registered Jerseys 2-3 years — 1. Hoyt Thrash; 2. J. H. Camp; 3. W. R. Burk; 4. W. R. Burk.

Registered Jerseys above 3 years— 1. J. G. Heida; 2. J. G. Heida; 3. Mrs. Pearl Scott; 4. J. G. Heida.

Registered Jersey Bulls under 1 year — 1. Hoyt Thrash; 2. Arthur Maddox.

Registered Guernsey Heifers under 18 months—1. R. M. Foshee.

Nineteen out of twenty* included electric service in their selections. But so long as the needs of war have first claim on telephone facilities—and until the manufacture of adequate equipment can be resumed—it just won't be possible to avoid delays in filling telephone orders.

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

By VIRGINIA VALE

IT'S really good news that Lieut. Comdr. Robert Montgomery, recently placed on the inactive list by the navy, is being starred by MGM in a picture based on "They Were Expendable." You'll remember it as the book that gave the world the story of the exploits of the P-T boats in one of General MacArthur's escapes to Australia. This will be Montgomery's first picture since the delightful "Here Comes Mr. Jordan." We're told that the cast will be made up almost entirely of men who have been in the service. And Comdr. John Ford, who has been responsible for so many excellent pictures, will direct "They Were Expendable."

ROBERT MONTGOMERY

Martha Scott, who's forsaken movies for the stage temporarily, had a busy evening the night she did "The Soldier's Wife" on the air; that's the play she's now doing on the New York stage. The "Theater of Romance" broadcast was moved to a CBS Playhouse across the street from the theater, the curtain was held that night, and Martha skipped from the broadcast to the stage, to repeat her performance.

It's taken Harold Lloyd a long time to take to radio; the immediate success of "Comedy Theater"—Sunday nights on NBC—proves that he should have done it long ago. He's director and host of this unique program—unique because it's the only drama show devoted entirely to comedies. The movie people are now after Lloyd—two companies are urging him at the moment to return to the screen.

That's a nice little assignment RKO has for George Raft. In "Johnny Angel" he'll play a two-fisted guy in the line of nutting a missing cargo of gold and an affair with a mystery blonde. Signe Hasso has been borrowed from Metro to assist.

Richard Humber and Ken Murray of the CBS "Which Is Which?" are both top-notch amateur magicians, so they're hatching a plot to give a series of magic shows for charity some time soon. Meanwhile their novel Wednesday night program is going strong.

"Steel Horizons," new Sunday night Mutual program, on which a different girl singer from a different city sings with John Baker each week, is proving a real stepping stone to success. Annette Burford, who sang on the third broadcast, has won a permanent radio assignment as soloist on the Friday MBS series, "Music for Half an Hour." Betty Ellen Morris may be the star of a new winter series.

"Dagwood" (Arthur Lake) of the "Blondie" program may be dumb on the air, but—Lake, a co-owner of the Plastic Engineering Company, recently was awarded an army contract for an airplane part made by a process his company helped develop.

A fat sergeant recently wrote Paul Whiteman, saying he'd heard Whiteman had once reduced, fast; the sergeant wanted to know how, because his girl wouldn't marry him till he was thinner. Whiteman's advice concluded: "Practically, I had to stop living."

"The Yearling" has been on the waiting list at Metro since 1941; all sorts of problems were involved, including complications regarding the animal actors in the film. Now it's announced that Metro will produce the picture next spring. But the boy originally chosen to play "Jody" has outgrown the role, so another 11-year-old, fair-haired, fond of animals, must be found.

ODDS AND ENDS—So it's Capt. Burgess Meredith who gets the coveted chance to play Ernie Pyle in "G. I. Joe" based on Pyle's book, "Here Is Your War." . . . Among the losers are James Gleason, Walter Brennan, Fred Astaire and Humphrey Bogart. . . . 500 Filipinos, veterans of the Philippine invasion and other Pacific campaigns, will appear in RKO's "The Invisible Army," since the parts require men proficient with the bolo knife, for the guerrilla fighting seasons. . . . Joan Crawford's Warner Bros. picture, known as "Mildred Pierce," apparently is really set to go at last—the title has been changed to "House on the Sand."

SHE still looked tired, her face a little drawn as she walked through the big outer newspaper office which sounded like a machine gun nest with its barrage of furious typewriters. But when she was ensconced in the little cubbyhole that she called her own, self-assurance replaced fatigue. She was on the job again. Linda Jordan was someone she had left outside, and the name now was Emily Kent. Emily Kent, whose column of advice to the heartless was read, surreptitiously or openly, by half the city, and whose words of wisdom, she trusted, were followed to the letter. People could and some did laugh at her writings, but many bought the paper for her counsel alone.

They liked the comfortable, plump, gray-haired and smiling woman whose picture appeared daily above the column, just under "Emily Kent Says." It wasn't really of her—not of Linda Jordan, that is. Actually, the sage adviser to the heavy laden was in her middle twenties. She was, the editor had felt, too much the glamour girl to inspire public confidence when it came to affairs of the heart. And so he had dug up this old photo of a long dead aunt as better suited to represent the spirit of the feature.

On this, as on all mornings, she faced complacently the pile of letters on her desk, on paper ranging from good to dreadful and in handwriting to match. For contrary to frequent belief, she did not have to manufacture the epistles she answered so wisely. Doctor them up, yes. Usually they were very dull. But as for inventing them—well, hardly ever.

Efficiently she slit open the envelopes and stacked the letters for reading. Those she might use went into the wire basket and those that were hopeless she tossed away. Occasionally she smiled. More often she compressed her lips. "Housework simply too much—married three years—husband complains I no longer look nice, but how can I?—do my own work except laundry and heavy cleaning—no children, but know that when there are, things will be even worse."

Every so often she wrote a composite answer, based on a number of them, and then proceeded to give the collective authors a scorching piece of her mind. For she had no patience with women who "let themselves go" and risked losing their husbands.

She found a description of a mother-in-law situation which was being badly handled. The writer naively supposed that only she had ever faced that situation. Linda would tell her differently, she thought. The letter would need very little editing, too. It presented a common case. She wrinkled her brow a moment—no, she hadn't discussed mothers-in-law for quite some time. The stupid things people could do about problems that were simple!

With the case of a woman who knows precisely what she is doing and is untroubled by any suspicion that she may be wrong, she jotted on the back of this envelope some notes she would use in her reply.

The morning had nearly slipped by. Her watch told her that in half an hour it would be time for lunch. She slowed a little. Robert would be waiting at that Italian place, and he would already have ordered because he always knew in advance exactly what she wanted. No misunderstanding to mar that relationship—no complications, no petty little knots of the sort she spent her life unraveling. Would she marry him? Probably, she thought, though they hadn't really discussed it.

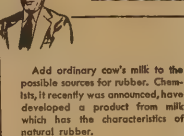

Then the phone rang. Perhaps it was Robert to say that "Oh, Mr. Farwell. Yes. Yes. I can make it this afternoon, not too early. At four in your office? What?" Her voice became suddenly shrill. "Certainly not. Under no circumstances. I'll be glad to talk over a divorce with Jim any time, the sooner the better, but I will not sit in a room with his mother. No, I don't care to explain. I have my reasons. If you could know half the things that woman—well, call me back when you've made some other arrangement. Goodbye."

The lines of irritation didn't leave her face until she reached the elevator.

How women and girls
may get wanted relief
from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic disorder. Here's how it may help:

1. Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion,
thus help build resistance for the "time"
to come.
2. Started 3 days before "your time," it should help relieve pains due to purely functional periodic disorder.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

WE PROTEST

As should all right thinking people of Clanton, the imposing of the new one-cent gasoline tax that takes effect this week:

We, the Gasoline Distributors and Service Station
Operators, do not mean to shirk our duty in any way.
We do, however, protest being singled out in this new tax. We suggest putting a one-cent Sales Tax on all businesses of the City if they are that hard up for revenue, and not just the Gasoline Dealers.

A gasoline tax will lose thousands of dollars worth of business annually for Clanton merchants, due to the fact that for years Clanton has been widely known as a stopping place for transient motorists.

It is not that we are unwilling to carry our share, but the Gasoline Distributors and the Service Station operators have already been hit hard by tire rationing and gasoline rationing. We feel it unfair to have this additional hardship to bear.

Our committee has contacted members of the City Council and each member contacted has "passed the buck" on down to the New Mayor and the New City Attorney.

The out-going Mayor, Hon. C. E. Stapp, made the statement Monday, that such a tax was unnecessary at this time, in his opinion.

All citizens of Clanton opposed to this new one-cent tax are asked to meet with the gasoline distributors and the service station operators at the City Hall at 7:00 o'clock, Tuesday night, December 5, to protest this tax.

New Cotton Picker On Display At Local Dealers

The new McCormick-Deering Cotton Picker will be on display at the new building of the Chilton Truck & Implement Company next Monday, December 11th. Everyone is invited and urged to come and inspect the new modern piece of machinery which promises to revolutionize cotton growing.

The International Harvester Company has devoted 21 years to experimenting with, and developing this greatly needed piece of machinery. The year 1944 has seen the advent of this successful cotton picker into the industry. A number of these machines were sold and placed in actual use in several sections of the South this year. It is not a machine that is restricted to the large cotton fields of Texas, as several of them were successfully tried on various type farms in Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and Mississippi.

We know that Chilton county farmers will grasp the opportunity to visit Chilton Truck & Implement Company's new home next Monday and see this remarkable machine.

Chilton Truck & Implement Company Move To New Home

Monday, December 11th, will mark a new era in the life of Chilton Truck & Implement Company's career. That day they will move into their new home across from Plaster's Gin & Warehouse Company. This spacious new building is one of the finest of its kind in central Alabama and the genial owner has endeavored to make it congenial to the patrons the best in service, parts, equipment and merchandise that can be obtained during this critical time.

Permit for the erection of this building was granted because of the necessity of such an establishment, to keep farm machinery and war essential trucks rolling and producing for the war effort.

Bob Oglesby came to Clanton January, 1941, and established the Chilton Truck & Implement Company. Since that time the business has continued to grow, and owner under his guidance until now in his new home, he is equipped to give service second to none.

Seven thousand feet of floor space comprise the new modern building and contains a ladies rest room, large front display floor, modern lighting throughout. Service Department, including doors, wash, rough, and high enough to permit trucks and farm machinery of any length to be loaded or unloaded. A large ramp and a side door for the truck is convenient to support a five-ton capacity hoist, stretching across the entire width of the Service Department.

The display shelves and the service counter is attractively done in blue and red and the building throughout is attractive and modern in every way. Ample room for parking is provided both in front and the rear of the building. Constructed on the southern side is a loading and unloading platform for loading heavy farm machinery and parts.

CHILTON COUNTY FALLING DOWN IN 6TH WAR LOAN

Chilton County has always boasted of being the best county in the state of Alabama. There is no better time to prove such a boast than now, when we are lagging terribly in our Sixth War Loan drive.

To date Chilton County has sold only 30 percent of her "E" Bond quota. The state as a whole has sold more than 50 percent of their quota.

Reports from Beat chairmen show that collections run from 3 percent to 89 percent of total quotas. This is because those beats showing a high collection rate have gone to work and are fulfilling their obligation. Those with low percentage collected, evident by do not realize the importance of supporting our boys for giving their all to maintain our freedom and who must have our support if we are to win this war.

Of course I realize that everyone is busy and have more than they can do-but, so did the boy who was taken away to fight our battles and who is undergoing untold hardships for you. We were careful in the beginning to name collectors chairman in every beat in the county, and I do not feel that a single beat will fall down on the job of raising their full quota. I find in checking the records those who are nearest their quota, are those who have made a house to house canvass and the sooner that each beat committee does this, the sooner our goal will be realized.

I hope I will not be disappointed in the results of any beat in the county. Sincerely, C. B. COX, Chairman.

Latest reports Tuesday night show Beat 7, with Dr. H. M. Nix chairman, has passed their official quota. I, as County Chairman of the Sixth War Loan drive, want to congratulate them in being the first in the County to reach their goal.

DO YOUR XMAS MAILING EARLY

Do your Christmas mailing early. Help for handling mail is short. Wrap packages with good paper and tie with stout cords. Watch for Santa Claus' return. Have your mail ready stamped when placed in boxes. I request plans to stamp your mail at all times.

Buy your stamps before you need them. 15c for Christmas cards not sealed 3c when sealed; overseas all 3c. Keep your cards and letters separated. Failure to have your mail ready stamped often causes delay in dispatch. The department expects you to stamp it. -R. W. Lowe, Postmaster.

Fighting, Dying Boys Need Fullest Support

State Chairman Urges All-Out Effort

That there will be no Christmas holiday for the fighting, dying soldiers on the German and the Japanese fronts was called to the attention of war bond buyers and workers this week by State War Finance Committee Chairman Ed Leigh McMillan, as he urged the state to "back up the front by putting your holiday dollars into Sixth War Loan drive."

"It is easy, I know to let the normal, natural holiday spirit invade our thinking, working and bond buying at Christmas time," Mr. McMillan said.

"All of us want to remember our dear ones at Christmas. But I know that none of us will forget that the Alabama boys who are fighting and dying along the German and Japanese fronts need to be remembered even more than those we love here at home. There is not going to be any Christmas time for those boys over there. Let each of us, whether we are buyers or workers, remember Christmas by putting our dollars behind those boys who are battling day and night 'over there' for our future.

"They need all of our interest and prayers."

"Holiday dollars should be put to work for victory. If we should fail to make the Sixth War Loan another great American homefront victory those who fight in the sleet, the snow and the mud for us will lose some of the fine spirit that has carried our arms so surely toward the victory that we have all, soldier and civilian, sacrificed so much for."

"Don't let Christmas interfere with victory."

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

WILLIAM GOETZ, head of International Pictures, is so enthusiastic over Sonja Henie's first Technicolor picture that he's signed her to star in a second, "Countess of Monte Cristo." We're told it's quite different from any other screen story she's done. Those who are tired of seeing her as the girl who puts a broken-down hotel on its feet will be delighted. "It's a Pleasure" will be released through RKO at Easter time.

Being a radio matinee idol has its drawbacks. Victor Jory, who each Sunday afternoon causes many a heart to flutter when he appears on the CBS "Matinee Theater" program, VICTOR JORY gram, has received many an odd gift. Among them is a pinch statue of himself with diamond eyes, made by a group of lady welders in Maine. And he received some wampum from an Indian squaw!

Lawrence Welk, the Mutual network bandleader whose "champagne music" is often on the air, is looking for a new girl vocalist to take the place of Jayne Welton; she will have a permanent job with the orchestra. Mr. Welk wants a girl with a "champagne voice." It's the chance of a lifetime for some girl who wants to sing with a top-flight band.

"Rags" Ragland is back in Hollywood, set for a role in "Her Highness and the Bellboy," starring Hedy Lamarr and Robert Walker. Also assigned to this cast are Audrey Hetter and Tom Brown, newcomers who make their debut in "Main Street After Dark."

"Alter Ego," originally written as a radio play by Ach Oboler, will be done as a movie by M-G-M. Henry Daniels Jr. has the male lead, Phyllis Thaxter plays the girl. The cast includes Kathleen Lockhart and Edmund Gwenn; Oboler directs.

Dinah Shore hopes to be able to do at least one novelty number each week on her radio show, since the public liked "Pretty Soon" so much. Since she sang it, Dinah's received nearly 500 requests for a repeat.

Radio actors are haunted by the thought that some time they may be late for their shows. It happened to Chet Lauck of "Lum and Abner," once; a business appointment held him up, three minutes from the studio. Suddenly Chet discovered that it was 5:15—"Lum and Abner" were on the air, but he wasn't! He got to the studio at 5:20, to find that "Lum and Abner" was doing fine, and libbing the show.

Jimmy Cagney has been made Regimental Guardian of a British fighting unit; Capt. Dennis King notified Cagney that the regiment had just finished two weeks of heroic fighting to hold the tiny town of "Cagney," France, and would never forget the name. The unit had seen Cagney himself in England during his tour a few months ago, and have decided that he belongs to them.

Joan Davis will star in RKO's next big musical, "George White's Scandals of 1945," which will go into production in January. Gene Krupa and his band were signed some time ago for a featured appearance in the film. Felix Faist will direct.

"Behind the Scenes at CBS," Tuesday evenings, has already won its place on many a family's list of favorite radio programs. With Douglas Edwards serving as guide, columnist and host to CBS top personalities, it really takes us behind the scenes at a great broadcasting studio, giving the public a chance to learn what goes on behind many a carefully closed door.

ODDS AND ENDS—Ruth Douglas and Douglas Rutherford, of "Crime Doctor" are the latest husband and wife team in radio; they will be together professionally on the West coast in a USO show. Alan Ladd, who never won a penny on a horse race, collects $50,000 on his horse in Paramount's "Sally O'Rourke." Alfred Hitchcock once said CBS top personalities, it really takes us behind the scenes at a great broadcasting studio, giving the public a chance to learn what goes on behind many a carefully closed door.

Town Plagued by Witches Can Now Sleep Peacefully

Villagers End Weird Tale by Driving New Stake Into Woman's Grave.

SCRAPPAGOT GREEN, ENGLAND—In an eerie end to one of England's weirdest witch tales, the villagers of this little Essex town have driven a new stake through the grave of a woman burned at the stake and buried two centuries ago. They did it to peg the spirit they say disturbed their nights.

On the telephone to London, Town Councillor Arthur Sykes told how he and seven of his neighbors rolled back the big boulder that marked the witch's last resting place.

"We had the first quiet night's sleep in many a day," he quickly added.

This is Sykes's story—and, he said a bit petulantly, "I'm a practical man, but there's been a lot of queer things going on around here."

Bulldozers started after a "The queer things" started after a bulldozer, widening a road so that military vehicles could use it, pushed aside the boulder which generations of the townspeople believed marked the resting place of the "witch."

What sort of "queer things?" "All sorts," said Sykes. "Bells ringing at midnight. Clocks going wrong. Chickens disappearing. Sheep wandering from enclosures. Things being moved and no sense to it."

"Yesterday the old church clock was found to be two hours slow and I can't remember it ever being wrong before."

Builder Charlie Dickson told of scaffolding poles which strong men can hardly lift being found scattered about like toothpicks.

At one of the local pubs, Landlord Bill Reynolds scoffed at the tales. At least, he did until the evening when a customer complained about falling over a huge rock outside the pub door.

Reynolds said there were no rocks there he never had seen. Then he looked outside to prove it. It took two men to carry the rock away, he said.

Issues Instructions. Some of the townsfolk became alarmed. Buldozer Sykes reported, "and they wondered what would happen next." So they decided to take action and consulted Harry Price, head of the London university council for psychical investigation.

Price, who has put to the test innumerable stories of witches, ghosts and their ilk, said the trouble at Scrappagot Green is caused by a poltergeist, a noisy, mischievous spirit the existence of which many people accept.

"It has been proved that poltergeists exist," Price said. "I have listed more than 500 cases of such spirit tricks. Many of them have been put down to the influence of witches."

Price then issued instructions for setting the "witch" to rest. The villagers did the rest, even measuring the grave "by the inch," said Councillor Sykes. "To be sure of doing it properly" before driving the stake and rolling back the boulder.

"Mind you," he said, "I'm a practical man, but..."

Man Who Said Americans Were Swine Ordered Freed
FARGO, N. D. — Federal District Judge Charles J. Vogel ruled that Buresch, son of a one-time chancellor of Austria now interned in Fort Lincoln, N. D., is not an enemy alien, and ordered his release.

The ruling was made in habeas corpus proceedings brought by Buresch, who declared he did not become a German citizen when the Nazis took over his country in 1938. Referring to letters Buresch admitted writing to a Cleveland (Ohio) woman, in which he called Americans "swine," vowed vengeance and referred to the United States as "this rotten country with its Nigger culture," Judge Vogel stated:

"I have no doubt but what the court which finally passes upon Buresch's application to become a citizen of the United States will probably consider the statements he made, and which he now excuses by claiming that they were made while he was subjected to ill treatment and unlawfully restraining his liberty. Such statements are, however, not pertinent to the present proceedings. If the relator (Buresch) is a dangerous person to be at liberty in these times, he must be held in some other and legal manner."

Rejected Lover Smears Girl With Poison Ivy
JONKERS, N. Y. A former paratrooper, Blinston, 23, was accused of using commando tactics and poison ivy on a girl who jilted him. The complainant, Miss Ruth Toepfer, 17, appeared in court with hands and arms bandaged and face swathed. She testified that she and Blinston were walking down a country lane when she told him she did not want to see him again, whereupon he knocked her down, seized a handful of ivy and smeared her face, hands and arms with them.

Bake Your Christmas Goodies Now!

(See Recipes Below)

Homemade Gifts

Christmas can put a strain on your sugar budget especially if you are baking lots of goodies for your friends. But today I'm giving recipes that will keep the dents out of the sugar ration and still give plenty of good holiday eating.

Sugar savers or substitutes are plentiful in most localities now and answer the need for sweets without sugar. The homemaker can use light and dark corn syrups, honey, dried fruits, etc.

If you are giving cookies as gifts, wrap them prettily in small boxes well lined with waxed paper. Cover them in gay Christmas wrappings, and anyone will be happy to get a homemade present from you!

Honey, though expensive, will not bring up the price of these cookies which are crispy and well spiced:

Honey Crispies.

(Makes 3 dozen)

- 1/2 cup shortening
- 1/2 cup honey
- 2 1/2 cups sifted flour
- 1/2 teaspoon allspice
- 1/2 teaspoon cloves
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking soda

Roll shortening and honey together 1 minute. Cool. Add sifted dry ingredients. Roll to 1/4 inch thickness and cut in desired shape with cookie cutter. Sprinkle with colored sugar and bake on a greased baking sheet in a moderate (350-degree) oven. Canned fruit or nuts may also be pressed into the center of the cookies.

Oatmeal has long been a favorite ingredient of cookies. Here the dryness of the cereal is balanced by the moistness of apricots:

*Apricot Oatmeal Cookies.

(Makes 70 cookies)

- 1 1/2 cups flour
- 1/2 teaspoon soda
- 1/2 cup honey
- 1/2 cup orange juice
- 1/2 cup nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 cup shortening
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup dark corn syrup
- 1 egg mashed, cooked apricots
- 1/2 cup rolled oats (uncooked)
- 1/2 cup chopped nuts

Cream shortening and sugar. Add syrup, beat fluffy. Add apricots, until light and fluffy. Add apricots, nuts and oats; mix thoroughly. Sift

LYNN SAYS:

A Bit of Dressing: Varying the dressing in salads helps add interest to this course. These simple tricks will help:

Use lemon juice and sugar for plain lettuce. Or, mix mayonnaise with shredded cooked beets, and chopped hard-boiled eggs and pickle relish.

For lettuce, cabbage or fruit salads, you'll like peanut butter blended with rich milk, honey or sugar and salt to taste. To use French dressing for fruit salads, sweeten with honey and add a dash of lemon juice for taste.

Sour cream is an ideal dressing for mixed fresh fruit salads. Add vinegar or lemon juice to acid cream and season with salt and pepper. Chopped apples and sliced bananas may also be added to the dressing. Pour this mixture over the fruit salad, sprinkle with finely chopped nuts and top with marshmallows. The dressing has the stems left cherries that have the stems left on. Very pretty, indeed!

Facing Fact

CORPORAL MADDEN sat on a stump in the middle of an island "somewhere in the Pacific" and gazed the open letter in his hand with deepest mystification. He had been there ever since the mail arrived more than a half-hour ago. He had read the letter at least a dozen times and was just as bewildered as ever. Finally he rubbed his sunburned nose with the back of his hand and reached into his pocket for his wallet. Opening it, he looked at Marge's picture.

Boy, wasn't she a honey! He remembered the night he had met her. Two years before in June. He'd gone to the drugstore that morning and had run into Tom Barker. "Hi, Bert," Tom hailed him. "I was just going to call you. Want a date for tonight? Nancy's cousin is here visiting and we want to make it a four-some."

Bert hesitated. He wasn't much on girls, and he had planned to go to a meeting at the fire house. "Come on," Tom urged. "I don't know what she looks like but she'll be O. K. Nancy says she's a pippin."

"Nuts," said Bert. "They all look alike. Shake 'em up in a bag and pull one out and you can't tell which one you have. Hair to their shoulders, eyes on their mirrors and mouths from ear to ear."

"Tch, tch!" Tom jeered. "Listen to ole man cynic! Well, do you or don't you? We'll go over to Pal's and have some hamburgers. Nancy says she's a swell dancer." That settled it. Girls, Bert had found out, might all look alike but they didn't dance alike. For years he had belonged to a group of folk dancers and when he stepped out on the floor with a girl he wanted her to know what it was all about.

Bert wasn't quite ready when they called for him at eight-thirty. But he regretted his tardiness the minute he put his foot on the running board of Tom's old car. From then on every minute away from the occupant of the back seat would be so different! Soft blond hair, not too long, blue eyes and a sweet mouth with wide, full lips and not too much lipstick. Just right. Cute and slender just what she wore that night. A white skirt and a blue sweater that was the exact shade of her eyes. There was a blue bow in her hair. He had loved that. The blue bow.

Nothing ordinary about Marge. If you pulled her out of a bag you'd know who she was all right. And couldn't she dance! She even had some new tricks that stopped him for a minute or two. Nancy and Tom got quite a kick watching Bert fall for her. He'd always been a little standoffish with the females. Now he knew why, of course. Subconsciously he'd been waiting for someone like Marge to come along.

She liked him too. That was the remarkable thing. When he took her home that night and they were alone and kissed her. He'd done it almost without thinking. Then he'd apologized quickly. "Gosh, I hope you won't think I'm fresh. Kissing you when I hardly know you."

"No," she said, "I don't think you're fresh. I'll only be here a week. We haven't any time to lose."

He knew right then that she was his. He didn't need a week to find out. When you stumble on anyone as wonderful as Marge you know it, if you've got the I. Q. of a canary. She lived in New England and worked in a defense plant there, and before she went home they were engaged. His visits to her were wonderful too. Even her folks were wonderful. Then when his number was called and he was accepted for the Army, they decided to get married.

Boy, and wasn't she the stunning bride! And wasn't that a honeymoon! Wherever they went, everybody looked at them. Of course, with a gal like Marge on your arm you had to expect that. People just naturally stared at anyone like her. And that's what made this letter so crazy.

He picked it up and read it again. Darling:

I know. I just wrote you this morning and likely you'll get that letter and this one at the same time—although maybe not, what with the Army mail doing such peculiar things—but I am bursting and have to tell you right off. I guess maybe I didn't mention it, but I sent my picture to complete in a contest a while ago—and, angel, I won! Out of five thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven entries I was picked as Miss Average American Girl! Mel can overcome.

Corporal Madden read no farther. Slowly he folded the sheet and replaced it in the envelope. "Can you tie that?" he wanted to know. "Miss Average American Girl. If that ain't the damndest thing!"

Curtain Care

Take care of your curtains. Curtain fabrics are weakened by sun, dust and frequent laundering. Shift those on the sunny side to the shady side of the house. Turn from top to bottom. Launder when necessary but use care. Use mangle from behind. Stretching rayon curtains is not advised. Curtains will be limited until the war is over.

CHRIST IN THE HOME

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 19:4; Luke 10:34-42; II Timothy 1:3-6.
GOLDEN TEXT—These things I command you, that ye may love one another.—John 15:17.

The American home faces many enemies and powerful destructive influences in our day. At times one wonders whether this most important of all institutions has not so far departed from what God intended it to be that it has lost its place and power.

In such a time, it is important that the Christian church keep before the people, and especially our young people, the Scripture teaching about the home. We need to revive the old-fashioned home, with its piety, purity and high purpose in the plan of God. We begin right when we note:

I. The Plan of God for the Home (Matt. 19:4-6).

When Jesus was challenged by the Pharisees, who claimed that a man had a right to divorce his wife, He appealed to Scripture. That is the sure foundation for right thinking.

He referred them to the story of the creation of man and woman in Genesis 2:18-24. There it is revealed that in all the animal kingdom there was no creature suited for fellowship with man. The one who finds full satisfaction in the company of a cat, a dog, or horse, is just not up to normal.

Adam needed a "help meet" for him, that is, one suited by personality and gifts to be his companion. God made woman for that purpose and gave her to man. Thus He established the home and ordained that all through man's history there should be the coming together of one man and one woman in that indissoluble union of love (v. 6) which makes the home.

We have forgotten God's law, or have deliberately violated it, and have broken down the home in its very foundation. We had better begin to think seriously about this grave problem if we are not to go the way of other nations.

II. The Presence of Christ in the Home (Luke 10:38-42).

Christ repeatedly honored the home by His blessed presence. He came to the wedding feast at Cana of Galilee, and there He performed His first miracle (John 2). He should be the unseen guest at every Christian marriage. Invite Him, expect Him, honor Him, and He will bless you.

One home in particular was a place of rest and refuge for our Lord when He was here on earth, that of His friends, Lazarus, Martha and Mary, in Bethany. He was a welcome guest, always at home in that household. Shall we do less in our households? We see motels in homes, "Christ is the unseen guest in this home." How appropriate!

But note that His presence in the home gives Him opportunity to teach and to direct the life of the home. Mary and Martha had both been busy about the work of the household, but Mary knew when it was time to stop being busy and sit to Jesus' feet to learn and to be blessed by His presence. She not only worked, but "also sat at the Lord's feet" (v. 39). Martha went right on working until she was distracted, and came to censure her sister.

The answer of Jesus is significant. He did not rebuke Martha. He only told her to get her life into balance. There must be work in a home, but those who make home only a workshop miss its greatest blessing. Home should be a place of sweet fellowship between the members of the family, and especially between them and the Lord.

III. The Power of Faith in the Home (II Tim. 1:3-6).

Family religion really pays. The home is the family altar, where God's Word is read as a natural and proper part of daily living, where prayer is made, and God's goodness is remembered in thanksgiving and praise, that home will send forth children who know the grace of God, and are prepared to heed His call for service.

Timothy had a grandmother and a mother (one wonders whose papa and grandpa were) with unfeigned faith. What a precious heritage! That was far more valuable than silver or gold, or farms or corner lots. What heritage are you giving your children?

Note the reference to Timothy's work as a minister of God in verse 6. It was by the Holy Spirit's call, and was recognized by the church in ordination, the "laying on of hands." But it is evidently closely connected with that which is spoken of in the verse before—the faith of his home. There is power in that faith to send a boy forth to vital service for God and to keep him faithful in the day of trial. Give your boy and girl something really worthwhile to remember when they are far from home. Put the power of faith in the home back of their lives in public for God.

Male Ostrich, One-Mate Bird, Takes Turn at Nest

The long-lived ostrich often reaches an age of 75 years, and commonly spends 65 years with one faithful mate. When hatching eggs (40-day period), the male and female take turn. Mother covers the eggs in daytime, while dad takes the "night shift."

In the nest are round eggs and oval ones. Males emerge from round eggs, females from oval-shaped ones.

ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Speaking of success stories, how the one about our own Dick Arnold? Dick came back to Clanton week before last as Superintendent of Alabama Mills where he started twelve years ago as near the bottom as is possible, unless the janitor has an assistant. We congratulate Dick, highly, and wish for him every success in his new place, and have no doubt about his ability to fill it.

We have made a Christmas resolution this year instead of the usual New Year resolution that we break on the second or third of each January. This year we absolutely will not publish "Yes, Virginia, There Is A Santa Claus."

The soldier was inducted and sent to a Camp where a large outfit of WACS were stationed. After finishing his basic training he was assigned to the WACS' barracks as janitor. Month after month went by and finally the paymaster sent word one day for him to come by his office. "Soldier," the paymaster said, "six months have gone by. Where have you been? Why haven't you come each month and drawn your pay?" The soldier's face was all amazement. "What? You mean I get paid too?"

Met our friend J. G. Blair in a store down town the other day and the conversation went about like this: "Hello, Ben, how about you and me—telling up?" Ben: "OK, how much do I owe you?" Blair: "I don't know. How much do I owe you?" Ben: "I don't know, I'll have to check at the office." Blair: "Well, I'll have to ask the wife. What did you get?" Ben: "I don't know. It was two dozen eggs and a pound of butter. I believe. No, it was two dozen eggs and a dozen eggs. No—I really don't know what it was. I'll have to ask the wife." Blair: "Well, you just for a classified advertisement, and let me see—I really can't remember." Ben: "Well, you know I will find out sometime and we'll settle up. Keep my name down in the mean-time." Blair: "Sure. Don't worry about that. I'll find out how much I owe you sometime and we'll settle up." Blair: "So long, Ben." Ben: "So long, Blair."

There is entirely too much worrying about unhappy marriages. All marriages are happy. It's living together after marriage that causes all the trouble.

Chilton County owes a debt of gratitude to the Kiwanis Club for the nice "Honor Roll" on the lawn beside the post office. Much work and money was spent in gathering the names and preparing them in the strong metal, weather-proof stand that holds them. By the way, that metal stand was built by W. C. Nuss Tin Shop. Mr. Nuss can do more with tin than a monkey can with a grapevine. —Getting back to the subject: The "Honor Roll" is a nice tribute to the "Boys in Service" from our county, and full credit goes to Clanton Kiwanis Club.

Just 14 more shopping days until Christmas. Great suffering tadpoles, where did the other three hundred and fifty-one days go? Seems only yesterday we were getting over last Christmas, and here it is again. Well, all we can say is to do your Christmas hinting early. We done ours last week and so we wouldn't be disappointed we asked everybody for socks, hankies, and ties; that's what we get anyhow.

Willard C. (Clark), Headley, of Rt. 5, has been promoted to the rank of T-4 Grade from that of T-5, according to a recent announcement from the headquarters of Lt. Gen. Dan I. Sultan, Commanding General of the U. S. Forces in the India-Burma Theatre. Prior to his induction Sgt. Headley was a news correspondent, and linotype operator for the Chilton County News, Union Banner and several other newspapers in Alabama. Upon the arrival of his unit in India, the need for a Camp newspaper was seen and with the aid of a few buddies, "Bakshish" (meaning alms—a term used by Indian beggars when asking for a hand-out) a GI gossip sheet, made its debut with Headley acting as one of the staff writers.

Recently "Bakshish" was selected as one of the three papers from the India-Burma Theatre to be reproduced back in the States for distribution among hospitals. Clark plans to return to newspaper work at the close of the war. That can't be any too soon for us either; that is—if the world be interested in working for the News.

We received a nice letter from Evert G. Mims, S-2c who is away from Minneapolis, where the snow is falling and the weather is cold. He says he has been on two nice hunting trips though, even if the weather is cold. The results from a 4 day hunt in North Dakota, were 72 pheasants, 30 three guys. Later he had another party and went deer hunting. "Yeah, fine here so if any of you want to go hunting, this is the right place," he says.

Maybe some of the members of our own Chilton County Hunting Club will take a hint and take the guys on that suggestion.

Relentless Pressure by the Allies Forces a Steady German Retreat; Weather Is Slowing Russian Drive

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The visible relief expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

EUROPE:

Rhine: The Prize

Stiffening Nazi resistance, plus the mud, mists and snows of a fast-approaching European winter had made the road to Berlin a bruising, bloody highway of battle. Yet with relentless pressure, Allied armies were pushing the Nazis steadily back to the Rhine on the front stretching northward from the Vosges mountains of Alsace to the river-studded stretches of Holland.

At the northern end of the front, soldiers of Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson's U. S. Ninth army had broken into the German Roer river defense line, the best natural barrier before the Rhine. Cologne was the ultimate target of this drive.

Lieut. Gen. George H. Patton's Third army infantry meanwhile had made a new crossing into the Saar basin—second only to the Ruhr as a source of Germany's war might—capturing villages close to Saarbrücken.

On the southern flank, Nazi forces south of the Rhine-Rhine canal in Alsace were virtually wiped out with the capture of Dannemarie and several nearby villages. The Seventh U. S. army continued to press forward in the Vosges through snow and mud, thrusting aside scattered resistance. French forces operating with this army had reported an actual crossing of the Rhine north of Strasbourg by their patrols.

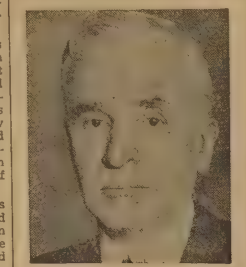

The bulk of the German forces and precious mobile reserves had been deployed on the Cologne plain where many observers believed the final showdown of the war would take place. With General Eisen-

STETTINIUS:

Keeps Hull's Policies

Favorable reactions at home and abroad to President Roosevelt's appointment of Edward R. Stettinius as successor to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, made it clear that there would be no break in the continuity of the administration's post-war peace and international co-operation program.

While Secretary Hull's resignation came suddenly, it was not unexpected. Continued ill-health had prevented his active direction of the state department's operations. In accepting the 73-year-old statesman's resignation, the president projected for him the future role of elder statesman, advising on foreign policy and taking as active a part in shaping a world peace organization as his health would permit. Specifically, Hull was slated to be presiding officer of the United Nations' first peace conference.

Observers viewed the Stettinius appointment as a highly satisfactory solution. As under secretary of state, 44-year-old Stettinius was closely familiar with department procedure. He had two other prime assets. His former experience as legislative administrator had won him the respect and friendship of congress. His dealings with Britain and Russia had demonstrated that he could work in successful cooperation with other leaders of the United Nations. Above all, Stettinius has seen eye-to-eye with Secretary Hull on world problems and worked closely with him.

PACIFIC:

Air Warfare Increases

Attacks by two big fleets of B-29 Superfortresses on Tokyo's waterfront and on rail yards and repair facilities in Bangkok on the southwestern fringe of the Japanese war empire, underscored the fact that air warfare against Nippon would be increased in intensity. The American planes targeted the bases in the Marianas and Iwo Jima and India without combat losses.

Revised estimates of damage in the latest U. S. carrier raid on Luzon in the Philippines showed 20 Japanese ships sunk, 28 damaged and 119 planes either destroyed or damaged. Heavy rains had brought ground operations on Leyte to a virtual standstill. American bombers based on the island struck at Jap targets over a wide area of the southwest Pacific, attacking airbases at Cebu and Negros.

The continued bombings of Tokyo and favorable progress elsewhere helped balance the grim news that continued to flow from China. Here the Jap armies continued their victorious operations, forcing abandonment of effective U. S. air bases on the Chinese mainland.

Hope for a strengthening of Chiang Kai-shek's forces was seen in the appointment of Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley to be U. S. ambassador to China. Hurley was already in China, having gone there last summer with Donald M. Nelson, former war production chief, to help revamp the Chinese war effort.

DRAFT TROUBLE:

In Canada

Moved toward its decision on a previous government order to conscript home defense forces for overseas duty trouble broke out among troops in the Pacific Coast area. Heavily armed, a group of troops prevented another regiment from boarding a train scheduled to take them to a new post. This trouble was quickly dealt with but other demonstrations by troops against the new ruling were reported.

LAND:

War Demands Big

Chester C. Davis, president of the Federal Reserve bank of St. Louis and former head of the Agricultural Adjustment administration, bluntly warned that present world needs for foodstuffs from American farms may cause permanent damage to our soil unless conservation practices are started on more farm acreage.

Speaking before the Friends of the Land in Chicago, Davis said that high pressure wartime production of corn, wheat, oats, timber and other farm crops must be tempered by intelligent farm planning to prevent erosion and soil depletion, which he said must be encouraged are contour plowing, terracing, fertilization, subsurface tillage, growing rye and other crops after the summer grain harvests, and reforestation of farm woodlots.

"There are two ways that we can lose our land," he pointed out. "We can lose it if conquered by a foreign military power, or by erosion, which steals the all-important farm topsoil and washes it down the flooded rivers."

SHIPS:

More Building, Less Sinking

Steadily dwindling shipping losses of the Allies due to enemy action and the phenomenal merchant ship construction record of the United States were highlighted in a British government report released through the office of war information. Total losses from the war's beginning through 1943 were 5,758 vessels aggregating 22,121,000 gross tons. During this time the United States constructed about 30,000,000 deadweight tons.

While no 1944 figures on losses were disclosed, the ratio of construction to sinkings is known to be overwhelmingly favorable. Losses were severest during 1942, and 1,859 ships totaling 8,838,000 tons were sunk. These losses far outstripped American construction. The picture changed in 1943, with losses aggregating 3,646,000 tons and new construction totaling 19,238,000 tons.

CIGARETTES:

Worse Shortage?

Even as Pres. Eric Calamia of the National Retail Tobacco Merchants association predicted that the cigarette shortage would be worse in the next six months than in the past two, house and senate committees began investigations of the scarcity.

Chairman Flanagan of the House agriculture committee branded as "untrue propaganda" the charge that the shortage stems back to a shortage in leaf tobacco. Senator Ferguson of the senate committee said there probably are a number of explanations for the shortage, including increased consumption here and abroad, "but until we find the cause it will be difficult to find a remedy."

Meanwhile match manufacturers were also predicting a severe shortage of their product in the coming months. Industry sources revealed that raw material supplies had been materially reduced in the past two years and thus the usual amounts of book matches would be limited.

WAR WORKERS:

Face Job Problem

America's chief job problem will be concerned with war workers rather than war veterans immediately after Germany's collapse, according to William Muirhead, president of the Associated General Contractors of America.

Speaking before the association's governing and advisory boards in Chicago, Muirhead said that if the war ends in two stages, with a year or more between the collapse of Germany and the defeat of Japan, "it has been estimated 2,500,000 men will be released from the armed forces during the year."

"War production is expected to be cut from 30 to 50 per cent. An estimate of the number of war workers to be thrown onto the labor market during the interval is between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000."

HOMES:

Britons Lose Third

One out of every three houses in Britain has been destroyed or damaged in five years of World War II, a statistical White Paper revealed. War casualties have totaled 733,030.

The White Paper disclosed that 35 per cent of all British males between the ages of 14 and 94 are in the armed forces and that nearly half of the country's women between the ages of 14 and 59 are in uniform or industry.

U. S. Plans Simpler Aid To Business in Future

Reduction in Forms Would Be Relief; Hope To Acquaint Small Operators With Vital General Trends.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

When the mysterious Ninth army suddenly rose falconed on the western front and the First army, beside it, started General Eisenhower's winter offensive there was one question on most people's lips. Will peace come in Europe before spring? In Washington, the lips of many thoughtful people, there was another question, too: "If it comes (or for that matter when it comes) will we be ready for it?" In one of the many compartments of government which must be prepared for the ordeal of sudden peace, preparations are now going forward which, I believe, are both significant and hopeful.

Specifically, I am thinking of a report made by director of the budget, Harold Smith, a summary of which was passed along by Senator Murray, chairman of the committee on small business, for the consolation it might bring. The director of the budget believes that information needed by the government and valuable to small business is going to be obtained, while the statisticians who obtain it are at the same time going to cut down the number of forms which the small businessman will have to fill out.

Filling out forms, especially the income tax blanks, is the subject of considerable jesting these days. But there is a more serious side to the process if we accept form filling-out as a symbol of the growing part which government plays in regulating our personal and business affairs.

That is why this promise coming from the bureau of the budget is significant, especially when it is considered side by side with two trends to which my attention has been called this week and to which too few people have paid sufficient attention.

Expect Government To Take Lead

One is the tabulated result of a poll made by the National Research center expressly for Factory magazine, a McGraw-Hill publication, and the other is a statement, which I heard recently, it was entirely unofficial and surely an expression of his own view, set forth by a British diplomat.

The question which Factory magazine had asked of men earning hourly or piece wages (no supervisors or foremen) was this:

"Who do you think will do the most to solve the job problem after the war—the government, the labor leaders, or company heads?"

Forty-seven per cent of those interviewed looked to government to take the lead in company heads; 14 per cent to labor leaders; 15 per cent undecided.

The opinion expressed by the diplomat was this: "After the war we can look toward a United Kingdom where considerable government control is exercised—ownership of railroads, utilities, mines... a sort of socialistic monarchy."

Both these opinions together indicate a trend in the thinking on both sides of the Atlantic along parallel lines. The American workman feels that the American government will take the responsibility for employment after the war; the British official feels that the British government will take over several of the nation's important industries.

More "forms to make out," if you will.

Which brings us back to small business. Committee Chairman Murray and Budget Director Smith, and the promise of more help for business with less forms to make out, and (symbolically) we hope, less actual domination of business by government.

Small Business Measure of Enterprise

I chose this particular example because I believe that the relationship of small business to government is one of the most careful studies of the subject agree that the measure of small business is the measure of the whole system of private enterprise, that if small business is crushed in the process of reconstruction, all private enterprise will be.

A London transportation company is experimenting with a central entrance bus with a pneumatically operated door and central staircase.

Twelve ships a day are now sliding down the ways in this country, according to Rear Adm. Frederick G. Crisp, director of the navy division on ship establishments and civilian personnel.

eventually be stifled and not only those great semi-public institutions, like the utilities and the mines, will suffer the fate predicted for them in England, but eventually all enterprise will find itself in government hands.

Let me say at this point, however, that some industries have already reached the point where they have forced government operation in other democratic countries and even some very conservative minds in this country are beginning to project similar conditions are being created by certain businesses themselves here.

But it is the purpose of those persons in government and out of it, who are struggling with the problem of preserving small business, to give it the aid it needs to preserve its independence.

In order to provide this aid it is essential that some compromises be made on the part of the businessmen. They cannot expect the government to provide them with help they have to get to them over the hump of reconversion without making certain sacrifices—government officials cannot spend the public money without establishing some checks and balances on the institutions which are thus benefited.

Filling out forms is one of the minor afflictions which government-comforted economic flesh is heir to.

However, it is refreshing to read Mr. Smith's report to Senator Murray in which he tells us of how, according to his custom, he has considered the requests of numerous government agencies for surveys and has turned them down. (His job is to save the people's money by preventing duplicate efforts of government agencies.) He announces that statistical services of the government are going to be "revised and overhauled" in order to produce a rounded program to supply the basic industrial statistics needed not only by the government, but by industry as well.

Most of the failures in little business are due to ignorance on the part of the proprietor of the one thing he ought to know most about—his own business. In the first place, he doesn't know whether he is making money or losing it because he doesn't keep his books properly and he doesn't know enough about the conditions in his line of business, outside his immediate ken, to guide him.

This is the type of information which the government wishes to collect and turn in turn place at his disposal.

One of the plans already worked out is a census of manufacturers of 1944 covering a wide field of data, which it is not my intention to enumerate here for that is not the purpose of these remarks. The purpose is to note hopefully the fact that here is evidence of a trend which in some measure balances the other two mentioned at the beginning of these columns, the trend toward government control.

That is why I quote the following paragraph, not merely for the hope it brings to weary fillers-out of forms, but because it looks like a hopeful sign in an otherwise somewhat gloomy day.

"An analysis made by one war agency of the need of present informational needs shows that about half small material would still be required by that agency after victory; of the remaining half about two-thirds would be discontinued entirely and about one-third continued by other agencies."

Railroads are now handling about 2 1/2 times the amount of freight traffic and more than four times the volume of passenger business that they did before the war, the Association of American Railroads reports.

They are carrying," the report added, "virtually double the load of the first World War, and they are doing it with a fourth fewer freight cars, about a fourth fewer passenger cars, and a third fewer locomotives than in 1918. The reduction in freight cars alone amounts to about 600,000 units."

Rear Adm. John H. Cassady, assistant deputy chief of naval operations, said of air, predicted that in the not too distant future American carriers would be sending 2,000 planes in one strike against the Japs. "Today, 1,000-plane attacks from our carriers are not uncommon," he said, "we can foresee the day when we will be sending 1,500—yes, 2,000—planes."

Farm machinery has been distributed in liberated areas in France and Belgium which have already started to produce a portion of their food needs. Serge G. SIX MILLION DOLLARS
TO BE SPENT ON POST-WAR ELECTRIFICATION

Thomas W. Martin, President of Alabama Power Company, was one of the speakers at the Conference on Alabama's Post-War Rural Electrification Plans. The Conference, held at the Jefferson Davis Hotel, Montgomery, was called by the Alabama Public Service Commission last Friday.

Mr. Martin related the Company's program for rural electrification in the areas served by it, revealing that it expects to build over 5,000 miles of rural electric lines to serve approximately 25,000 more rural customers. At the completion of the program which will cost in excess of $6,000,000, 95% of the farms in the service area of the Company located in 55 counties will have electric service available. Preliminary work has already been done in 44 of the 55 counties in which lines will be built, Mr. Martin stated. He related that, in response to the urging of farmers in the first four counties in which preliminary solicitations were made, application was filed with the War Production Board in March of this year for approval for construction or partial construction of the lines so that service could be made available at an earlier time than would otherwise be possible. In its application the company proposed to cut poles from its own timber lands, have them treated at local crosscutting plants and set them with crossarms and hardware attached. The War Production Board approved the application in August and the work of setting poles in these four counties (Etowah, Mount, Walker and Fayette) has started.

Rural electrification started in Alabama in 1920," said Mr. Martin. "In that year Alabama Power Company built a distribution line five miles long, along the Villavesta Pike in Madison County to supply electric light and power to seven farms. The results of the operation were that line led the management of these Company to the conclusion that electricity could contribute not only to the profits of the farmer but could as well lighten many of the burdens of the farm and "In 1923, shortly after this Madison County rural line had proved its usefulness, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, through Professor M. L. Nichols, then a member of its faculty, suggested that Auburn, The Alabama Farm Bureau Federation and Alabama Power Company cooperate in making studies of and experiments with electricity to determine the economy of the use of electric power in farm operations and in farm homes. The Company and the forward looking Farm Bureau Federation under the able leadership of Edward A. O'Neal, accepted the suggestion of Professor Nichols and such studies and experiments were undertaken, the Company contributing $24,000 as a part of the cost thereof.

"These studies and actual experiments proved highly successful and gave impetus to a state-wide campaign to electrify farms and farm homes."

Mr. Martin recalled that in the early days of rural electrification farmers did not readily accept the idea of electrification of their homes and farm operations and that to gain this acceptance it was necessary to employ engineers scientifically trained in agriculture and in uses of electric power as a part of the farm economy.

After crediting Alabama Polytechnic Institute, the Farm Bureau Federation, other utilities, the REA, the equipment manufacturers and other agencies with helping develop acceptance of the idea of electrification for farm operation Mr. Martin stated, "It is the full purpose and desire of Alabama Power Company to work with the agricultural agencies of the state, the electric cooperatives, the REA and farmers in making electric service of the maximum possible value to as many farmers possible as soon as possible. We propose further to work in cooperation with the Agricultural Extension Service, the Farm Bureau, the cooperatives and any other agencies that are interested and in position to contribute to the complete and successful electrification of the farms in Alabama."

THIS IS MY CO-PILOT

Col. Robert L. Scoff

WNU RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point as a second lieutenant in 1928, he was assigned to Kelly Field and took up combat flying. When the war breaks out he is an instructor and is told he is too old for combat flying. He carries his case to several generals and is finally given an opportunity to get into the fight. He flies a bomber into India, where he becomes a ferry pilot but this does not appeal to him. After visiting Gen. Chennault he gets a Kittyhawk and soon becomes a "one man air war" over Burma. He is made commanding officer of the 23rd Fighter Group. Maj. Alton gets three bombers one day and lands in the river. His plane sinks.

CHAPTER XIX

But on the day when he finally got out on his way to what he wanted to do most, the Japs struck at Pearl Harbor. Ajax had just landed at Wake Island, and the next day he was, he had reported to the Marine Commander for duty. He was having breakfast with the CO (CO means Commanding Officer), Major Devaux, when the Japanese attack came to Wake.

Ajax used to say that the unusual strength he demonstrated that morning was due to the heavy supply of vitamin pills he had taken. As the first bomb hit the runway of the field, he ran with the other pilots for the door and the safety of the slit trenches on the outside. The door opened inward, but Ajax opened it outward, taking the screen, the door, and most of the end of the flimsy building with him. Part of the glass hit him in the face—and that cut was the only wound he received in the bombing. But he carried the scar with him when I last saw him in China.

Baumler got out of Wake Island the next day on the last clipper, but to join the AVG he was no longer going West. It was now necessary to go all the way back and around the other way, towards the East. Anyway he managed to go by way of Washington and got promoted to Captain. I believe if Ajax had stayed in Washington just one more day, he would have been "Major." After seeing Ajax Baumler for a few fights, I wish that he had gotten to be a Major before he came to China, for he certainly was a fighter pilot.

During the month of our battle of Hengyang, I saw Captain Baumler do some of the bravest things I have ever seen any man accomplish. We had a few ships that had been strafed badly on the ground; some of them had been shot to pieces, and some of the engines or the electrical systems had been damaged. In most cases these same ships couldn't be got off the ground when the Japs came over; sometimes they were caught three or four times by Zeros, and consequently they were in a continual state of repair.

One of these was old Number 104, the ship that Ajax had been flying. The ground crew had worked on it for a while, but when the Japs came it was just about ready to be taken back to the factory in Kunming for overhaul, the Japs would catch it again. Finally one morning Ajax came over, said, "The hell with it." "Put the tin-bao" came he went and got into the crippled fighter to take off before the Japs could get there to strafe it again. He told me later that he was tired of seeing it sitting on the ground as a target, whether it would fly or not, he was going to get it taking as fast as it would go and at least make it harder to hit than it had been in the revetment. When Ajax did four times, he got it off. But the story of it all reached me later on.

I was on the ground that day, and didn't see it. But I heard Ajax talking on the radio, and I heard his six guns when he caught one of the Zeros. Just a little later I saw the trail of black smoke that marked the enemy ship going down. I was glad to hear Ajax talking that morning, for a minute I'd thought that smoke might be he, going down in that luckless Number 104. All the time he'd been flying the ship he'd been having to pump the landing gear up manually, for the hydraulic system had been shot up by the Jap strafers day before. Added to this, an exertion which is no pleasant task at fighting altitudes, was a more painful experience. The cards were stacked even more heavily against Ajax in this jinx ship, for his electrical system was shorting out.

On his take-off from Hengyang, as he gave the ship the gun Baumler had felt a terrible electrical shock through his sweaty hand on the stick control. He couldn't turn the stick loose or the ship would have crashed. He had to take off on the jinx ship, so he grimly held on. Take hold of the spark plug of your car some time while the engine is running, and you'll feel just about what Ajax felt. But he held on until he was at an altitude where it was safe to turn the stick loose, get out his handkerchief, and wrap it around the stick. Even after he had been through the fight and came in to land at Lingling he had to take some more of the shock cure, for by that time the handkerchief was damp and the electricity was jumping through it. He couldn't stay long on the ground, for the Japs were on the way back in waves; so he resuscitated and taxied out to take off. Though the engine was now missing badly, Ajax couldn't wait—the Japs would be there in a matter of minutes.

He tried a take-off with the current going through his arms again and the engine spitting and spluttering—and at the end of the runway he still hadn't enough speed to get in the air. He would swerve the ship about and try the other direction. Finally after three runs he got the fighter plane in the air, pumped the wheels up by hand and continued—doing it for five hundred miles—and so flew back to Kunming.

But it wasn't all hard work and no play in China. Some evenings we used to sit in our cave down at Kwelin and listen to the Tokyo radio. They would give us reports on the missions that we flew to Hankow, Canton, and the cities near Lake Puyang Hu—Nanchang and Kukiang. They'd declare that we were using barbaric tactics and that we were going to be treated as guerrillas if we were captured.

One night while we sat there calmly listening to the news and playing gin rummy, Tokyo news-analysts announced they did not think the American fighter force in China was large. True enough, said the radio, they had struck weakly at several cities, in their barbaric way bombing innocent Chinese women and children, and for this the American pilots would pay when they were prisoners of the Imperial Japanese Government, now fighting to liberate Asia for the Asiatics.

We listened to the usual "blatant" news raising an eyebrow, until Radio Tokyo continued: "We don't think the American fighter force in China is more than three hundred ships."

There was a squadron that came over from Assam to work with us, part of another group from India. In this squadron there were some fine fighter pilots, one of whom was Lieut. Dallas Clinger from old Wyoming.

Pilots of the China Air Task Force on the alert at Hengyang.

Clinger was another man who in years gone by in the West would have been a great gunman like Tex Hill. Only Clinger wouldn't have cared whether he was on the side of the law, the Mexicans, the Chinese, or Jesse James. He just wanted to fight.

One morning Clinger was one of a formation of three fighters over Hengyang. His combat report read like this: "I was flying on my leader's wing—Lieutenant Lombard—at 23,000 feet when we saw three enemy planes down below circling. There were larger formations reported around. Just then I heard my flight leader say: 'There are three stragglers—let's attack 'em.'" So we went down below circling. As I shot into the Zero on the right of the formation I saw that we were in the midst of twenty-four other Zeros, all shooting at us. I got mad and shot at every plane that I could get my sights on. I think I shot one down but I was so busy I didn't see it crash."

This was signed "DALLAS CLINGER—2nd Lieutenant—Almost Unemployed."

What Clinger had really done was the greatest piece of daredevil flying that any of us had ever seen. Instead of diving away from the enemy he had, he had stayed and fought the old-fashioned "dog-fight" until the Japs just about took him to pieces from sheer weight of fire. When they straggled home they must have been the most surprised bunch of pilots in all Japan, for this crazy American with his heavy P-40 had done everything in or out of the book. He fought right side up and upside down, from 23,000 feet down to less than one thousand. As many Japs as could all the air behind Clinger would get there and try to hang on while they shot at him. Clinger wouldn't fight fair and stay there. In the end, he came right over the field, diving from the enemy until he had outdistanced them enough to turn, then he pulled up into an "Immelmann" and came back shooting at them head-on.

He was last seen after the unequal fight skimming out across the sea paddles, making just about 600 miles an hour, with some ten to twelve Zeros following. For some reason they seemed reluctant, as though they didn't know whether to run after Clinger or leave him alone. He came in for lunch with his ship badly shot up by their cannon. But he had shot one of them down and had got another "probable."

Down Lingling went on another morning. Clinger went into an attack with his engine acting up. After the first contact with the enemy, he was forced to land, followed by two enemy strafers. As Clinger maneuvered the falling fighter into a safe landing, the two Zeros came down shooting at his rolling P-40.

Dallas from Wyoming got out on the wing to jump onto the ground, with his ship still rolling. Just then one of the Jap bullets went right through his seat-pack chute, passing exactly between Clinger's pants and where he sat on the parachute. He got so mad he jumped back in the cockpit and shot at two Zeros as they passed over his nose. After a while the air-cooled guns are made to shoot while the ship is going two or three hundred miles an hour—but Lieutenant Clinger said he got in a pretty good burst from his grounded fighter before the six Fifties froze.

Johnny Alison had helped to train Clinger in the tactics of fighter pilots. In fact, Johnny used to fly with every man in his flight on his wing, at one time or another. In one training flight such as this he took Clinger up and they practiced attacking one another—"dog-fighting," the "pea-shooter" pilots say. Up the at not more than 20,000 feet they came at one another head-on, time after time, until the moment when, as Johnny told me later, he was sure Clinger was going to run into him. Clinger, who usually forced others to give way to him, was now the leader of the P-40. They circled and tried again, and again Clinger kept right on coming, until, as the ships drew together at well over six hundred miles an hour, Clinger saw that more Johnny had to dodge, and the Wild Man from Wyoming went on over his head.

They landed then, and by the time Johnny told me the story of his ship he had calmed down. Clinger came nonchalantly over. Just in passing Alison said, "That was pretty good flying, Clinger; you fly formation well and you look around okay. But you want to watch those head-on runs—you nearly hit me up there. Did you know that?"

Clinger shifted the weight of his body back to both feet. With his chin raised he answered: "Yes, Sir, Major—I tried to. You see, I've been flying longer than I have and I know I'm not as good a pilot as you are. But, Sir, I knew I'd come along and see you would of said."

You can find the remains of a good many Japs in China, or somewhere down in the China Sea, who know that Clinger meant just what he said. He'd keep coming at them head-on and shoot them out of the sky before they got to him.

The battle for the defense of Hengyang lasted through August, but we didn't just sit there on the defensive. We really took the offensive as our best defense, and kept it up until higher headquarters sent us a very classic radio:

"You either did not understand or did not heed my last radiogram to remain on the defensive. Repeat quote on the defensive unquote. Signed, Chennault."

At Nanchang, on August 11, 1942, I heard the first enemy plane that was confirmed. Though I hate the Japs with a passion, I felt sorry for that pilot, for he never saw me at all. But as I left his burning ship North of the runway that he had been taking off from, I thought of the boys in the Philippines and Java, and I wasn't so sorry.

I had dropped my five-hundred-pound bomb on the hangar, when in pulling out of the dive I saw Lieutenant Barnum, from Old Lyme, Connecticut, continue his dive on a Jap ship, and begin to fire on it. I looked below. There was just the far end of the Jap field where one enemy plane was taking off. I rolled over and dove, pulling out about a half mile behind the enemy at the moment he got off the ground. His wheels had just begun to move to the "up" position as I got him dead in my sights and pressed the triggers. As the pilot died, his new P-40 pulled straight up, then spun into the ground the few feet it had climbed. I passed over it as the flames belched from the wreckage. I climbed for an enemy observation plane higher over Lake Puyang Hu, but the Jap outclimbed me, and though I fired at him several times from long range he finally got away.

On this trip, Barnum had shot down one enemy ship, and Lieutenant Daniels, though unable to release his wing-rack fragmentation bombs, had strafed the field with his bombs hanging on. After the attack, this pilot had been landed in the plane in a rice paddy near Hengyang rather than bail out—and this decision to save the ship for spare parts had been made with the six frags still hanging from the ship's wing-racks. He got away with it, and Captain Wang was able to salvage the fighter.

When the P-40's got so shot up that we were afraid they'd quit running and we'd lose them over the enemy lines, we were called back to Kunming. There, sitting around the camp, we were working on the ships and anxiously looked for mail from home, the war seemed far away.

Swap of Fish, Wallet

OSWEGO, N. Y.—One day's fishing failure each, as reported by Richard C. Mitchell, who caught the legal limit but lost his wallet, and by William R. Wolfe, who caught the wallet but got no trout. State troopers procured a happy ending at a meeting where Mitchell swapped his catch for the $138 and gas coupons.

Tanker Outsmarts Japanese U-Boat

Engages in Shot for Shot Battle for 12 Hours.

WASHINGTON.—Exchanging shot for shot, the American tanker Van-hill "outmaneuvered and outfought" a Japanese submarine in a day-long battle in the Pacific, the War Shipping Administration reported recently.

The tanker, Kaiser-built in the Swan Island shipyard at Portland, Ore., eluded five torpedoes and many shells from the deck guns of the Japanese raider, said the WSA report. The encounter was broken off when the arrival of a navy PBV plane forced the enemy craft to dive for safety.

The navy gunners and 80 merchant seamen were at battle stations just three minutes after the lookout, Carman J. Nappa of Union, N. J., broke the early morning calm with the shout: "Tin fish on the port side."

Nappa was almost thrown out of the crew's nest by the violence with which Quartermaster Richard C. Durant, Washington, Ill., put the helm overboard. The torpedo came within about five feet. Four more came in quick succession, but all missed. Capt. Phillip W. Shinn of Long Beach, Calif., kept the ship zig-zagging. The submarine surfaced and let fly two shells. Both went over. The tanker's first shell was short. The second bracketed the sub and the Japs hastily submerged.

Smoke from the sub's exhaust was sighted half an hour later five miles away, but the enemy kept moving on a course outside the tanker's range. One shot from the merchantman, at extreme range, fell 25 yards short, but the two replying shells from the sub were 200 yards short.

For 12 hours the game went on, with the submarine taking advantage of its greater speed to keep out of range. The tanker fired more than 30 shells.

Nazis 'Scared to Death'

Of Our Tanks, Navy Says

WASHINGTON.—An army observer just returned from the European battle zones reported that American tanks can outfight their Nazi counterparts and that the Germans have been forced into "unsound" employment of armor.

Maj. Joseph M. Kirchheimer, army ground forces observer with the Fourth and Sixth armored divisions in France, told the conference that the Nazi tanks "have bigger guns, but they don't know how to handle the tank or shoot as well" as American tankmen.

While the front of the German Mark VI Tiger tanks has armor as thick as eight inches, their side and rear tracks are vulnerable and they are cumbersome (over 50 tons), he said.

The Fourth armored division, he reported, destroyed 400 enemy tanks up to September 27, captured 1,500 prisoners, killed 5,000 and knocked out 1,500 French vehicles and 140 large artillery pieces.

The Germans, Kirchheimer asserted, were "really scared to death of our tanks." A group of prisoners to whom he was talking "stared with their mouths open" when they saw a column of armor and artillery roll down the road," the major added.

Reveal Attacks on U. S.

Drivers at Marseille

PARIS.—The great Mediterranean port of Marseille is providing a breaching to French Allied authorities attempting to maintain order along military supply lines, conversations with responsible army and navy officials disclosed.

American soldiers and truck drivers have been shot at under various circumstances. Their trucks or cunks have been robbed of gasoline or rations—both extremely valuable in a region where the food supply is most stringent and transport is difficult to obtain.

American authorities countered by running trucks in convoys at night and placing armed guards on each. While French officials ordered all persons except members of the regular army or regularly organized FFI units to leave their arms. A civil affairs driver was fatally shot near Toulon. A tally of shootings as recounted by army and navy officers showed a score of nearly 30 cases, including near misses.

Sweden Quits Sending

Ball Bearings to Nazis

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN.—The Swedish foreign office announced officially recently that all export of Swedish ball bearings to Germany had ceased. Taking cognizance of American press reports to the effect that bearing traffic had been stopped, the foreign office said in its brief statement, "No such export is now being carried on."

Household Hints

Place a handful of starch in the water when washing tile floors. It will leave a nice shine.

Boil the wick of a kerosene lamp in vinegar before using to keep it from smoking.

To prevent the gloss from coming off white paint, wash with milk and very little soap.

Never leave pieces of cut-up chicken in water. Some of the good juices and excellent flavor leaches out and is lost.

When turning the mattress, also turn it around, that is, place the end that was at the head of the bed at the foot.

Chimney soot can be kept down by throwing dry salt on a bed of hot coals, once or twice a week. Dry fuel and good draft helps to check soot and creosote in pipes and chimneys.

If the leg of an old stocking is cut and stretched over the new broom down to a short distance above the end of the straws, it will prevent broom from wearing out so quickly and at the same time make it better for sweeping.

farm organization and solicit membership? We wonder if the confidence in your organization can be maintained with such contrasts, as they appear to us, appear in the Proclamation and Ordinances that were recently passed.

As we read the one hundred and eighty-four (184) sections of Ordinance

No. 1-R, we wonder if each section was analyzed carefully and justly before it was adopted, if so, then we can assume that this document contains the basis of justice as far as this governing body is concerned.

The gas tax as levied in Ordinance

No. 2-R is another drain on the farmers' pocketbook if he is to continue buying his gas in Clanton.

The farmer, is yet, far from getting justice and is forced to save every penny possible if he has to buy his gas outside of Clanton.

The license and taxes as levied by the new ordinances, which are extra to what we already had, are, as we feel, unnecessary at this time and should be reconsidered.

We farmers would feel more welcome in Clanton under the old rather than the new Ordinances.

We hope the electors of the city of Clanton will contact your governing board and ask them to be careful and not build monopolistic walls around your city.

We want harmony and good will between farmers and city people, we want our constitutional right and all that it takes to get justice and to that end we shall contend.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS TO SPEAK

The Methodist Christmas Musical

At 5:30 p.m., Sunday, December 17, five artists from Gunter Field will present the annual White Christmas musical program at the First Methodist Church in Clanton.

The program has been arranged by Sgt. Gerald Richardson, organist and concert pianist. Sgt. Richardson is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y., and has been organist and choir director at Gunter Field, Montgomery, Ala., for the past two years. He is a member of the "Four Star Revue" that has toured throughout the South this year. Also a soloist at the Methodist Cathedral and the First Presbyterian Church in Montgomery at various occasions. Sgt. Richardson has broadcast with Alonzo Merk in organ and piano recital hour.

Sgt. Richardson is bringing to Clanton Pvt. Maxine Ruppel, chapel soloist at Gunter Field for the past two years. Pvt. Ruppel has had considerable experience as music teacher and soloist in Montana. She has been on various Bond programs and camp shows with Sgt. Richardson.

Sgt. Mostimer Sherman, baritone soloist, will be on the program, also. Sgt. Sherman has freely given his time to churches, the chapel and the USO in Montgomery. He is a good song leader and has led group singing at Montgomery churches and soldier parties. At present Sgt. Sherman is acting director of the "Gunter Field Glee Club."

The Methodist church is most fortunate in having these artists with us this Christmas and extend to the public a cordial invitation to come hear them.

PAYS LARGE TAX AHEAD OF DEADLINE

The L. and N. Railroad, one of Alabama's biggest taxpayers, came across with its ad valorem taxes, which amounted to $668,000, a month ahead of the deadline this year, settlement being made with the various county tax collectors in counties served by the road on December 1, while the tax would have been delinquent until January 1. Of the total payment, $195,169 went into the State treasury, approximately $435,000 to counties in which the L. and N. operates and the balance to municipalities. Figures from the State Department of Revenue showed the L. and N. Railroad properties in Alabama assessed for taxes at a valuation of $30,026,000.

Attention Beat Four Folks

We are running behind on our bond quota, and the dead line is drawing near. Several beats are far ahead of us and with all things being equal we should have gone over the top the first week of the drive.

We have made a list of every man and woman in Beat 4, and as they are buying bonds we are checking their names. We want everyone in Beat 4 to be part of this drive, let's all buy a bond of some size. If you can't buy a big bond, buy a small one, if you can't buy a small bond, buy some stamps, but by all means put forth some effort and be a part of this drive.

There isn't a boy over on the front lines that wouldn't sell his clothes to buy bonds, to help win this war. He knows what war is, especially now, when it's so cold, muddy and sloppy, and he has to keep moving both day and night in a strange country and with no comforts of home. It seems that the very least any of us could do, would be to BUY A BOND for ourselves and sell another one to our neighbor. Remember if you get cold and hungry you can at least turn around and go home to the comforts of life. Give that boy a break. Show him we are backing him up to the limit. If you have already bought a bond, BUY ANOTHER ONE. If you haven't bought a bond then by all means loan the Government, your Government, some of your money, at a good rate of interest, and you will never regret saying when this war is over that "I did my part in the way of buying bonds." It will be mighty nice to have these bonds on hand when the things you need are available again. So let ALL PULL TOGETHER and put Beat 4 over the top. Go down now and buy a bond from either of the banks or the post office.

A. A. BAZZELI, Beat 4, Chairman.

LETTER FROM A CHILTON COUNTY FARM BOY

Somewhere in Germany.

Dearest Mother and All: Just a few lines to let you know that I am still O.K. and hope that this finds you all well and enjoying life. I hope you had a nice Sunday; it rained here most of the day.

Dad, did you go to church today? I sure hope you did. I didn't go, but my prayers were for the ones who could go. I pray earnestly for the ones that I know are carrying on the wonderful work of God. I feel that my prayers are being answered. Christ has been nearer to me and has meant more to me than anything else. I try in my humble way to express my thanks to Him. I know that He has brought me this far, and I believe that He will carry me on.

When the boys look dark and the shells are bursting, I know and feel the power of Christ and know that He can lead me through. I know that you all are praying for me, and let's pray that God's Will be done and not ours. When God gets ready for me to go, thank God, I am ready. I know that my Redeemer lives. Dad, I am sane and don't expect nothing unusual to happen, but you know that all things are possible in the sight of God. If anything happens to me, if its God's will for me to go, I am ready. I believe that I will go back home.

Well, I'll go for now. Answer soon. May God bless and protect you all is my daily prayer. Remember us boys over here in your prayers.

Love to all, AUBREY DEASON.

Help Fight Infantile Paralysis

Every Spring time there comes to us a dread of infantile paralysis, one of the worst scourges this country experiences. More children contracted the disease in 1944 than in any comparable period in many recent years. Thanks to the efforts of volunteers joining in the fight against infantile paralysis the stricken have been and are being given every chance for recovery.

Each year the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc., make a drive for funds. These funds are used for individual cases for research at medical schools and universities, for nurses and other expenses. Chilton county has suffered severely in the past from this dreadful disease, and should do her part to help combat the disease and the after effects. There are 32,150,000 children in the United States under 16 years of age. Each is a candidate for infantile paralysis.

CHRISTMAS WORKERS MUST HAVE SOCIAL SECURITY CARD NUMBERS

School children, women and other part-time workers employed temporarily for the Christmas holidays should secure a Social Security Account Number Card, if they do not have one, according to Mr. Martin C. Folmar, Manager of the Birmingham Field Office. Application forms for account numbers may be secured from any post office or field office of the Social Security Board.

Some employers appear to be under the impression that they do not have to make Social Security reports to the Bureau of Internal Revenue. They have less than eight employees. All employers having one or more working for them in commerce and industry are required to report quarterly to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, not later than the last day of January, April, July and October, the name, Social Security account number, and amount of wages paid each worker, including the taxes deducted from each worker's wages for the preceding three months.

Employers are required to furnish each employee a statement of wages paid and the amount deducted for taxes at least once a year, and may furnish it oftener—every quarter, every month, or every pay day. However, it must be given to the employee within two months after the end of the pay period which it covers, and in all cases when the employee leaves the job.

CHILTON CO. DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WELFARE

According to the 1943-44 annual report of the Chilton County Department of Public Welfare released by Miss Molly Megginson, Director, 418 families representing 838 individuals, were granted financial assistance during the past fiscal year.

Funds distributed totaled $88,910.00, or an average of $20.50 per family. "Though this average represented an increase of 62 per cent over grants for the same period a year ago, it meets little more than half the needs of the individual families," Miss Megginson declared. "In this amount distributed, there were $41,245.00 Federal Funds, $23,823.00 State Funds, and $23,842.00 local funds.

The greater portion of this money went to the people in the county over 65 years of age who are otherwise unable to care for themselves. This group represented 72.50 per cent of the entire caseload. Miss Megginson's report revealed. The Old Age Assistance average grants were increased from $13.25 in September, 1943, to $14.14 in September, 1944, because of funds made available by the action of the 1943 Legislature.

The next largest group of unemployed included 62 families with dependent children who received average grants of $29.81 per month. Next, blind people in the county numbered 3 and received average monthly grants of $19.00.

"The aged and the blind and the families with dependent children were aided from Federal, State and Local Funds," Miss Megginson said, "but no Federal funds are available for other handicapped people in the county." These numbered 34 families who received average grants of $16.97 per month.

Specialized services other than financial aid were given to 19 families which included 24 children. Of this number, 10 children were in institutions, and seven were on probation from the Juvenile Court. Other types of cases receiving services were adoption cases and children needing boarding home care.

Miss Megginson's report revealed that apart from administering the Public Assistance Program in the county, the Welfare Department has participated in the Medical and Social Survey Program in cooperation with the Selective Service System. Under this program, 1,333 clearance and 94 state special investigations have been made during the past year.

The County Welfare Department has also cooperated with the County Department of Education and the County Department of Health in the program of the Cripple Children's Service, with the Local Chapter of the American Red Cross, with the Juvenile Court, and with other organizations and agencies interested in the Welfare of the people of the county. Miss Megginson's report concluded.

Wounded Soldier, Military Band At Courthouse Saturday

COME TO CLANTON AND HEAR VETERANS TELL OF TOTAL WAR

You will be missing the chance of a lifetime Saturday if you do not come to Clanton and hear the Military Band and three wounded veterans who will be at the Courthouse from 11 a. m. until 4 p. m. to tell you of experiences they have seen and endured in the present conflict. The Band will furnish music throughout the day.

As perhaps you know, Chilton county is running behind in her quota in the Sixth War Loan drive and it is your duty as well as your neighbor's duty, to get behind your Committee Chairman and help put this thing over before next Tuesday.

There can be no "real" Christmas in Chilton County this year if we fail to put over the Sixth War Loan.

It is the week before Christmas and men from our county are giving their lives in Leyte and along the Western Wall of Germany that we may have a liberty-blessed Christmas time here at home.

But many of us are falling down on our part of this job. We are not buying the "E" bonds, the average American's share in the all-out victory drive that is underway along our battle fronts.

Attend the War Bond Rally at the Courthouse Saturday and hear first hand what these boys are doing for us—and we are only asked to lend our money.

WHO'S WHO AT UNIVERSITY

Miss Doris Deloach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Deloach of Clanton, who will receive her B. S. degree from State Teachers College in August, is among those students who will be listed in the 1944-45 issue of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. This book will be released in April.

This publication is published through the cooperation of over 600 American universities and colleges. It is the only means of national recognition for graduates which is devoid of politics, fees, and dues. Several students from accredited colleges are selected each year, for an unprejudiced committee, for their biographies to appear in Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. These books are placed in the hands of hundreds of companies and others who annually recruit outstanding students for employment.

The purpose of Who's Who is to serve as an incentive for students to get the most out of their college careers; as a means of compensation to students for what they have already done; as a recommendation to the business world; and as a standard of measurement for students.

Miss Deloach is a member of the Sigma Kappa Epsilon Sorority at State Teachers College, is Chairman of the Social Committee, and was Secretary-Treasurer of the Freshman Class.

Miss Deloach graduated from Chilton County High School in the class of 1942.

Congressional Machinery Is Slated for Overhauling

Bulk of Complaints Against Legislative Branch Are Inconsistent, but Committee Setup Needs Revision.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

It is an old American custom to take a pot-shot at congress whenever something goes wrong and nobody else is handy to blame, no matter whether the trouble is dust-storms, sun-spots, jaundice or just plain grouch.

You may recall that this feeling reached an unhappy high in the famous "bundles - for - congressmen" campaign of 1942. Some practical jokers in Seattle seized on the civil service retirement bill which made all government employees, including members of congress, eligible for pensions, as an excuse to start the horseplay. By the time the silly season arrived, everyone with an overdose of prickly heat was taking it out in one way or another on the poor legislators.

That was very funny to everybody except the recipients of the bundles — and a few thoughtful people who know that the greatest danger to a democratic government is lack of confidence in the parliamentary body. They knew, too, that most of the sins of congress are due to the fact that some of the congressional methods established by the founding fathers have grown out of date.

As one congressman put it to me the other day: "We can't be expected to handle billion-dollar budgets with a penny-ante setup."

In July, 1943, Senator LaFollette (Progressive) of Wisconsin introduced a plan for the reorganization of the committee structure of the senate. This year the senate approved the appointment of a joint committee on organization of both houses. The Smith committee in the house, Senator Maloney and Representative Monroney and others carried on, until today the chances seem bright for consideration by the 79th congress of a plan to streamline the machinery of the government's legislative branch.

In addition, a committee of lawyers has just completed a four-year study on the reorganization of congress, the results of which have found favor in congressional circles. I think it apropos at this point to offer two quotations, one from the works of the historian Charles Beard, mentioned by Senator LaFollette in an article he wrote on the subject, and another from the article itself.

This is what historian Beard said: "As a more than casual student of the Congressional Record, I venture this opinion: It is possible to pick out of the Record for the past 10 years addresses (not orations) which for the breadth of knowledge, technical skill, analytical acumen, close reasoning and dignified presentation, compare favorably with similar utterances made in the preceding century by the so-called great orators."

LaFollette, subscribing to this opinion, adds frankly: "There is, to be sure, more trash—bad poetry, demagogic claptrap, and cloyed nonsense—in the Record of the past 10 years than there was on the annals of congress from 1789 to 1799." (Aye, aye!)

The senator reminds us, however, of the extremely complex quality of the problems which congress has to face today and the distractions to which the members are subjected, and then, comparing the congress about which he is writing (the 76th) with the first congresses, he says he is convinced "that for disinterestedness, absence of corruption, and concern with the public good, the present body is of a higher order."

And that is a sentiment which, in the humble opinion of this writer, is substantiated by the majority of objective students of the two bodies.

All Democratic Institutions Suffer During Wartime

The present legislators, if they wished to be as truly expediting as many civilian slackers in this our time of national stress, could answer some of their critics with a shrug and a reminder that "there is a war on." When a war is the toughest filter of democratic institutions suffer.

The inconsistency of the bulk of the complaints against the legislative branch of the government in the last two years can be seen when it is realized that the two most popular charges offered were either that congress was a "rubber stamp" or that it was "obstructionist," which adds up to a contradiction.

Because of the fact that the growth of the country has demanded an increase in the body of administrative and executive law, congress is forced to delegate more power and more functions to the administrative branch. To overcome this trend in so far as possible will be one of the efforts of the reorganization, of which I will speak in a moment. Meanwhile, it is interesting to note that Senator LaFollette himself called attention to the accomplishment of the Truman investigating committee in exposing executive errors already committed and in preventing others by the mere threat of "ever present exposure and censure."

The one field in which congress can greatly increase its efficiency and in so doing, not only checking willful aggression of the administrative and executive branches but rendering a real assistance to them and to the whole nation, is in a reorganization of the committees and their methods.

Congress at present is not equipped to offer sufficient constructive help in the writing of legislation and therefore, frequently, the last word goes, by default, to the interested government agency, or that particular pressure group among the technical information necessary to bolster its case.

Representative Smith of Virginia, in the report of his committee to investigate executive agencies, brings out this point, as others have. The report says:

"Today a large percentage of the most important legislation is . . . painstakingly drafted by the very executive officials who are intended to be the recipients of the powers which the legislation delegates. Furthermore, the same officials are generally the only expert and fully informed witnesses to testify before the legislative committees of the senate and the house (with its larger membership) a member can concentrate on a single committee's work. In the senate, I know of one case where a senator found that all six committees on which he served were scheduled to meet at the same time on the same day."

That does not mean that there are not men in congress who know as much and more than many of the persons appearing before them in favor of, or in opposition to, a particular bill. But even a senator can't be all things to all men.

Then there are the well-wheeled lobby groups with their technical experts.

What can a committee with a limited appropriation do in competition with a private group with funds to hire the best legal or technical brains in the country to present its case? How can a member of a congressional committee be expected to know as much about a subject as a member of a government department who spends his whole time on the particular subject involved?

Fortunately, the situation is curable. One answer is—greater specialization on the part of the members of congress. This can be accomplished by cutting down the number of committees upon which a member is allowed to serve. With its larger membership, a member can concentrate on a single committee's work. In the senate, I know of one case where a senator found that all six committees on which he served were scheduled to meet at the same time on the same day.

Another solution for the problem would be provision for employment of non-political experts, both temporary and permanent, to advise committees on purely technical matters. This arrangement now exists but in such a limited degree that it is hardly effective.

BARBS . . . by Baukhage

Washington is 84th on a list of 92 cities in lung afflictions. Still sound of wind, anyhow, I hear you remark.

Under the Hull reciprocal agreements, tariffs to 36 per cent are only 1 per cent lower than they were before 1913 and 8 per cent higher than under the Underwood act of that year.

The French air ministry has temporarily suspended voluntary enlistments. He French air force because "the number of applicants exceeds the number who can be enrolled and instructed."

Congress is about to streamline itself. I wonder if the congressman will have to tie down to a swift silhouette to match.

FOLK & THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Someone or something has gone screwy. This week in a single mail we received letters intended for the Stewart News, Stewart, Fla. The Chambers County News and the Clanton Union Leader. All were the same release, sent out by the Public Relations Office, with the First Allied Airborne Army and all sent to the Chilton County News. With the cream of our manpower in service we do not understand this incompetency.

Reports come from Charlie Wilkins that he had seen everything new. Last week something happened to a mule belonging to a friend of his. Said mule was used to pull the sorghum mill. Well with no mule to pull the mill, something had to be done. After due consideration he hitched his tractor to the pole, once again the old mule and went on with his sorghum grinding. Since hearing this Bob Oglesby reports that this is not the only farmer of the county who has used his tractor in this manner. Elbert Bowles of Eastview Community; Willard Hicks of Maplesville; Dewey Collins of Thorby, just to mention a few. And, oh, yeah, Bob said to mention that was a farmall tractor.

What's all this excitement about the better shortage. It can be made from grass. All you need is a cow and a chure.

Mrs. Marcus, the ORA man, tells me one lady told him she thought the front-system meant going into a store, pointing at what you wanted, and the grocer telling you he had been out of it for months.

Folk & Things is receiving quite a few Christmas cards from overseas, and they are the most appreciated of any we have received. We think it is a wonderful thing when those boys can send a Christmas card. Living as they do, mostly in the mud and rain, and blue and homesick all the time, still anxious to have someone on the side know they wish them a Merry Christmas—and some letters say our boys will come back loaded and reckless, would-be gangsters tomorrow—hokey.

Pretty Christmas windows are blossoming everywhere. . . . the snow Monday morning was beautiful. Two weeks to the day later it would have been a white Christmas. . . . Selective Service officials (looked like the big-shots) eating dinner at the Bus Station the other night. Our local Board One and Two office force were dining with them. Heard later they were trying to place one of our locals at another office in an adjoining county. . . . G. A. Arnold is too, too big hearted with his cigarettes. Last week he found us short, as usual, he said, "Ben, you can have just as many cigarettes as you want. Wait and let me get you some." Two minutes later he returned with one package. . . .

J. L. Hayes has got a horse for sale, or mare, or something. He also has some corn or oats or something, for sale. Tell you what you do, the next time you see J. L. Hayes, stop him and ask him what he wants to sell. He told us to write a Classified Ad, but we forgot what he said to sell for him.

Good luck to the Padgett Brothers. They have taken over the management of the Woco-Pep Service Station across from the courthouse. They are equipped to give you good service and solicit your patronage.

How women and girls
may get wanted relief
from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion, thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.

2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

Kenneth's brother, Van Buxton, who is stationed in a bombardier school in Big Springs, Texas, will graduate in January, 1945.

WOUNDED IN ACTION

Pfc. Samuel Blackmon, of Jemison, Ala., was wounded in action in Germany on November 17th, according to word from the War Department, received by his father, Mr. Exer W. Blackmon, of Jemison.

This was the second time that Pfc. Blackmon was wounded, the previous time being in France August 17th. He was then awarded the Purple Heart and returned back to duty on the second of September, where he was wounded again two months later.

WOUNDED IN ACTION

Cpl. William M. Woodfin, USMCR, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie L. Woodfin, of 105 Third Avenue, has been wounded in action according to word received by the War Department.

Clarence C. Hayes, aviation chief radioman, USN, of Maplesville, Ala., has returned from a tour of combat duty in the Pacific, where he was attached to the dive-bombing squadron of Air Group Two.

Hayes, a maintenance man aboard three squadron's carrier, was among those that worked night and day to keep the planes in fighting shape, and thus to insure the success of the carrier's strikes against Jap aircraft, shipping and shore installations.

Before entering the Navy he attended Perry County High School. He has two brothers, one in the Navy and the other in the Army.

It's getting mighty close to Christmas again and we're getting greetings from all four corners of the earth, well almost anyway. S-Sgt. L. D. Easterling, who is with the 31 Photo Reconnaissance Sqdn. in France, sends us a nice greeting card with his picture on it, and a real good one it is too, France must be doing things to Sgt. Easterling. He sure looks well.

Greetings also come from Cpl. Chas. Simpson, who is in Holland and Pvt. Lawrence Blakely, in France.

T-Sgt. and Mrs. Oscar Bates from Birmingham and Camp Gordon Johnson, Fla., spent the week-end here with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Bates.

Seems that a good number of our G I's are returning from Service overseas, some having been over for only a short time, but have already completed their allotted missions. Among those who have just returned to the states are: T-5 Julian C. Coggins, who returned from 23 months in the American Theatre of Operations. He is the son of Mrs. Georgia Coggins of Route 5.

Also Marine Pfc. John S. Robinson, son of Mrs. W. V. Robinson of this city, has returned from the South Pacific where he spent 27 months with the Second Marine Division and took part in the Siapan invasion. He was awarded the Purple Heart for wounds received in action. Before entering the Service, Pfc. Robinson was employed by the Alabama Power Company.

I'm really beginning to wonder if the G.I.'s approve of my column each week. At the beginning, I received many letters from the Service men, mothers, wives and sweethearts, which made the column possible and more interesting. Now the letters are coming fewer and further apart.

If you like the soldier news column, why don't you write more of it and encourage it, by sending, messages and hellos that you wished related to your friends.

A Soldier Writes About Strikers

Editor's Note: The following interesting letter has been received by Mrs. J. E. Ray, R.F.D. No 1, Auburn Road, Phenix City, from her son, Pvt James F. Ray, now "Some-where in Holland."

Dear Mom:

We had no mail today, so I expect to hear from you tomorrow. I don't know much that is nice to write tonight. There just isn't anything nice about this thing called war. There are many things that make the combat soldier get mad at everyone, including the famous "home front."

We have our own GI newspapers that is published daily and bears the name, "The Stars and Stripes." We read news from the battle fronts and also the "home front" in our paper. And many of the front page articles tell of large strikes being waged for higher pay. Since the fact is stated very plainly that many of these strikes occur in our war plants, the boys over here often get a bad case of "boiling blood."

Meaning just one thing—we don't like it and we want those guys to know it. Many of our boys are inclined to let some one know we don't like this stuff, and to compare their condition with ours. Well, I am one of those guys, and I feel that I can afford to talk because I have seen life on the battle front and know just how "lovely" it is.

The American soldier serves his country for $50 per month, as a private, and food. With a warm place to sleep—when he is in garrison. He does not strike for higher pay. Then he some day goes into combat and his life as a soldier is just beginning. In combat, Johnny Doughboy fights like hell, eats cold meat from a can and dog crackers, sleeps in a muddy fox hole—if he has time to sleep—and still draws $50 a month. Does he strike? No. That is just the trouble. The people at home know darn well that Sonny isn't going to strike and that he will do the job if it takes every drop of blood in his body to do it. And many times—too many times to be exact—Sonny pays the dear price of war. But Sonny doesn't strike because he's not the striking kind, except with a gun. Johnny Doughboy has his mind on one thing: He has a job to do, and it is a job in which his pay has no concern. He lives like a dog, fights like Americans should, and many times loses a leg or arm or dies. Being a medical soldier and serving as an aid man. I've seen these boys die, and have worked on them when wounded. They take it on the chin and they still don't yelp for higher pay.

But while Johnny Doughboy is going through this, what is happening at home? Some guy has a war job and maybe he got it to dodge the draft. We don't know. He can work each day without enemy bullets flying past him or shells bursting around him. When his day's work is finished he can ride home, eat a hot meal, read of what a marvelous job the boys over here are doing, and go to bed in a nice soft bed, knowing that no Nazi will sneak up and ram a bayonet through him. The rat is also drawing, in one week, double what Johnny Doughboy draws for a month's life of hell. But this wonderful, patriotic, war worker gets a bright idea. He decides he is not making enough money; and if he can't make the big boy pay him a few cents more per hour what does he do? Sits down on his already over-worked rear end and says he will not work. He never stops to think of what Johnny Doughboy is going through for $50 a month or how much Johnny Doughboy is depending on him. Maybe this fellow isn't even a war worker. Maybe he works in a cigarette factory. Well, a cigarette is the one pleasure a soldier on the front may enjoy—if he can get the cigarettes. Incidentally, here in Holland, we are receiving one pack of cigarettes every two days (a very low quantity) and the ones we receive are nearly always English cigarettes. English cigarettes are very low in quality compared to our cigarettes.

So you see, no person in the good old U.S.A. has any reasonable excuse at all to strike and let the boy on the battle front down. This letter is the general opinion of the majority of American soldiers over here. Many of them feel even worse about some of the news from home. If any of these "strikers" know some boys in uniform and think the soldier boy is a friend of his then he is wrong. Johnny Doughboy hates a striker, and the striker will undoubtedly learn this when Johnny comes home.

So, Mom, give the people at home a tip from me. Tell them to keep the chin up, stay on the job so that they won't let us down over here. If you know some jerk who thinks he isn't making enough money, then let him read this letter and compare his life, his condition, and his right to strike with that of the boys here in Holland, in Italy, Germany and everywhere else, that the blood of American kids is being shed in battle for the slacking —striking, money sacker.

Good night and love to all. I feel better now that I've gotten a load off my chest.

Your son,
FLOYD.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Losses Pinch German Economy; Civil Strife Upsets Greece; 4-H Selects National Champs

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

4-H: Champs

Left fatherless at 15, with the family deserted by the hired hand, young Donald F. Sullivan of Potsdam, N. Y., and 20-year-old Mildred Reed of Bristol, Conn., went the national boys' and girls' 4-H titles for leadership in their clubs and communities. Awards for these honors are the same as in the achievement fields.

Adjusted the girls' national achievement winner was 19-year-old Mary Jo Morgan of Laurel, Miss., with an income of $6,888.25 drawn from nine years of club work in gardening, canning, clothing, foods, poultry and home improvements. Both boy and girl winner will receive a trophy from the president and a $200 college scholarship.

To 19-year-old Donald F. Sullivan of Potsdam, N. Y., and 20-year-old Mildred Reed of Bristol, Conn., went the national boys' and girls' 4-H titles for leadership in their clubs and communities. Awards for these honors are the same as in the achievement fields.

PEARL HARBOR: Trials Off

Because separate army and navy investigating boards found that Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short and Rear Adm. Husband E. Kimmel were guilty of only one offense—failure in judgment in defensive preparations at Pearl Harbor at the time of the Japs' attack, the war and navy departments decided to drop courts-martial proceedings against them.

At the same time, the departments declared that the boards' findings would remain secret for the duration so as not to impair national safety.

Although not providing the grounds for courts-martial, the two commanders' failure in judgment was serious enough to warrant their retirement from service, it was said.

LIBERATION: Political Scuffles

Diplomatic as well as military problems press the Allies in Europe, with British troops coming to the assistance of the rightist government in Greece in the latter's fight against leftist elements, and the U. S. condemning British interference in Italian politics.

Of the two, the situation in Greece was the most serious, with many killed and injured in rioting following the leftists' refusal to give up their arms on the grounds that the rightists were being allowed to keep theirs. With Greece on the threshold of the vital Suez canal passage from the far east, Britain maintained a deep interest in the situation. Said British General commander in Greece, Major General Scobie: "I stand firm behind the (rightist) government, and shall aid them to the limit of my resources."

Although directly slapping at Britain for its resistance to the naming of Count Carlo Sforza as foreign minister in a new Italian regime, the stiffening U. S. State Department also declared that all other united nations should be given full opportunity to develop their own democratic forms of government.

WAR PRODUCTION

To prevent the possibility of incurring shortages in the Japanese war, U. S. arms production will be maintained at substantial levels after Hitler's fall, with only about 20 per cent reduction in output.

As a result of the government's new plans, only about 2,000,000 rubber, and 4,000,000 people are expected to be released from war industries on V-E (victory in Europe) day, and manpower and materials controls probably will be retained for the most part.

PACIFIC:

Real Sailor

Interesting sidelight on the war in the Pacific, which saw continued bad weather hampering the U. S. drive on Leyte, was crusty little Admiral Halsey's postponement of a bombardment of Manila to rescue 38 American pilots forced down at sea.

As Admiral Halsey's Third fleet sailed toward the great Philippine port, it encountered a gusty storm, and 40 of its pilots were caught in the air. When a tabulation showed them to be missing, Admiral Halsey called off the raid, ordering the fleet to search for the fliers.

After an extensive combing of the sea, 38 of the airmen were rescued. Then, the salty little admiral ordered full steam ahead for Manila.

PENSIONS:

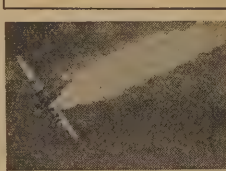

For Vets' Widows

Getting together to settle their differences on the subject, the house and senate shaped a common measure on providing pensions for widows and orphans of World War I vets and sent it to the White House for approval.

Under a bill passed by congress, widows of World War I vets, having an income of less than $1,000 a year, would be eligible for a $35 monthly pension, while widows with children, with income of less than $2,500 annually, would get $45 for the first child and $5 for each additional. The bill also provided payment of $15 for one orphan and $10 for three, plus $4 for each additional.

Although passed four times before by the house, such pension bills previously were pigeon-holed before they could reach the senate floor.

Death Run

Hit by anti-aircraft fire after attack on German switchyards at Munich, this B-24 burst into flames, slipped over on its side, and plummeted to earth.

Army Air Force photo records the sensational, but chilling, picture.

STATE DEPARTMENT:

More Changes

With Big Businessman Edward Stettinius taking over as secretary of state, other big business names were added shortly after to the state department's roster, with the appointment of William Clayton and Nelson Rockefeller as the new chief assistants.

Formerly surplus property disposal head, Clayton, prominent southern cotton broker and business associate of Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, will be in charge of foreign economic affairs. Son of John D. Rockefeller Jr. and presently coordinator of inter-American affairs, Rockefeller will handle U. S. relations with the Latin republics.

In other big shifts in the department, career-diplomat Joseph C. Grew was named undersecretary of state, and Archibald MacLeish was put in charge of public and cultural relations. U. S. ambassador to Japan from 1932 to Pearl Harbor, Grew, who repeatedly warned of the aggressive designs of the Nipponese, served as undersecretary for a time under Calvin Coolidge.

WORLD AVIATION:

End Confab

Amid much reciprocal compliment and bowing, the international aviation conference came to an end in Chicago, Ill., after 37 days of continuous sessions in which framework for a world civil air organization was constructed and certain flight principles established.

Permanent acceptance of the program, however, will be dependent upon ratification by the 54 allied and neutral nations after the war, with an interim organization to be situated in Canada maintaining the basic structure during the length of the conflict. Powers of the organization will merely be advisory, except for authority within its own body.

As a whole, delegates favored the principles of allowing flight over their territories and landings for other than commercial purposes. Great Britain, for one, however, balked over the proposal to permit planes from different countries to operate commercially in any particular nation unless quotas were established for each one.

COTTON

With U. S. cotton hard pressed by cheaper foreign production, Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard proposed a plan under which the government would subsidize the small planter with the view toward financing his entrance into new agricultural fields. As another approach to the problem, Wickard suggested a two-price system under which parity would be paid for domestic consumption, with exports disposed of at prices prevalent in the world markets.

CHRISTIAN LIVING AT ITS BEST

LESSON TEXT—Galatians 5:22-6:10.
GOLDEN TEXT—If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit—Galatians 5:25.

Life and profession must be in accord. To follow Christ means more than embracing a creed, or following a ritual; it calls for daily living of the highest type.

Herein Christianity differs from all other religions. It is a living faith in a living Lord—which produces a living testimony. Such a life is:

I. Spiritual (Gal. 5:22-28). The Christian receives his new life through the ministering of the Holy Spirit. Since that is true, "let us also walk by the Spirit" (v. 25). Every child of God (not just a few, as some suppose) is to live this kind of spiritually fruitful life.

The works of the flesh, horrible in their wickedness and lust, are listed in verses 19-21, and then by striking contrast we have the list of the fruit of the Spirit in the life of the Christian. Note the distinction: work is something we produce; fruit is something that grows.

Walking in the Spirit the Christian finds in his life the inward graces of love, joy, and peace. These then express themselves outwardly in long suffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, and self-control. The Spirit-filled man is not only a good man, he lives a good life.

II. Gentle (Gal. 6:1).

Christianity is not harsh and unforgiving toward one who has sinned. Certainly there can be nothing but stern condemnation of continued, flagrant, impenitent sinning. But toward the one who has failed, the winsome attitude of loving restoration should be the first reaction. There is good reason for this. For God is kind, and Christ would not quench the smoking flax (Matt. 12:20). Then who are we, weak and fallible human beings, to treat an erring brother with harshness?

III. Kind. (Gal. 6:2-3).

We are to help one another in need, lift his burden and bear it for him (v. 2). At the same time do not go around expecting anyone to bear your burden (v. 5). Ask God for help and bear it yourself. If your brother helps you good. If not, do not be offended. Too many Christians expect others to help.

Then there is the need for kindness in thinking of oneself, and not of neighbor. Pride in self-deception (v. 3). It puts God against us (James 4:6). We will have no time or occasion to judge our neighbor if we honestly appraise our own life (v. 4).

IV. Honorable (v. 6).

While the Christian will not be seeking any glory or reward for himself, he will always be honorable in caring for those who serve him in the gospel. Salvation is free, and no true preacher or teacher of the gospel would set a price on it. But the necessities of life must be provided, and it is the obligation of the one who is served to "communicate" (v. 6), which he has to his teaching brother.

It need hardly be said that if the church had obeyed this and similar admonitions found in many places in Scripture, we should not have the disgrace of an underpaid ministry of an underfunded church, and of missionaries waiting to go with no money to send them. Let us be honorable about this matter.

V. Consistent (Gal. 6:7, 8).

There is an inexorable law which brings only the harvest which is planted. Too many Christians are trying to reap the fruit of spirituality when they have sown only the seed of indifference and worldliness. It can't be done!

Self will is always struggling against God's will in the life of the Christian. Sowing to the flesh means reaping the fruit of the flesh—lust, envy, and shirkers. The shirker does nothing. One wonders whether he is really saved, since there is no sign of life. The worker is the one upon whom one can always depend. The worker is the one who takes hold rightly, and then is gone when you most need him.

Christian living at its best calls for consistent, persistent, diligent application to the work of God—not only today, but tomorrow, and the next day, and the next!

Note the suggestion of special thoughtfulness toward our fellow Christians (v. 10). Some folk operate on the opposite principle. They treat their few believers with a little extra coldness—a special degree of suspicion and criticism. That surely is not Christian living at its best.

Jumper Frock a Figure-Flatterer

Jumper Frock
THE jumper dress is a figure-flatterer for every age. This attractive model has broad shoulders and trim waist to give you that popular new T-square look.

Use the corn popper to toast odd bits of stale bread.

If a small article has fallen into some hard-to-get-at place, use a wad of chewing gum stuck on the end of a long stick to get at it.

Do you have an old eye-glass case around that isn't in use? Employ it as a red and blue ration token holder.

If needles are scarce, open up one of the old pin cushions and doubtlessly you will find a number of needles embedded there.

Adjust the cover of the ironing board onto the board while it is still wet after washing. It will then fit tight.

An easy way to coat doughnuts with sugar is to place them in a paper sack with powdered sugar. Shaking the bag will do the rest.

Never put food in paper bags in the refrigerator. Air should circulate freely around the food if it is to be preserved at a safe temperature.

Use novelty buttons for the clever shoulder treatment and side-button closing. A smartly tailored blouse is included in the pattern.

Pattern No. 8712 comes in sizes 11, 12, 13, 14, 16 and 18. Size 12, jumper, requires 1 1/2 yards of 34 inch material; blouse, short sleeves, 1 1/2 yards of 35 or 39 inch material.

Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers.

For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture

Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking.
This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective medicine for coughs due to colds. It is so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any dried, get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial membranes. Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put the Pinex in a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough medicine, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please in every way.

2 1/4 cups flour

Scald milk, add sugar, salt and shortening. Cool to lukewarm. Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water and add to lukewarm milk. Add eggs and flour to make a moderately stiff batter. Beat until smooth. Cover and let rise in warm place, free from draft, until light, about 1 hour. Fill well-greased muffin pans half full. Cover and let rise again, about 1/2 hour. Even prisoners are doing their part for Uncle Sam in the war. Inmates have turned out $25,000,000 of industrial products since July, 1942, including steel pontoons, submarine cargo nets, work garments, blankets, rope, parachute cords, stretchers, camouflage netting and ammunition boxes. In addition, prison farm production has increased to $45,569,343 annually.

MULTIPLE RELIEF FOR COLD MISERIES

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Demand for military tents has had a strong influence on the supply of cotton needed for the manufacture of tires and other rubber items.

Accurate tire inflation means more now than ever before. Too much pressure encourages impact breaks; too little causes excess flexing and heat—a heavy mileage waster.

A compliment to the technicians responsible for the development of synthetic rubber is the fact that tires and rubbers required by the U. S. Ordnance Department are about 85 per cent converted to a substitute for natural rubber.

CHAPTER XX

When strange things would happen, we talked about things of the sort which had once been told in story books. All of us agreed that when this war was over, there would be nothing that had ever happened in fiction that wouldn't have actually happened in this battle of the universe. For instance:

Kiang is a city in China far up on the big, northern loop of the Yangtze-Kiang. It is China, yes, but that part of China is as wild as Tibet and Arabia. The people are called "Lolos" and they must be descendants of Genghis Khan. I had flown over the place, for it was just North of the ferry route from Assam to Kunming, and I had seen the flat clearing South of the village that could have been emergency landing field. I noted that it was close to nine thousand feet above sea level, and therefore not a field to use unless one had to.

Capt. Charlie Sawyer had crash-landed just South of there, closer to Talfu, and had been unable to identify himself. While the wild-looking Lolo tribesmen were getting set to execute him with ancient-looking flint-jack muskets, Sawyer had the holes in the barrels looked twice as big as fifty-caliber bores. Just at the crucial moment, however, when his fate looked darkest, some new arrival in the party who the identification card that Sawyer had been pointing to. It was inscribed in various languages, and with pictures. The new arrival didn't recognize the Chinese flag, or any of the language, or the Generalissimo's signature "chop"—but he saw a star. As it happened, it was the star of India over the imprint in Hindustani. Then the tribesman pointed to the same star on the wing of Sawyer's ship—the insignia of the Army Air Force. Sawyer was saved, and later he was feasted on wild buffalo and rice wine.

But why? Here in the wilds of the Lolo country, where very few white men had ever been, the tribesmen were more familiar with the white star of the Air Force than with any written language. We learned the principal reason later.

A report had come in to General Chennault's headquarters that a native village in the Lolo country, between Lake Tali and Likiang, was under siege by fifty Chinese northern tribesmen who had crossed the Salween, perhaps under the direction of the Japanese. Two of us, Holloway and I, were sent to look the place over in the P-40's. We were told by the General that we could determine whether the town was under siege by noting whether or not the usual pedestrian traffic was passing in and out of the city and are obviously very far from roads or from civilization.

We made our observation and returned with the report. The village had been besieged for three days, and the horsemen encamped a half mile around the city wall. We loaded up and went back with six eighteen-kilogram frags on the wing racks and plenty of fifty-caliber ammunition. I also carried a very pistol and all colors of shells.

As we circled the town, we could see the villagers watching us; then we dove on the besiegers. The lines of prehistoric cavalry broke and retreated towards the Salween and Burma. We machine-gunned them until their spears in position. Then I used the Vespito, shooting first green lights, then red. Holloway said it was the best display of fireworks he'd ever seen. We checked up for several days, but the raiders hadn't come back, and the mail pedestrian traffic was passing through the city wall. Holloway and I, with two of the General's P-40's, had stopped a war.

The white star of the Air Force had been seen by those villagers, and they had told the surrounding country that we were friends. Perhaps the constant sight of transports from India to China and return had made the big mistake a small one. At any rate, the Lolos who were about to execute Sawyer recognized it, and to them it meant more than written languages and sealed orders. Such is the strangeness of the Lolo world.

engine, or carry in the mechanics and the tools with which to repair the bad one.

In every organization there is always one person who holds up the morale, some one who makes the darker moments brighter and who can bring a little sunshine into the reality of war. Out in the China theatre, and especially in the 23rd Fighter Group, my most unforgettable character was Lieut. Henry Elias. This pilot was a Southerner, like most of the others in the China skies. When I first reached Hengyang he was acting as assistant operations officer to Ajax Baunler. He had a reply for every person, and a come-back to every joke. He was definitely a morale builder, and you can ask anyone if they're not as valuable at the front as ammunition.

Elias had been on several raids and had shot down two Japanese when I heard the first joke about him. He'd been on an attack to Nanchang, and as the ships turned for home in the fading light of late afternoon, some one in the rear of the formation observed something peculiar. Up ahead there were five

These pilots are tired out by almost constant alert without relief for 21 days.

P-40's with their sleek silhouettes showing wheels up and everything in proper order. But off to the flank, in almost the position of the number-three man in the formation, was one ship with its wheels extended. Some one called on the radio, "Hey, Elias, who's that flying in formation with you, with their wheels down?"

As the words sank into the consciousness of "The flight, and of his especially, their ominous significance became apparent. Elias jerked his head around and looked at his wing man. Even to an inexperienced eye, the silhouette was unmistakable. It was a Jap Model I-97, one of the old fixed landing-gear types. The entire formation tried at once to get it as they finally realized what it was. But they had the laugh on Elias. Just as he recognized the Jap, the enemy pilot evidently recognized the P-40's in the twilight before darkness—perhaps he saw the leering sharks' mouths. For as Elias shoved the nose of his ship straight down and dove for him, the Jap pulled his ship straight up and climbed for the sky. Later, when our imaginations began to embroider the joke, Elias took the kidding in good part and always had a come-back.

A small two-seater biplane, a Fleet, came to Hengyang from Kweilin one day with a Chinese officer. We looked the little ship over as it came into the field wide open at some seventy-five miles an hour.

"We now have just the bait we need," I said. "Lieutenant Elias, I want you to borrow that Fleet from the Chinese. I know a trick to make the Japs lose lots of 'face' and airplanes."

Elias had laid down his Operations reports and was listening attentively. "This ought to get you promoted," I went on. "Now you get that plane and service it tonight, then early in the morning you take off for Hankow. Allison, Baunler, and I will be along later and will arrive over the Jap city before you do." Elias was looking at me in wonder. "Then, when you get there, fly over the enemy airport at thirty-five hundred feet—that'll keep you just above their anti-aircraft fire and they can't shoot accurately that low with the big stuff. Over the field you fly with one wing low, kind of skidding, cutting your switch on and off so the Japs will think you're either wounded or over there with a bad engine."

Elias was trying to figure out whether I was serious or not. Then I added: "We'll be up there in the sun, and as fast as the Zeros come for you, we'll knock them down. After all, Elias, if they get you, a Fleet isn't worth much."

By now Lieutenant Elias was walking out and calling over his shoulder: "No sir, Colonel, I just want to be a plain pilot—I don't want to be no ball of fire."

Well, we saw the wreckage of Elias when he lost him, for in this second battle around Hunan he failed to return from the straining raid of September 2, 1942. We had taken sixteen P-40's back to Hengyang when we had gotten them in shape to fight, had landed there just about dark to surprise the Japs. That's the night the Fleet landed and the night I had been kidding Henry Elias.

Next morning we got into the air before daylight and went for Lake Puyang Hu, near Nanchang, where the Japs were moving the Chinese rice out by junks and barges—robbing the breadbasket of China in the yearly rape of the rice. Hill took sight of the P-40's and I took the other eight.

Elias was on Tex Hill's wing. We split at Nanchang and my eight went to the South to catch some gunboats that had been reported in the Sinto-Hukow Strait, near Kuddang, coming from the Yangtze to the Lake. I heard Hill call that he had caught the rice ships and was burning them. Later he told me that he found twenty-six of them, junks and steel barges; he sank some and saw others with their sails on fire, floating for shore where the hungry Chinese coolies would salvage the rice.

Through the four passes at the Strait on the fourth patrol he dropped behind the formation, perhaps to shoot at something Hill hadn't seen. Maybe he'd seen a Jap fighter and had gone for it; we knew there were eight Zeros supposed to be over Nanchang. Elias didn't return with the flight, and for two days we carried him as "missing."

Then the Chinese net reported that a group of Chinese soldiers had seen a lone American P-40 engaged by four Japanese Zeros. The American had fought them but his ship had been shot down. The American had jumped out in his parachute and four Japanese had strafed him on the way down.

The net had been found, with the identification flag number listed. The pilot's name was Lieutenant Elias. All of us watched for Japs bailing out, so that we could shoot one or two down for Elias, but we didn't get the chance.

We sent Captain Wang down to Kiang to get Elias's body. Wang had to travel a hundred and sixty miles by buffalo cart, by alcohol bus, and on foot, but he finally got there. The body of his lost pilot finally arrived at the field from which he had last taken off, it was in a Chinese coffin that Wang had gotten at Kiang. We placed the flag over the grimacing face of Wang and sent it by transport to Kunming, to lie beside his other brother pilots in that Buddhist graveyard in Yunnan.

And so it went: tragedy—humor—tragedy. For on the same raid I had led the other eight ships, with elements led by Holloway, Schiel, and O'Connell, and had caught the Jap gunboats, ten of them, at Sinto-Hukow Strait. They were coming to Puyang Hu to convey those rice barges—but we were going to interfere with their rendezvous.

Even as we circled them from sixteen thousand feet, I think they knew they were going to have lots of trouble. They had to stay almost in line, nose-to-stern, for they were going through the narrow strait. We circled warily for a while, looking the sky over for enemy fighters, then spiraled down. As soon as we got close enough to the Jap ships to see distinctly, we noticed that the sea men were jumping over the side of the water. Only a few seemed to have remained to fire the anti-aircraft guns, and Schiel and Holloway silenced most of those with their initial pass.

I think most of the ammunition had been fired at us while we circled at sixteen thousand feet, for we were the whole show now. We'd rake the steel decks from stern to stern and then swing out low to the water and come back with quartering shots from the beam. We were so low that we were actually shooting up at the decks of the boats. I saw many human heads above the water as the Japs tried to swim from the boats, and I fired at them. Those bullets ricocheted from the water into the steel side of the gunboat and went on through. As my range would reach the "sweet spot" of some 227 rounds, where the six lines of tracers and armor-piercing Fifities converged, it would appear as though an orange-colored hole the size of a flour barrel was being burned into the side of the Jap vessel at the water-line.

We S-ed along the tenish-line and shot at them all from both sides. On the second pass, two of the vessels were listing, and others were smoking. On the third attack, seven out of the ten were smoking and burning and some of these were on the bottom with their masts barely out of water. Photographs taken later from an observation plane showed that seven had sunk immediately in the strait, and that the other three had sunk within a thousand yards of the battle area.

I was so happy, so excited and content at this victory that on the morning after I had called to re-form and head for the rendezvous point to the Southwest. But as the ships left the target, I saw that I was alone to back for it. It was a Japanese flag, waving defiantly from the mast of one of the sunken gunboats. Forgetting caution, and with the other seven planes speeding away to the west, I saw that I was alone to strafe the flag in a gesture of hate.

You Can't Enjoy Christmas "If You Fail Them Now"

War Bond Chairman Calls For All-Out Effort

There can be no "real" Christmas in Alabama this year if we fail to put over the Sixth War Loan—

This was the jarring message that State War Bond Chairman Ed Leigh McMillan sent to every citizen in the state this week as war bond workers sought to get every citizen to "buy their share of victory."

"It is the week before Christmas and men from our state are giving their lives in Leyte and along the Western Wall of Germany that we may have a liberty-blessed Christmas time here at home," Mr. McMillan said.

"But many of us are falling down on our part of the job. We are not buying the 'E' bonds, the average American's share in the all-out victory drive that is underway along our battle fronts.

"There can be no real Christmas in Alabama this year if we fail to put over the Sixth War Loan. Alabama has done an outstanding job in all the other war loan drives.

Certainly, we cannot, and will not, let the Sixth war loan fail.

"But I must warn our workers and our citizens that the Sixth War Loan is badly lagging and if we do not stop foolish spending and put our money in war bonds that we will fail.

"I can think of nothing that would so seriously undermine the morale of the fighting men at a time when many of them must die for us, as to let the word go out that Alabama failed to do her part to back them up.

"This is a time when every dollar is needed just as every man, every tank, every plane.

"Get out and do your part now so that we can gather around the Christmas tree Dec. 25 knowing that we have done our best for those who will not be with us."

Rural Bond Sales Effective Step In Postwar Planning

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Secretary of Agriculture Claude B. Wickard today called on American farmers to invest all "extra" dollars in War Bonds during the Sixth War Loan beginning November 20 as an "effective step in postwar planning" for rural America.

Directing his appeal "to the Farm People of America," Secretary Wickard said, "the farm people of this country have an outstanding war record. It still takes a lot of money to finance the war, even though we are winning. The single task of supplying the Pacific theater is a tremendous undertaking. Add to that the equipment which was needed on the invasion coast of France, the supplies that are required now to knock down the walls of Hitler's Germany, and the total is staggering. So our job here at home is by no means over, just as the war on the fighting front isn't over. Our homefront responsibility is twofold. One is to stick to our job and do it well until total victory is won; the other is to buy War Bonds.

"The farm people of this country have an outstanding war record. They have achieved a production miracle in the face of wartime difficulties. Their bond-buying record is good, too, as indicated by the fact that farmers and their families purchased more than one and a quarter billion dollars' worth of bonds in 1943. This figures out at about 10 per cent of their net income.

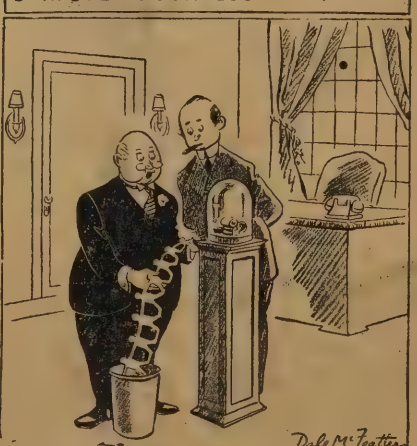

"This Sixth War Loan campaign is the biggest yet for agriculture, but never before has agriculture had so many dollars that could be put into War Bonds. The record production of farmers, coupled with favorable commodity prices, has pushed their income up to an all-time high level. The investment of those extra, inflationary dollars in War Bonds would be the most effective step in postwar planning Rural America could take.

"Stake your share in the future—share your stake in the war."

Judge Reynolds had been ill at his home for a month or six weeks and his death came as a surprise.

The death of Judge Reynolds brought to a close a life of activity and good usefulness to the people of Chilton County. After serving three terms in the State Legislature from Chilton County and as a member of the Constitutional Convention in 1901 he was elected Probate Judge of the county in 1904. He served in this office through 1934, with the exception one term from 1911 through 1916.

His political career extended over a period of forty years.

The son of Rev. Job Reynolds and Jessie Jordan Reynolds, he was born in Macon County near Tuskegee, Oct. 6, 1864. The family moved to Chilton County in 1870 and settled in Dry Valley in the Northwest part of this county. He was married to Dora Marshall of Athens, Ga., in 1888. He was very little schooling, but was a close observer of things about him. Farming was his occupation until five years after he married, when he went to work for a mercantile firm in Montevallo. He later put up a mercantile business for himself at Jewison, which he followed for four or five years. He was also engaged in a mercantile business in Clanton most of the time from 1911 to 1916. Since going out of office in 1934, Judge Reynolds has been engaged in looking after his farms, rental property, cattle, etc.

Several outstanding characteristics made Judge Reynolds probably the most colorful figure in the history of Chilton County. Pages could be written about his life, but suffice it to say that in his passing Chilton County has lost a citizen who loved his people and who served them faithfully.

Christmas Greetings 1944

"Now all our neighbors' chimneys smoke,
And Christmas clocks are ringing;
They're laying with holly-mist
And all their spits are turning.
Without the door the carolers sing,
And it is cold it has to be,
We'll bury it in Christmas pie,
And everyone be merry."

Was Star of Bethlehem A Natural Phenomenon? Astronomers Disagree

Four astronomical hypotheses have evolved from the consideration of the Star of Bethlehem as a natural phenomenon—specifically the possibilities of its having been a meteor, a comet, a new star, or the conjunction of two or more planets. A meteor is a very transient and local phenomenon. Under no circumstances could a meteor be visible for more than a few seconds and one large enough to attract the attention of ordinary observers would have had its place of impact commemorated.

Tradition credits Hipparchus with having noted, in 134 B. C., a brilliant new star where previously no star had been: and since Tycho Brahe discovered his famous nova in 1572, many new stars have been tentatively identified as the Star of Bethlehem.

Jupiter, Mars, Saturn, and Venus are planets visible to the naked eye. Computation has figured that Jupiter, Mars and Saturn were in conjunction in the year 7 to 6 B. C. as such a phenomenon occurs about every 800 years; it is impossible to include Venus and still conform to the biblical account which places the Star in the East since Venus is most conspicuous in the western horizon.

Modern astronomers do not attach much weight to the foregoing hypotheses. Such phenomena would occur far from the earth, and are seen as a local guide and, seen in the same direction from any point on the earth's surface, would not stand—as the biblical Star of Bethlehem.

Tips on Carving

Finding the joints without hacking up the bird is the hallmark of a skillful poultry carver. He can stand or sit to his task, whichever is more comfortable. Poultry specialists of the U. S. department of agriculture offer these tips:

Have the platter set on the table with the legs of the roast turkey or chicken pointing either straight toward you or toward your carving hand. A wedge of bread or apple under each side of the bird will steady it for carving. Make a clean cut between the body and the leg and give a slight twist on the end of the drumstick. If the bird is cooked just right, the leg will then separate easily from the body so you can see the joint and cut through it to the outside. The leg of a duck or goose is more difficult to disjoint than the leg of a chicken, turkey or guinea. A good carver leaves intact the thigh near the backbone called the "oyster." Separate the drumstick and upper joint, and slice the leg meat of a large bird.

Start the wing cut at a spot above the joint where the wing seems to point the bone. Cut an angle of about 45 degrees to hit the joint. The wing is sometimes not entirely separated from the carcass but dropped down so as to leave the breast free for slicing.

Slice the breast meat of turkeys, chickens and guineas parallel to the outside surface, along the grain of the meat. Cut the breast meat of ducks and geese across the grain of the meat at right angles to the ridge bone, after running the blade of the knife under the flesh to loosen it.

Snappdragon Game
Snappdragon, still played in a modified form in England and America, was a favorite Christmas game in England more than 200 years ago. The original game called for a quantity of raisins to be deposited in a large bowl or dish. Brandy or some other spirit was poured over the fruit and ignited. The bystanders then endeavored to grasp a raisin by plunging their hands through the flames. A carol called "The Song of Snappdragon" accompanied the game.

South Americans Celebrate Feast in Picturesque Way

The children of Latin America learn about Santa Claus only through the radio programs from North America. Yet Christmas for them is not lacking in gaiety and not lacking in gifts.

But the beneficent visitor, instead of being the jolly, rotund Kris Kringle, is "El Nino Dios—the Christ Child—assisted by Los Reyes Magos—the Magi Kings.

While the children of North America are hanging up their stockings on Christmas eve, their neighbors below the Rio Grande are setting out carefully made little beds of grass or straw, which El Nino Dios will fill with toys and candy during the night.

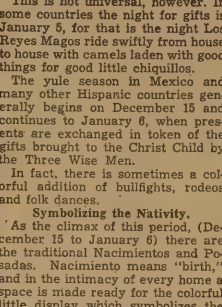

This is not universal, however. In some countries the night for gifts is January 6, for that is the night Los Reyes Magos ride swiftly from house to house with camels laden with good things for good little chiquillos.

The yule season in Mexico and many other Hispanic countries generally begins on December 15 and continues to January 6, when presents are exchanged in token of the gifts brought to the Christ Child by the Three Wise Men.

In fact, there is sometimes a colorful addition of bullfights, rodeos and folk dances.

Symbolizing the Nativity.

As the climax of this period, (December 15 to January 6) there are the traditional Nacimiento and Posadas. Nacimiento means "birth," and in the intimacy of every home a space is made ready for the colorful little display which symbolizes the Nativity. Every detail of the Palestinian countryside is faithfully depicted, with sand, pebbles, grass and twigs. A tiny replica of the stable at Bethlehem is set up, and surrounded with miniature cows and other animals.

At some time between December 15 and New Year's day, every Mexican family holds a Posada. Members of the family and their friends gather in the patio and sing Villancicos, or old Spanish Christmas carols, and march around the patio in procession, to commemorate the journey of the Three Wise Men to Bethlehem.

Though the postmen of Latin America are not so heavily burdened as they are here, the greeting on everyone's lips is the same as ours—"Felices Pascuas y Buen Año Nuevo!"

First Yule Card Printed in 1846

The first Christmas card, properly so-called, was produced in England in 1846 as the result of a nobleman's suggestion.

Sir Henry Cole conceived the idea when overwhelmed by the thought of having to pen personal greetings of the season to his many friends and acquaintances. This first card, of which about 1,000 copies were sold, was produced in black and white; the drawing thereupon was by J. C. Horsley and was hand colored. The idea did not really "catch on" until about 1864 and several more years passed before the custom of sending Christmas cards was taken up by British royalty.

Monopoly of the American Christmas card market was enjoyed by Marcus Ward and Company of London for a few years following their introduction into the United States during the 1870's. In 1880 Louis L. Prang and Company of Boston entered into competition with the English firm. Prang and Company offered $2,000 in prizes for the best designs submitted and nearly 600 entries were received: thus launching the modern industry which offers Christmas cards of almost endless varieties to fit every pocketbook.

Send that Christmas card today! To bind up the wounds of bitterness, make fast the moorings of friendship, and echo the glorious promise of peace.

Ancient Druids First to Hang Evergreens, Mistletoe
The Druids of ancient Britain started the hanging of evergreens, holly and mistletoe at Christmas. They are the oldest existing Christmas rites. December 25 was a holy night in pre-Roman Britain. They called it the "others Night," and it was part of their ceremony of the Yule, meaning a wheel, which suggests the revolution of the seasons.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Former Rubber Director Dewey expressed the opinion that the inevitable industrialization of South American and Asiatic countries following the war will mean a world demand for rubber far beyond the capacity of the plantations that existed before the war—an opinion that should encourage the protection of our synthetic plants.

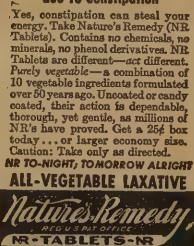

The super-bomber B-29 carries about 5,000 pounds of rubber. Close to two tons are required to make its 30 bullet-sealing fuel tanks alone. There are more than 200 rubber items in this giant fortress of the air.

Buffet Style Is Ideal for New Year's Entertaining

Waffles and sausage, an old-fashioned favorite, will help you ring the old year out and New Year in with proper style.

This hasn't been such a bad year, has it? And as we look forward to the next one, we hope for many better things. It's fitting then to usher in the new one in with good cheer and a happy, and simple but good food to celebrate the occasion.

Whether you're just having your own family in or friends over to welcome the New Year, it should be done in style. Refreshments need not be elaborate but they should be decorated to be in tune with the season.

Here are some sample menus to help you in deciding what to have. They are designed to fit your food budget:

New Years Eve Snack I.
Buckwheat Cakes
Cranberry Conservé Coffee
Snack Suggestion II.
Waffles and Pork Sausages
Syrup

Snack Suggestion III.
Spaghetti With Chicken Livers
Garlic Bread Tossed Salad
Lemon Snow With Custard Sauce
Coffee

Snack Suggestion IV.
Welsh Rabbit on Toast
Molded Fruit Salad
Assorted Relishes
Fruit Cake Coffee

Snack Suggestion V.
Cold Sliced Turkey and Ham
Rye Bread Butter Relish
Avocado-Grapefruit Salad
Assorted Cookies Beverage

Guests for a New Year's eve supper will be happy to help them with a buffet as informality prevails at the occasion. Set up the waffle iron with a pitcher of batter; or, if you are having a hot dish like Welsh Rabbit or Spaghetti, it can be kept warm in a hot dish or at least on a hot platter. Guests won't mind going into the kitchen for precious seconds.

The recipe round-up for this event has a star-studded collection of dishes you will want.

2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup milk
4 tablespoons melted butter
1/4 teaspoon salt
3 eggs

Sift together the dry ingredients. Add egg yolks, beaten and mixed with milk, then the melted butter. Fold in egg whites, beaten stiff. Bake in waffle maker and serve with butter and hot syrup.

Cooking Sausages.
To cook pork sausage so that it will be plump, juicy and tender, lay the sausages in a heavy skillet with a small amount of water. Bring them gently to a boil and let them boil for several minutes. Then let the sausages brown, turning on all sides so they will have an even color. Sausages cooked like this will be done thoroughly without their flavor fully developed. They will not have lost the plumpness that is so attractive when they are served.

Spaghetti With Chicken Livers.
(Serves 8 to 10)
1/2 pound spaghetti
2 tablespoons shortening
1 onion
2 cups canned tomatoes or 1 can tomato soup
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/2 pound grated American cheese
1/4 pound fresh mushrooms
1 pound chicken livers
1 teaspoon salt

Cook spaghetti in boiling, salted water until tender. Drain and rinse in cold water. Heat fat in skillet and brown finely cut onion in it. Add spaghetti, tomatoes, salt and cheese. Cook slowly until well blended. Serve in a casserole or on a platter, well garnished with fried mushrooms and sautéed chicken livers.

Molded Fruit Salad.
(Serves 8)
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup hot water
1 cup maraschino cherry juice and water
1 cup sliced, seeded grapes
2 pears, peeled and sliced
1/4 cup maraschino cherries, sliced
1/4 cup finely minced celery
1 pink grapefruit, peeled and sectioned

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add cold cherry juice and water. Let cool. When slightly thickened fold in fruit and pour into a mold. Let chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce and garnish with clusters of grapes in pear halves. Serve with sour cream dressing.

Welsh Rabbit.
(Serves 8)
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 pound salt
1/2 pound cheese, cubed
1/4 teaspoon soda
Dash of cayenne
1 egg
1/4 teaspoon mustard
1/2 cup dry cream

Melt butter in top of double boiler and then add cheese. Stir and cook until cheese is melted. Add beaten egg, seasonings, soda and cream. Stir constantly until smooth. Spread thick, then serve over toast points, garnished with parsley.

There's nothing better than a chewy cookie for nibbling after the main dish has been heavy. In fact, many people would rather have a good cookie than anything else to top off the snack. You'll like these cookies that are taste - tempters above anything else you ever had:

First mixture:
1/2 cup butter or substitute
1/2 cup brown sugar
1 cup sifted flour
Mix above ingredients and pat into a shallow pan. Bake in a moderate oven 15 minutes.

Cranberry Jelly and Pancakes offer simple but delicious fare for the New Year eve celebration. It saves fuss and dishes.

Second mixture:
2 eggs
1 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons flour
1/4 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups coconut
1 cup nutmeats

Beat the eggs, add sugar and vanilla. Blend in dry ingredients, coconut and nuts. Pour mixture on top of first baked mixture and bake in a moderate oven for 20 minutes. When cooked slightly, add:

Third mixture:
1/4 cup powdered sugar
2 tablespoons butter or substitute
Grated rind of 1 orange
Orange juice

Cream sugar and butter. Add orange rind and enough juice to moisten to spreading consistency. Spread on top of cookie mixture and then cut cookies into bars.

THE GROUND OF UNIVERSAL JOY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:8-12; Hebrews 1:1-4; 1 John 1:1-4.
GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all the people.—Luke 2:10.

What would you like for Christmas? Could anything be better than to find for your heart and mind that spiritual safety, certainty, and joy which transforms life? Well, that is exactly what Jesus came to bring mankind. It was the first Christmas, and it is the best gift this year too.

I. Safety (Luke 2:8-12).
Men need deliverance from their sin. They needed it when Christ came. They need it today. They must have a safe refuge, one in which they may rest secure.

All the efforts of this world to meet man's need are vain. As Joseph Parker put it: "The world did not want an adviser. The world had advised itself almost into hell. The world did not ask for a speculator. Everything that man could do had been done, and men sat in the darkness of their own wisdom. The world did not want a reformer, a man who could change his outward and transient relations, an engineer that would continually devote his time to the readjustment of the wheels and the pulleys and the various mechanical forces of society. The world wanted a saviour."

Jesus came as Saviour. The good tidings revealed to the faithful shepherds were to be "of great joy to all people" because they presented the One who could bring them redemption from sin.

That revelation is ready to be made age this Christmas, and as it came to the shepherds at their work in the field, so it may come to you on the battlefield, in camp, in the air, under the sea, in the kitchen, in the factory—anywhere. We rightly go to our churches to worship on Christmas Day, but let us remember that Christ is everywhere, seeking each one—yes, knocking at your door. Will you let Him in? Then you will have Christmas indeed!

II. Certainty (Heb. 1:1-4).
God has spoken through the centuries in the message of many faithful servants. We do well to give heed to God's Word through them. But after all they were only servants. This message of redemption is so final and fundamental that God sent His Son, Himself the Redeemer, to declare it.

How final, and definite, and blessed is that truth. The heir of all the eternal glories of God the Father, and Himself the effulgence (or the flashing forth) of the glory of God, has spoken God's last word—His certain word—about redemption from sin.

We all know how full of uncertainty the world is, how our own minds are distressed by the very uncertainty of countless things about us. What a precious gift from God to realize anew the absolute certainty we have in Christ. He came to save, to satisfy, and to keep us.

Note that He has all the needed authority and power to carry out His loving purpose (v. 4). He who "made purification of sins" for us to believe, is divine. He has all power. He is glorious beyond our ability to describe. He is God. We can rest in perfect assurance in His redemption.

III. Enjoyment (1 John 1:1-4).
God knew the need of man for real joy if life was to be pleasant and profitable. But a Christmas Eve was never intended to be a somber, doleful business. No, indeed. "These things we write," says John, "that our joy may be made full."

What did he write? By inspiration of the Holy Spirit he wrote of Christ, "the Word of life." He had seen and known Him, the Redeemer. He had fine and uplifting fellowship with Him and declares that we too (as believers) share in that fellowship.

One of the bright and glad things about the Christmas season is our fellowship with our family and friends. It brightens the whole holiday season. How much more delightful is the fact that we have "fellowship with the Father and with His Son, Jesus Christ."

That fact really "makes" Christmas! Many will be separated from family and friends this year, but Christ is there, and the preciousness of all friends with them. The empty place around the family table will be filled (if we wish) by the Lord Himself. Let's keep Christmas with Him as the unique but nonetheless real Guest. In fact, let us do even more than that, let us count Him into the intimate fellowship of our family circle (a circle that He wants to be—to you and to me—this Christmas Day, 1944).

May his joy be yours in full measure. That is the wish of all who write these lines, and it goes from his heart to the very last reader who may be in the uttermost part of the earth. A blessed Christmas to you!

to the girls at home: The farther the boys get from America, the more they want their pin-up girls to look like me. They'd rather not have pictures of you in bathing suits or slacks, but in skirts, "a little on the formal side, with plenty of appeal."

Sunset Carson, Republic western star, returned to the studio from a month's "vacation" recently — if sowing 1,000 acres of wheat, riding horseback 20 miles a day, milking 14 cows each morning on a 3,000 acre ranch in Texas can be called a "vacation." Sunset and his father own the ranch jointly. His father was ill, so he took time off from pictures and helped to keep things going.

In answer to letters from thousands of WAVES, Bing Crosby sings "Black Magic" in his next picture, "Here Come the WAVES." When it was announced by Paramount that he would co-star in the picture with Betty Hutton and Sonny Tufts, the letters began to pour in.

Dinah Shore has been pretty proud of that German pistol given her by Lieut. Gen. George Patton when she was overseas. But the singing star of "Belle of the Yukon" is just as proud of a second captured gun — it came to her from a GI Joe, now in Germany.

Trudy Berliner, European stage and screen actress, has been signed by Warner Bros. to coach Andrea King and Faye Emerson for their roles in "Hotel Berlin." She was released from a Nazi concentration camp after four months' imprisonment.

Hollywood's newest Cinderella is Gloria Holiday, CBS telephone operator, who auditioned for and won the role of Dorothy Moore's colleague girl friend in the skits which will revolve around the new character, "Poster Fenwick." They'll be heard every few weeks.

Remember the famous Veronica Lake "peeka-bo" bob, that dropped over one eye? She gave it up when the WPB asked her, to set a good example for defense workers. But in came letters from servicemen asking her to revive it. She's saved those letters for the past year; she confronted Paramount executives with them. You'll see the "peeka-bo" again, for one sequence, in "Out of This World."

One of those hauntingly lovely pictures that stay with you, so that you want to see it more than once, is "Journey for Margaret." And some how, the second time you see it, more touching, than it did the first time.

Kay Kyser of the "College of Musical Knowledge," begins a new chapter in his career on December 27, when he strikes up the band for a new sponsor. Featured with him will be his wife, Georgia Carroll, and the rest of his regular troupe. Same time, same station.

ODDS AND ENDS—Don Wilson has been signed for a featured role in Republic's "Swingin' on a Rainbow," he'll play radio announcer, named Don Wilson. Either Florida or Louisiana will furnish the background for the sequences showing "The Invincible Army" — "The Hoosier Hot Shots," novelty instrumentalists of the National Band Dance program, have written a new song entitled "Kiss Me Friddle-Dee" — John F. Payne once made the All-American football team; it happened in 1929, at the University of Southern California — when he was known as Marion Michael Morrison.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

—By BEN

Well here 'tis Christmas again. Hope all you guys and gals are ready. However, ready or not, it's Christmas right on. "Folks & Things" wishes each and every one of you the happiest Christmas possible under the circumstances. We know it can't possibly be like Christmases of the past, but who knows, next Christmas may be the one we have been waiting for. Anyway, keep your fingers crossed and your chin up, and may you and all of yours, have a Merry, Merry Christmas.—Ben.

Most attractive is the fine job of landscaping done at the Baptist Church. It is a great improvement to the entire block as well as the church grounds.

Went out to Mr. Mahan's Cabinet Shop the other day to get the annual Christmas tree for the youngsters. After securing our tree and preparing to leave we lifted the trunk door to the car to put the Christmas tree in it when Dick Bean's two big dogs tore out for the back of the car and jumped in. Nothing would entice those two dogs out of the car so we could get the tree in the trunk. They thought we were going hunting and wouldn't budge. Finally, though, we got over to them that they were un-welcome guests and they got out of the car and went back to the porch—very disappointed looking though.

Did you hear about the lady who is suing the doctor who operated on her husband. It's for opening her male.

Ben and John Studdard are putting up a large Gulf Sign on top of their Station at the corner of Selma Road and the Highway this week. It is a huge thing, and will surely add to the appearance of the Station.

Wonder what "Wag" wrote on the back of our car, "Do not collect this scrap, he still drives it?"

With deepest regret we learn of the death of Judge L. H. Reynolds. He had lived his three-score years and 10 and then more, and every one of them active and accomplishing things. This the family can find solace in, even though they grieve. To the family go our heart-felt sympathy; their loss is great, but really, Chilton County's loss is greater. "The Judge" will be missed by thousands of friends throughout the county, the State and the Nation. He will be long remembered in the heart of all who knew him.

John Mullins of the U. S. Navy, stationed at Quansit Point, R. I., is spending the Christmas holidays here with his family and friends.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

French-Russ Treaty Highlights Political Activity in Europe; Hem In Japs on Northern Leyte

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Stark with realism, this picture from the western front shows a dough-boy looking on the shelling of Saarlautern while a chicken struts about the feet of a dead German soldier in foreground.

PACIFIC:

Sinking Trap

Fighting on Leyte island slowly but surely developed into a knock-down, drag-out battle at close quarters, as Yanks compressed the enemy on the northwestern hump of the island from three directions.

As a result of the 77th division's landing behind Ormoc, the Japanese main lines not only were threatened from the north and east but from the south as well. Although broad mountains impede passage from the east, and form a narrow corridor to the north helpful to the enemy defense, the country flattens out above Ormoc, offering opportunity to roll up the Japanese lines from the rear.

Despite the danger to their lines of supply, the Japs are determined to fight it out, with battle slogans including:

- "In serving on the seas, be a corpse saturated with water."
- "In serving on land, be a corpse covered with seeds."
- "In serving in the sky, be a corpse challenging the clouds."
- "Let's all die by the side of our sovereign."

WORK OR FIGHT:

Tighten Draft

Aimed at replacing soldiers released for war production and stemming a growing movement of workers to nonessential industries with postwar employment opportunities, the government ordered the drafting of all men between 26 and 37 not engaged in necessary occupations.

At the same time, the government announced that truck and tire workers would go on a seven-day week, with time and a half pay for the sixth day and double time for the seventh, in an effort to speed up the production of cords for the army. On the western front alone, it was revealed, no less than 500,000 trucks are operating in supplying the troops.

So far, several thousand soldiers have been released to help relieve a critical manpower shortage in important army plants, a shortage aggravated by the growing movement of 26-37 year old men to nonessential industries with the feeling that the recent inductions of those under 26 made them relatively draft-free.

Also prompting Selective Service's finer combing of its draft rolls was the increasing need for army placements. Maj.-Gen. Hershey said, with inductions slated to rise 10 to 20 per cent within the next few months.

FOOD EXPORTS:

Europe's Needs

Except for Russia, the food situation in Europe is getting in a condition that anticipated, and postwar needs chiefly will center on items with a long production cycle or those requiring processing, a WFA official said.

Although the Russians may return to normal production of grain, peas, beans and similar crops in their famed "bread-basket" province of the Ukraine by next year, WFA Deputy Director Col. E. W. Olmstead said, it will take three years to bring output of meats, fats, oils and sugar to prewar levels.

Because of the Germans' inability to remove bumper 1944 harvests from France during the lightning Allied thrust across the country this summer, that nation has a relatively good food supply, Colonel Olmstead said. In Italy, the problem primarily is one of straightening out shattered communication lines, he stated.

Battle Fare

The famous soldier who said "An army travels on its stomach" never had the food supply problems faced by General Hodges' 1st army. The menu of an army in the field doesn't always come from standard cans of hash and wax covered packages. Fighting and chasing an enemy often requires a soldier to feed himself with compact food kits which he can stuff into his pocket, but portable stoves, mobile bakeries, coffee roasting units, and huge refrigerator trucks move behind.

EUROPE:

Politics

Politics continued to dominate a Europe heading for a climactic year, with both countries and parties jockeying for favorable positions for the vital postwar era.

Biggest news was Gen. Charles de Gaulle's French government's entrance into a treaty of alliance and mutual assistance with Russia, important insofar as it reaffirmed the policy of collaboration of major powers, and rejected the recently advanced proposal for the organization of a regional security bloc consisting of small nations clustered around a large one. As a result of the treaty, France, backed by Russia, may be assigned an important role in the postwar control of Germany, with respect given to its demands of occupying the entire left bank of the Rhine and removing industrial machinery from Nazi factories.

In Athens, Greece, there was none of the tranquility which reigned in Moscow at the signing of the French-Russian treaty, however, what with Leftist guerrilla forces strengthening their ranks for their fight against Premier Papandreou's Rightist elements supported by the British.

Behind the fighting, which started when the guerrillas refused to give up their arms on the grounds that the Rightists were allowed to keep theirs, was London's interest in the political situation in Greece because of its strategic position in the Mediterranean, British life-line from the east.

Britain's disposition to back the friendly government of Premier Papandreou with armed might indicated its determination for a protection of its vital interests in that country in any settlement.

In Rome, Premier Ivanoe Bonomi reorganized the Italian government, with Count Carlo Sforza vigorously opposed by the British for his anti-monarchical tendencies, missing from the cabinet. In opposing Sforza's appointment to the cabinet in another country fronting the Mediterranean, the British charged that he was a "trouble maker" in a nation where the existence of a half dozen political parties furnishes wide grounds for differences.

In an attempt to compose such differences, Premier Bonomi decided to share his leadership with influential Christian Democratic and Communistic officials.

War

In the midst of the political shuffling, Allied armies maintained their relentless pressure on the Germans, with main interest focused on the western front, where the U. S. First and Ninth armies girded for a mighty thrust across the Roer river before the Rhineland, and the Third Army hammered into the Saar.

As U. S. forces advanced, they continued to encounter the most stubborn opposition, with the Germans continuing to convert every town into a fortified stronghold. On the eastern front, the Germans swung back to new defense lines based on mountainous terrain in both northern and southern Hungary as the Red steamroller crunched onward.

On the eastern front, the Germans swung back to new defense lines based on mountainous terrain in both northern and southern Hungary as the Red steamroller crunched onward.

MISCELLANY

Egg production in the United States is expected to be from 8 to 12 per cent lower in 1945 than it has been in 1944. The reduction will be due mostly to fewer hens on farms in west north central states and in far western states. The eastern and middle western states have more nearly maintained the size of their poultry flocks.

CIGARETTES:

Distribution Plan

With the cigarette supply about 70 per cent of normal and little possibility of improvement in the situation for the duration because of manpower shortages, the nation's wholesalers are planning rationing of stocks to assure an equitable distribution throughout the country.

Under the trade's plan, it was said, each retailer would receive an allotment based on his normal sales. In so doing, wholesalers would try to adjust deliveries to meet shifts in population, which have complicated the problem of adequate distribution.

According to one trade official, the estimate of a 70 per cent supply of cigarettes is an overall figure, since stocks vary. Since the cigarette famine started, one midwestern center has received a 70 per cent supply of two popular brands and about 52 per cent of two others, it was said.

EGGS:

WFA Sells Stocks

In an effort to speed the movement of eggs into consumption before the production seasonally increases, the War Food administration announced that it would sell its remaining government-owned stocks 10 per cent below authorized ceilings.

Of more than 6,000,000 cases of 30 dozen each bought during the heavy production period of 1944 to hold up prices, an estimated 575,000 cases remain, it was said.

The government stands to lose $10,000,000 from its 1944 egg operations, it was said, despite the fact that it expects to net 5 to 7 cents a dozen more on its last batch than it paid for them since prices are higher now than at the season of peak output.

Inventories are sufficiently depleted to enable buyers to absorb its present offerings, WFA said.

This Pen's Like Home

"We have an inmate here who doesn't want to leave," a guard told wondering Warden Joseph E. Ragen at Illinois' Stateville prison. "He says he likes it here and asks if he can't stay."

Noted for his fair but disciplinarian handling of convicts, Ragen visited the inmate, completing a sentence of 1 year to 15 months for obtaining money under false pretenses. "I have no place to go and I would like to stay here," the man said.

"I'm complimented," said Ragen, who returned as Stateville's warden following the sensational Roger Touby break. "But I'm sorry I can't accommodate you. Under the law I may not keep you here one day longer than the court's order calls for."

FAIR SEX:

Want Privileges

U. S. women, it seems, not only want their cake but they want to eat it, too.

So must have thought Thomas A. Johnstone, director of the General Motors division of the United Automobile Workers Union, upon addressing the first national women's conference of the UAW in Detroit, Mich.

Said Johnstone: "If women insist on getting the same rate of pay plus rest periods, which men do not get, then the men will raise hell." The 150 delegates sat on Johnstone in a hurry, typical comment being: "Brawn should not be considered more important than brains, etc., etc., etc. A man worker would not expect his wife or sister to do heavy lifting, etc., etc., etc."

Among other things, the delegates asked continuation of the fight for equal pay; abolition of special job classifications for women, and opportunity for advancement to top positions.

SOUTH:

New Farming

Because of the use of new strains of sweet potatoes in feeding cattle, southern agriculture is gradually changing from a basic cotton economy, J. F. Percy of Alexandria, La., told the 26th annual convention of the American Farm Bureau in Chicago, Ill.

At the same time, A. D. Brownfield of Deming, N. M., president of the American Livestock association, assailed the development of a postwar export program for the sale of manufactured goods through the importation of products already raised here in surplus or in adequate volume.

Not only is the feeding of sweet potatoes enabling southern farmers to increase dairy production and fatten up cattle, Percy said, but it also is forcing them to put more acreage into supplementary pasturage of hay and forage crops, further reducing the planting of soil-depleting cotton.

MEAT LABELS

Because many primal cuts carried no labels under previous marketing procedures, thus enabling some butchers to collect ration coupons for point-free meats, OPA ordered slaughterers to stamp all carcasses of beef, veal, lamb and mutton at least every two inches along all primal cuts.

OPA also revealed that many consumers purchasing up-graded meat were charged for a better quality than received.

Washington Digest
Hull's Trade Principles Backed by Stettinius

New Policy Shapes as State Department Is Remodeled to Attend to United States Commercial Interests.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

One of my punster colleagues, asked the question the other day: Is there any significance as far as United States foreign policy is concerned, in the fact that the new name of Edward Stettinius, the new secretary of state, is "Stet"? (For the benefit of you who do not handle type or typewriters, "stet" means "let it stand" and is usually written beside a sentence or paragraph in a manuscript which has been corrected.)

Observers have already expressed the opinion that the policies of Secretary of State Hull, resigned, will undoubtedly be carried out by his successor but many have overlooked the fact that the two men have in common a certain "stet" which is characteristic of the most important trend in the state department policy of recent years.

Although it was perhaps his character and his integrity which did more than anything else to carve the name of Cordell Hull deep in the annals of American statesmanship, those qualities were not the only ones which influenced President Roosevelt when he chose the stalwart Tennesseean to occupy the highest office in the cabinet.

Most important recommendation was Cordell Hull's long and a single-minded study of, and the complete acceptance of his belief in, the importance of international commercial relations and the vital role they play in the whole economic structure of domestic as well as world affairs.

I have dealt with that philosophy of Secretary Hull frequently in these columns. Suffice it to say that the war and the study of postwar problems has already proved the necessity of international trade agreements, one concrete product of this theory which the secretary espoused so wholeheartedly.

The trend is generally recognized, but not many persons realize how the growing importance of commercial negotiations on the highest diplomatic level has revolutionized the functions of the state department. Still more important is the fact that an awakened interest in the importance of international trade is actually creating a United States foreign policy, something which diplomats have always declared never really existed in the sense that other nations have fixed policies in dealing with their neighbor nations.

The link between Secretary Stettinius and his predecessor is based upon this same influence. Both men, despite their highly different backgrounds, have a similar "formula"—the formula for meeting American trade in American diplomacy.

This is an innovation in our foreign service where a tradition of protocol has grown up in an atmosphere bordering on snobishness and so far removed from the marts of trade that it scarcely has its diplomatic nose to business.

Secretary Hull was the first man to head our state department who believed that trade relations have in them the roots of war and peace. Edward Stettinius is now paid secretary of state who comes to the office with a training in industry. (He left the chairmanship of the board of the United States Steel corporation to join the committee of national defense.)

So much for the innovations in the viewpoints of the past and present heads of the state department. Now consider the material change in its organization.

New Functions Added to Office

When I sat down the other day and ran over some of the new offices and divisions and branches that are sheltered beneath the old rococo roof-tree which were not even a wink in the most progressive statesman's eye when I first walked its marble corridors, I had quite a shock.

There would be nothing to raise the eyebrow of past secretaries of state, of a Hay or Hughes, a Kellogg or even a Madison—these things now are listed—such as the section of our 35 embassies and 23 legations, nor the description of the duties of ambassadors, ministers and consular officers, nor the head of protocol or of the divisions which deal with passports and treaties. They all fit into the traditional atmosphere of gold seals, tail coats and top hats.

But what about aviation and shipping? And what about the whole great, new office of "wartime economic activity" many of whose functions will be continued when peace comes. Here is lodged the responsibility for "initiation"—that means the alpha and the omega—of the coordination not only of "policy" but of "action" on such a highly businesslike manner as the procurement of all essential war materials from foreign countries.

You may be the lowliest or the mightiest of importers or exporters, but if you wish to buy or sell such material you will have to deal with a representative of the department of state.

Then there is a complete "office of economic affairs." Here again action as well as policy concerning "protection" of American interests in American commercial and agricultural interests in foreign nations is initiated—that sounds more like Kansas City or Madison avenue or Wall street than Pennsylvania avenue or Downing street.

And those are only part of a modern diplomat's duties. There is also the tariff, trade treaties and agreements and international commercial policy as well in its one foreign office of economic affairs.

In addition, there is a monetary division, and (believe it or not) labor relations and another separate unit to deal with—that essential to the American home when it gets out wheels again—the "bureau of the office of economic affairs."

How we have departed from the haughty aloofness that sneered at vulgar trade! The spats and the monocles have been laid aside and the gentlemen once referred to by the cynical as "cocky-pushers" have gotten right down to the brass tacks of everyday life, and the activities shared by America's millions.

Foreign Policy

Must Interest Nation

And that brings me to the last observation which is the most important: the formation of a definite American foreign policy.

Of the people we have had "no foreign policy" in the past is because the people have been too busy with their own affairs to demand any special treatment for other countries except that they be let alone. But increasingly since World War I, the people have come to realize that the consequences of acts of government which affect other nations are very likely to react on the individual American's private affairs.

It is fairly well established by this time that one reason why we had a depression in the '30s was that the world went broke and wouldn't buy from us. Less broadly realized but growing clearer to most people is the fact that although we loaned money abroad to nations with which to buy their goods, when we refused to buy their goods (shut them out with high tariff) they couldn't earn the money to repay us. Then they went broke and we lost our trade as well as our money. Other nations which might have bought spent their money to get ready for war, which eventually stopped all buying.

Now many of the best business brains of the country have waked up to the fact that if this nation is going to achieve prosperity after the war, it is going to have something to say about a foreign policy that will produce a stable world.

In a democracy there can be no foreign policy unless the people make it, and in the personal affairs, the people do not express themselves. Their public servants do the best they can in the short period of their terms or periods of influence. The permanent members of the foreign service move along according to a pattern which has little to do with the swift vicissitudes of present day life and, until recently, no more attuned to the heavy machinery of human minds and scenes. The Japs are now calling us "al-bino baboons." Well, they are pretty much experts when it comes to monkey business.

Some people are saying that Harry Hopkins was too lavish in granting lend-lease demands to foreign nations. And all the time we thought he was the president's "no-man."

WNU RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point, now West Point, Texas, with wings at Kelly Field and takes up combat flying. He has been an instructor for four years when the war breaks out, and he is sent to India, but on arrival is made a ferry pilot and this does not suit him. After visiting General Chennault he gets a K-9 Hawk and soon becomes a "one man air force" in the side over Burma. Later he is made commanding officer of the 23rd Fighter Group and still keeps knocking down Jap planes. He tells the story of Capt. Elias.

CHAPTER XXI

When I finished the job and pulled up again, I could barely see the last of my flight several miles away. I grabbed the controls, forgot to look around, just sat there, "dumb and happy." Just sat there too long over enemy territory, without looking around every second. Without thinking about it, I had become a straggler.

In a high-powered engine as soon as we go into combat to take military power from the engine—that is, we take as much boost as the engine will stand without "detonating," put the prop in low pitch, high speed. As you can see, the engine in combat, and the army if you're not too excited the hand automatically pulls the prop controls to maximum cruising position to save fuel and to keep the engine from running hot. I began unconsciously to do this.

Just then, very dreamily, I heard "pop-pop-pop-pop-pop." I raised my head slightly, to try to see my other fighters ahead, and pulled the throttle back just a little. That popping sound was the engine detonation to me. Then I tensed, for I had seen that my manifold pressure was barely 5 inches (on the manometer gauge), and therefore I knew my engine was not getting much boost. At the same instant I heard again the pop-pop-pop, and became all attention in a flash; my nose went down—I had been climbing—my prop went back to low pitch speed, my throttle really went down enough to cause the engine to detonate. A cold shiver went down my spine, there in that hot glass cage. I skidded the ship to the left and banked around as my speed built up fast.

What I saw in the sun, ahead of me, chilled me more. I saw winking lights and the blurred outline of an airplane—and not so far away. Then I saw another, and I guess there were others. I could see orange lights winking down at me even in the glare of the sun. They were Japs firing at me, and I had only slightly more than a thousand feet.

Cold turkey and a struggle! While I fumbled with my mike button to my radio to call Holloway and Baunler for help, I realized the futility of it. I don't believe my throat would have made a sound anyway. I just started to thank the Lord, my reflexes let me do something. I turned directly towards the ships with my nose down, and pulled up firing. I know now that if I had turned around and looked back I would have shot me down in their cross-fire. As it was, I surprised them and went underneath them very fast and into the sun. Thus, they looked down at me before the sun in my favor, and from that time on I was using it. But as I pulled up firing, I held the trigger down and "froze." I heard the cannon of the Zero—I felt the recoil of my six guns—I felt things that I had never felt before—and then I saw a cloud of black smoke in front of my nose. I shut my eyes involuntarily and dove again.

Something hit my ship with the same sound you get when you suddenly fly into heavy rain. I opened my eyes and everything was dark. I smelled the smoke and cordite and gasoline and the smell of the sun in my face. I realized I was still firing. I reached up, grabbed the handle, rolled the canopy open—and saw light. I rolled it shut again and realized that I was on fire. Just then I realized I was still firing. I reached up, grabbed the handle, rolled the canopy open—and saw light. I rolled it shut again and realized that I was on fire. Just then I realized I was still firing.

With a long sigh of relief I lay the rate of the ship over the rice paddies, and as they say in the slang of fighter stations, "I took off like a scalded dog." I S-d and skidded but tried not to lose speed. Looking back, I saw the smoke and the fire. I had gone through, and down under the place where I had been I saw fire and a plume of smoke—one Jap that wouldn't fly again. I think I was hurt and a little before I fully realized that I had shot it down and hadn't run into it.

For twenty miles I skimmed over the paddies, "linking" to fool the enemy who might be pursuing, skidding to make him think I was losing the boost read seventy inches of mercury. The engine heated up and the coolant light came on to warn me, before I eased the throttle back a little. I called Alex Baunler, and told him and told him I was being intercepted, my engine was heating up and I didn't know what all was the matter with the ship, but I was on course for home and going like a bat out of hell. Ajax stood by to take my position if worse things should develop and I should have to land.

But the coolant light finally flickered and went off, the engine cooled off when I got a little of the boost off and stopped abusing it. And I breathed again, feeling that I'd been holding one breath for fifteen minutes. All was clear behind me, and I gradually climbed to ten thousand and went back home to Hengyang. All the boys came out to see me. Of course Elias was missing and they'd been worried lest I was a goner too. There were cannon holes in my wings and tail; one had gone just across the back of the canopy. There were smaller holes in the fuselage from the cockpit back to the tail; there was oil from the spinner of the prop to the tail. Oil from your own ship can hardly get on the very tip of the nose of your ship, and this was proof that it was Jap oil.

As we looked the plane over, I got more and more settled down from my narrow escape. But then I realized that my ship, which I had now flown in combat from April until September 2nd, was badly damaged. "Old Exterminator" was shot to pieces.

We had tea in the alert shack and sent the other mission out to dive-bomb Nanchang and strike the trains from Kukiang to the North towards Hankow. Also we got the Chinese net looking for Elias, and reported that I had shot down one Zero near Kukiang.

General Haynes led some missions on Canton, and after fair bombing results the fighters stayed behind and engaged the enemy Zeros. Lieut. Pat Daniels shot down his Fighter pilots ready to take to the sea at a moment's notice to fight all the time. They never had to sit on the defensive and worry. And, strangely enough, they liked it.

First Jap, and Charlie Sawyer got his third. In the next raid of the bombers, General Haynes again sent Maj. Butch Morgan—who the newspapers used to say was the only Yankee on General Chennault's staff—"Wonder how he got there?"—was leading the mission. The objective was to burn the docks of Haiphong on the coast of Indo-China.

The small bomber force of six B-25's went in with only three P-40's for escort. Maj. Ed Rector led the fighters, with Lieutenant Marks on one wing and Pat Daniels on the other. Just to make the bomb load against the Japs heavier, the fighters carried a five-hundred-pound bomb on each ship. With these they dive-bombed the docks after the bombers had blasted them and set them on fire. Here the ships went back to their forward field to refuel and return to base, the smoke was covering the town. Rector led his three fighters down the straits between the wharves and kept the fire-fighters from working.

We were brought back north from the Kwelin-Hengyang front to watch the situation in Burma and to harass the Japs in Indo-China. Our situation was peculiar in China—we were just about surrounded by the Japanese on all sides except to the North, toward Russia, and there so far and over such mountains that it seemed not to matter. To our backs was Burma, filled with Japs. To the South was Indo-China and Thailand, and out to the front and Northeast were Japanese. Where in hell could you find a worse situation?

But we got to fight all the time; we never had to sit on the defensive and worry. We liked it and there was never a word of complaint.

I had to wait at Hengyang a day longer than the others, for my ship was being repaired enough for me to fly it to the repair depot at Kunming. At Kunming the two engines were changed. "Old Exterminator" was bad and there were no more new or serviceable engines. The cannon from the Zero had damaged the wing so badly that pullouts would be dangerous. The fuselage was peppered with over two hundred holes from the last five months of combat.

The old ship was junked or salvaged, for its needed parts too badly in China. There were new planes on the way to us now in monthly increments, but we could take this plane and put several back in commission. The scheme that we devised helped us more greatly, for to have junked the old ship that had been my fighter for five months would have been like seeing the horse that you've ridden for twenty years cast aside and deserted. I could remember too well that day when I landed at Hengyang and looked at the damage the ship had suffered. There had been a lump in my throat and I had felt as though the German had been taken away. "Old Exterminator" had taken me nearly five hundred hours into combat against the enemy. That's over a hundred thousand miles—and you just ask any pilot who has flown on way trips where people shoot at you.

We took the guns out of the ship that General Chennault had given me in April and put them in my new P-40E. They were well broken in, and the Armstrong Officer, Captain Hoffman, who had been with the AVG and in my squadron in Panama seven years before, had worked them into perfection. I had had no jams or stoppages in over a month. The instruments were scattered throughout the group; the armor plate was taken out to make a hot-cake griddle for the mess. The parts were cannibalized, and in a month were replaced over eighteen P-40's in the organization. I remember especially that the automatic fuel-pump was taken out of the ship that had the lighter ship go higher than it had ever gone before, and on its second flight with the booster pump, the pilot, Lieut. T. R. Smith, shot down a Japanese observation plane over Kumiang.

I never did go out and look at the old engine that had come out of my first fighter. After all, an engine is interchangeable anyway, and we get used to different ones. The shot-up "Old Exterminator" was the wing that had held me up over a hundred thousand miles of enemy country. I didn't want to see again. I just thought of my six fifty-caliber guns flying with me in the lead bomber as the real soul of "Old Exterminator."

And I thought of the hundreds of parts from Air Corps number 41-1456 that were helping to keep eighteen ships on our front in the end.

For the men of the Group, the cannibalized ship had been a help, but to me it had been a tradition to keep. In my mind, no matter how long I myself might be fighting in China, "Old Exterminator" would be on all those flights—some of it would be on every mission that we flew. And thus it would fly forever.

On September 25, Maj. Ed Rector led the assault of a flight down to raid Hanoi in Indo-China. I led the support, and we kept a thousand feet above the first echelon. Our mission was to escort ten bombers for the bombardment of Gia Lati airfield. We went South and "topped-off" our gas load at a secret base, then routed our flight to the West of Laokay to keep from alerting the Japanese net. We were close to Hanoi, we kept well West of the railroad that led to our objective.

Even with these precautions to keep from alerting the enemy, we found the Japanese 145's in the air and over the field as we came in from the West. The twin-engine fighters absolutely ignored our fighters and made runs on the bombers, but they didn't get very far with their orders. Rector took the first four P-40's in on the leading Japs and hit them five hundred yards behind our bombers, who were already on their way.

I saw two of Ed's flight going up on the first steeply climbing 145, but before they could shoot it down Daniels went in fast to within a few yards of the Jap and shot him down in flames. As the ship exploded I thought Pat Daniels' plane was on fire too, they were so close. We all confirmed the first ship for the eager fighter who was from Van Nuys, California.

The bombers were on the way home now, and we sighted with relief and tried to catch the Japs. Ed Rector took the next ship he got his sights on and blew it apart. We fought all the way to the ground with two others. Marks shot down one, and the others were about equally divided.

I caught a flight of three 145's going hell-bent for the bombers from behind and shot them down. The last one in the formation down was a short burst. It was point-blank range and occurred very fast. I saw a thin trail of gray smoke that looked like the usual contrail of a plane that forms behind the wings of fighter ships doing maneuvers at high altitude, when the atmospheric conditions are just right. And then flame poured from the right engine. I reached up over the cockpit and stretched thirty feet back in the slipstream. I moved up towards the second enemy fighter and didn't see the flamer go down.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Self-induced starvation caused by playmates' jibes at her weight, caused the death of a 14-year-old Rochester girl.

Rose Marie MacCallini died after a reducing diet, despite a physician's order. Her weight had been reduced in one year from 188 to 88 pounds.

Gets Honor Medal

In First Battle

Soldier Goes on One-Man Rampage With Results.

ROME.—A one-man rampage against strongly entrenched enemy troops in his first front line action won for Pvt. James H. Mills, Fort Meade, Md., the congressional medal of honor.

Preceding a platoon down a draw to reach a Nazi stronghold, Private Mills advanced 800 yards. A machine gun only five yards away fired at him. He was hit in the chest with one shot. The assistant gunner surrendered.

Private Mills advanced again and saw a German pulling the firing pin on a hand grenade. He made the German drop the grenade and surrender, and killed another Nazi who tried to throw the grenade.

The American then came under the direct fire of an enemy machine gun, two machine pistols and three rifles at a range of 15 feet. He simply charged, firing his Garand rifle from his hip. His charge so astonished the enemy all his charges surrendered.

At the end of the draw a machine gunner 20 yards distant opened fire. Private Mills, without cover and with bullets hitting within inches of him, killed the gunner with a single shot. Two enemy infantrymen nearby fired at him and fled. He killed one of them with a single shot.

When the rest of the platoon came up they found that assaulting the enemy position had cost the Americans few casualties and Private Mills volunteered to cover the advance.

He stood up in full view of the Germans, shouted insults at them, and fired his rifle. Bullets buzzed all around. When his weapon was empty, he jumped into a draw, reloaded and climbed out. He repeated this four times.

His platoon slipped undetected down a ditch and assaulted the German position. Twenty-two Germans were captured without a single casualty among the Americans.

Fishhooks, Razor Blades

Helped Save Yank Flier

ADVANCED SOUTHWEST PACIFIC AIR BASE.—Fishhooks and razor blades were the weapons that helped save a downed American pilot. The pilot, Capt. Leroy P. Futhrell, of San Antonio, Texas, and Middleton, Ohio, marshalled his crewmen to figure a way out of their predicament.

When the Mitchell medium bomber, both engines dead after a strafing mission, crash-landed in a swampy area, the crewmen of the San Antonio, Texas, and Middleton, Ohio, marshalled his crewmen to figure a way out of their predicament.

Unfortunately, none had been injured. A search party found a native village, but the natives, who admitted disliking the Japs, were indifferent to the Americans' problem of how to get home.

The fishhooks and razor blades changed the natives' attitude. The airmen swapped the hooks and blades in return for gum and other necessities. The natives from village to village, through and around Jap concentrations, and a canoe ride—ended at an Australian outpost and safety five days after the crash.

News of Soldier's Death

Is Fatal to His Mother

PHILADELPHIA.—Quiet and unassuming, the six married sons of Mrs. Anna May Clamper, 65, arrived at their mother's home.

One brought the family physician and friend. Another carried a war department telegram saying their father, Pvt. Robert Clamper, had been killed in France.

"Sit down, Mom," said Walter Clamper.

Mrs. Clamper seated herself slowly and Walter went on:

"We have bad news."

An inquisitive fear crossed her face.

"Bobby," said Walter. The stare in his mother's eyes was changed.

"Bobby has been killed."

The physician stepped to Mrs. Clamper's side and bent over her.

"Mom is dead," he said.

Soldier's Afternoon

By SHIRLEY N. HARKINS

McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

WV Feature.

Biff was hopping mad. And hopping up and down on the bed's seat of the bouncing jeep at the same time. He kept his foot pressed to the floor, and the tangled wires on either side flew past like telephone poles from a train window.

Even then only the faintest breeze fanned his tanned face. It was sure hot country out here. Hot and breathless. Just the way Julie made a guy feel. Gosh, she was cute. As the cocky little nurse's cap perched on her blond curls. He marveled at her. As she managed to look crisp as a lettuce leaf, even under this broiling sun. It sure had been pleasant recuperating from malaria under her watchful care.

She had bestowed her warm smile impartially on Biff and his C. O., Major Deston, as they condescended down the hall. She liked the army and her nursing job near the front. And Biff was sure she liked him, too. After all, they were both from Brooklyn. That made them practically soulmates.

And now Major Deston had to ruin Biff's chance for a date with Julie tonight. An opportunity to walk under a still, star-crusted sky, and perhaps hold Julie's cool little hand, and maybe not say a word, and then again, maybe say the word.

Julie was one in a million, and now just when he was on the verge of asking her to wait for him, Major Deston had cooked his goose. This was his last night at the post, for his special mission meant advancing ranks in the morning. The Lord only knew where the regiment would be stationed from now on.

The very thought that he might never see Julie again made him a little sick. Fat chance he'd ever have of meeting her back in Brooklyn when this shooting match was over.

And yet someone had to lift the protective mines planted a few hours before so that the troops could go forward in an attempt to locate the unknown German base. He wondered why Deston had picked him for this detail. Could Deston be cutting any ice with Julie? He imagined the idea as an idea as unworthy, but a guy in love can't help being jealous. Even of a kindly middle-aged major. No, it was just his usual bad luck to be chosen for special duty.

He got the job over with and jumped back to the post double-quick. He only needed a few minutes with Julie. He was so preoccupied with his problem that he failed to see the foreboding clouds that were blocking the path ahead. He jammed on the brake, and the jeep screeched to a stop.

When the two Germans jumped out of the bushes, leveling their pistols at him, Biff was startled. But he wasn't as startled as he was disappointed. It looked as if Julie and the dream were separated for good.

"Your jeep, she make the big noise, nein?" The tall man's tones were rough, but you could hear him far off, and we say "Goot!" Now we get back to our base after all, even if our car break down." He kicked the useless tire savagely. "Our men will repair it later. You will drive us directly to Bhau Kherah, my friend, and no funny business. We are not patient men."

The two strangers climbed into the back, deluged with their strategy and the novelty of safe conduct to their headquarters with an American prisoner as chauffeur. Biff's thoughts chased around in his head like leaves in the wind. So Bhau Kherah was the German base! Deston would be glad to know that. If Biff lived to tell him.

He drove steadily for some minutes while his plan formulated. He'd drive these lugs straight over to our own explosives and make a break for it. The lugs' sudden swerve around angered his German pals, but it was too late. The front wheels missed the mine, but the rear caught it squarely.

It seemed to Biff that a giant sky-rock had burst in his head, and the detonation filled the quiet glade with deafening noise. He found himself lying flat in a wadi but he could move, and he wriggled to a position where he could inspect the effect of his bull's-eye. The jeep was completely wrecked, and the two Germans lay dead.

Biff broke into a run. If he hurried, he might be able to yet salvage a few minutes with Julie. Competently, he lifted the remaining mines and then dogtrodded to the armored car.

"Here we go, Fraulien," he said prayerfully, as he started the ignition. "If the rim only holds, I'll make it back to camp."

Driving on the rim, his thoughts leaped excitedly to his young man. He said to himself, "you've had a busy day." He'd wear his bars modestly, but his heart thumped loudly as he pictured Julie's pride in him. "Just a bum from Brooklyn," she would laugh softly, and her lips would be full and sweet.

Sponges Grow in Brilliant

Colors on Bed of Ocean

The sponge in your bathroom is very little like the sponge growing on the ocean bed, for it has to be processed and dried before it can be used. On the ocean bed, sponges grow in brilliant colors, yellow, green, orange, purple, and blue. They are called "sea sponges" and are used for many purposes. Write to: H. B. O'Neil, 1001 Indianapolis 6, INDIANA.

It is by no means an inanimate growth, for every sponge is covered by living organisms, which draw nutriment by suction from the water, and the deeper they lie beneath the surface the better and stronger they grow.

Growth is slow, however, and the average complete sponge you use to wash your face takes about four years to reach maturity.

ELECTRIC SERVICE IS ONE OF THE TWO CHEAPEST THINGS WE BUY.

WHEN nine and a half out of ten persons* tell you that something is good and that it is reasonable in price, you can believe it. That's what a cross-section of our customers told us in a recent survey when we asked them this question:

Which two of the following items do you consider most reasonable in price?

Check two: () Clothing () Shoes
() Electric Service () Food
() Rent

Listen to the "Electric Hour" every Sunday afternoon at 3:30 over Columbia Network stations.

Many said, in effect: "I'm surprised that the electricity to operate all of the appliances I have doesn't cost more."

Others indicated that because the cost of operating the few appliances they have is so low, they intend to completely electrify their homes after the war—that they intend to use some of their War Bonds for this purpose.

We appreciate these friendly expressions, and will continue to try to merit them.

STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Montgomery, Ala. — Some figures showing desperate need for new school buildings in Alabama were given today by Dr. A. K. Meadows, director of the State Department of Education's division of administration and finance. Alabama school systems took advantage of pre-war public works programs so far as their financial ability permitted, and built hundreds of excellent classrooms; however, State and local funds were insufficient to meet all building needs and thousands of Alabama school children today are inadequately housed.

A recent school plant inventory shows that 559 churches and 842 other privately owned buildings are being used to house public school children, Dr. Meadows said. "It shows also that 9,045 children are attending schools in which no toilet facilities are provided, and children in 773 schools have only surface-type toilets; that 23,000 children are attending schools without any water supply on the school grounds, and that 2,540 buildings have only grate-type stoves or inadequate heating facilities.

The Statewide study shows that 8,174 new classrooms are needed to replace overcrowding and to replace buildings that are dilapidated beyond economical repair or alteration. The cost of new classrooms and other types of building, equipment, sanitation and heating needed is $88,975,029.

The State study was made in co-operation with county and city school superintendents for the purpose of making school building post-war plans. Local school officials are planning to meet the most urgent needs first in terms of funds which may be made available through State appropriations or through a federal public works program. The proposal has been made that from $8,000,000 to $12,000,000 in the Alabama Special Educational Trust Fund Surplus Account be made available for school building construction and debt service for capital outlay. It is not anticipated that sufficient funds will be provided to meet all building needs.

HOLLY on the door and a candled wreath in the window. Stockings by the fireplace, carols in the dark, and the jeweled Christmas tree glittering through the night. What would Christmas be without them?

The answer is . . . it would still be Christmas.

For Christmas isn't symbols . . . Christmas is something that happens to people. It wells up, overflows, bursts forth from the heart of every human being. It goes far beyond the traditional forms of our American observance . . . adopts a hundred different forms all over the world and transcends them all. Christmas is the sweetest emotional experience shared at one time by mankind.

There's not a flake of snow in the South Pacific tonight, not a single tinkling sleigh-bell. But the tender joy of Christmas fills fighting American hearts on every atoll and palm-fringed isle. There are no street-singers in the North Atlantic, nor a Christmas tree in all its watery waste of miles. The men on the icy convoys need no symbols to remind them . . . their thoughts and love and prayers tonight are winging home to you.

So let not the absence of a loved one depress you or steal your holiday joy. The Spirit of Christmas is working in his heart as in yours; he is sharing your Christmas with you just as certainly as if he were greeting you in the glow of your own lighted tree—as he will, most assuredly, on a Christmas yet to come.

Hearty and cheery
And happy and true,
An ever so fervent Merry Christmas to you! . . .

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haakow, D.D.

We take the picture of one hundred men in a group and each man is in his 26th year. We then wait fifty years and inquire into that group. There will be no man out of the group that will be rich, four will be fairly prosperous, five will be supporting themselves, 36 will be dead, and the other 54 will be supported by relatives or the state, or on the mercy of society. That means that there is something radically wrong with our social set-up. Either the most of the men were failures to start with or else they did not meet with a fair deal in our American life.

An absent minded missionary looked at his watch and finding that it had stopped, he tried to get it to run, but it refused. He decided that it was out of order and he got on a train and traveled 250 miles to get his watch repaired. The jeweler took his watch and looked it through. Then he remarked, "Here is your perfectly good watch my friend. There was nothing wrong with it, except it needed winding." We are having much to say today about what is wrong with the church. We go away to conferences and conventions to get specialists to tell us what to do. Hear me, there is nothing wrong with the church except we have allowed her to run down. Wind her up with the truths of the old time gospel, and then listen to her tick and watch her run.

I saw a beautiful home on Main Street but it was unsightly because the builder never thought of a bath room for his home until it was completed. Then he added the bath room and it looked like a hen house on the side. In New York a company built a swimming pool at a cost of $45,000.00, and when it was ready for use they discovered that not a water pipe had been provided in the contract. They had a swimming pool and the crowd had assembled to dedicate it, but there was not a drop of water. Many of our modern churches look that way to us. We have fine buildings, great knowledge and eloquence, much machinery, and yet the main thing has been left off. No church is ready to move out in service until she has a well of water springing up unto everlasting life.

A judge over at Augusta, Georgia closed his book one morning after having granted 287 divorces in a four hour session of his court and this is what he said, "If this is civilization in America, then we are in a hell of a fix." What was it that rested at the base of those divorces? It was personalism. It is individualism that is working havoc in the social life of America. When individualism becomes the aim and purpose of life, then society goes to pieces. This is a world of give and take. No man liveth to himself alone. The thing that has brought wreck and ruin to many a marriage is selfishness on the part of one, or both. When self is lost in love on the part of both, the vows of the altar will last forever.

MEN NEEDED IN THE NAVY SEABEES

With Selective Service mapping plans to induct a larger ratio of men in the 26 to 37 age group, M. H. Potter, petty officer in charge of the Montgomery Navy Recruiting Station, has called attention to the opportunity offered if prospective inductees can qualify for service in the Navy Seabees.

"Men whose skill and experience will qualify them can be taken into the Seabees with a petty officer rating and continue their own particular type of work," Potter said.

Ratings of Second and First Class Petty Officer are authorized now, the recruiter added. Age limits have been extended to 50.

Potter emphasized the need of immediate action by applicants if they desire to avail themselves of ratings which will give them starting base pay of $96 or $114 per month, plus family allowances.

The following kinds of work experience are desired: Winchman, hatch boss, surveyor, builder, pipefitter and plumber, welder, crane, patrol grader, bulldozer and car yard equipment operator, and line, station and general electrician.

Full information can be obtained from the Navy Recruiter who visits Clanton every Monday and makes headquarters at the Draft Board offices.

AWARDED SILVER STAR POSTHUMOUSLY IN ITALY

Pfc. James A. Scott of Maplesville, Ala., recently was awarded the Silver Star posthumously for gallantry in action with Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army in Italy.

During a heavy German counter-attack aimed at Scott's company, one enemy group approached his machine gun position so closely that it was impossible to fire his weapon upon them. He courageously continued the engagement with a pistol and hand grenades, assisting in the killing of ten Germans and forcing the remainder of the group to withdraw.

"His dogged determination and utter disregard for his own safety contributed immeasurably in repelling the counter attack and enabled his company to hold its objective," read the citation with the award.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Chowder Comes to the Dinner Table!
(See Recipes Below)

Soup Suggestions

There's a lively interest in soup these days, and rightly so, for a soup that's rich enough can take the place of a meat dish at a meal and still satisfy even appetites made keener by blustery winter weather.

Soups are good for filling in that gap before the main dish is brought to the table to satisfy the hungry. If they are substantial enough, that is, if they are creamed soups, or the thicker type of vegetable and meat combinations, no main dish is required. And, if there are any dieting members in the family, there are enough of the lighter types of soups which will not satisfy, but are low in caloric value.

First, there are the substantial lentil soups which have much nourishment.

Bean Soup.
1½ pounds pork shoulder or ham
2 tablespoons onion, chopped
1 pound navy beans
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
Soak the beans in water overnight. In the morning, parboil them. Cover the meat with water, then add beans, onions, salt and pepper. Cook 2½ to 3 hours. Serve with dumplings, if desired.

Yellow Split Pea Soup.
3 pounds smoked brisket of beef or scraps of dried beef, sausage or ham bone
2 cups yellow split peas
3 quarts cold water
¼ cup celery, diced
1 small onion, cut fine
2 tablespoons butter or substitute
1 teaspoon sugar
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
2 tablespoons flour

Pick over and wash peas. Soak them in cold water overnight, then drain and place in a saucepot with meat. Add cold water and let simmer gently for about 4 hours. Add celery during last part of cooking. Remove meat when tender. Skim fat off the top of the soup. Heat 2 tablespoons of butter in frying pan, add the onions and brown. Blend in flour and gradually add soup, stirring constantly. Season to taste and serve with smoked meat, adding croûtons.

Clam Chowder.
1 quart clams
4 cups potatoes, diced
2 inch square fat, salt pork
1 onion, diced
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
4 tablespoons butter
4 cups milk
8 soda crackers, rolled
Pick over clams, drain and cut pork in small pieces. Fry out in skillet. Add onions, salt and butter 5 minutes. Add potatoes, clam liquid and enough water to cover. Cook until nearly tender, then add butter, milk and seasoning. When potatoes are done and milk is very hot, add clams and cook for 3 minutes.

Lynn Says:

Soups for Meals: If there is any water left after vegetables are cooked, this should be saved and used for soup stock. A few extra vegetables may be added to give stronger flavor.

When milk is added to soups, it's richness and nutritive value is increased.

Serve big helpings of salad when soup is the main dish and have a really nutritious meal.

Soups may be garnished with toasted croûtons, whipped cream or egg white or sprinklings of grated cheese, paprika, and parsley.

Soaring Wings

WNU Features.

JANICE pulled her sweater closer about her as she hurried across the dunes, the thermos jug cuddled under her arm. It had been a blistering hot day, but with nightfall the wind shifted east, and even now a spray rode in with the waves. It was tedious work spotting from the watchtower on the rocky ledge, and Barry would appreciate the coffee.

She smiled softly in the darkness, warm at the thought of Barry and how much he meant to her. She couldn't imagine what life would be like without him to tease her affectionately. They had grown up together in this tiny New England village, sharing experiences, perfectly content with their narrow little square of earth, but then war came, and his shadow blotted out the sun on the crags, the peaceful fishing dories, and the graceful flight of sea gulls across the harbor. Everything suddenly assumed a stern and vital purpose, and a man became ambitious, restless.

"Golly, Jan, I'd give anything to enlist right now," Barry's serious mood touched the girl, and she shuddered slightly. She was thankful Mrs. Conroy depended solely on him. He worked with a new determination, a zeal that hinted he was under duress.

The feeling swept through the village like wildfire and uniforms mushroomed overnight. Even Fred Willis with his warped, distorted mind and his crooked back seethed

"Why, Fred, how unkind; and untrue, too!"

Janice thought he could not fight. Jan worried about Fred. He had always been unreasonably jealous of Barry, so much so that it was becoming an obsession.

"He's just a slacker, Barry Conroy," Jan heard over Fred's venomous attack. "Afraid, if I had his strong body, nothing would keep me out of this scrap."

"Why, Fred, how unkind; and untrue, too!" He faced her defiantly, and she didn't like the look in his eyes.

She sympathized with Barry's disappointment when he told her of his failure to make the grade with the Air Corps, but she couldn't still the happy thought: He'll stay a while longer. I won't lose him yet.

Janice thought now what a godsend the boom had been to the village. She remembered her first trip with Barry. With the 2nd Air Corps they had ridden the ground swells off the coast in the little dory and detached the rock-moored moss with long ladders. Back on shore, their haul had had to be spread out to dry. Every evening and when rain threatened, it was packed in large covered buckets for protection, as fresh water could not be had.

"Somebody dropped that powder made from the dried moss could be used in chocolate milk, ice cream soda and other soft drinks to keep the mixtures from separating. Golly, Jan, don't argue about it. Just be grateful that this summer's harvest will pay for painting the house."

Janice feared his reaction to an outer world, a wonderful, exciting new experience. Barry, she knew, would adapt himself easily. He deserved his chance, even if he did forget a snub-nosed little girl in denim slacks and a straw hat. She sighed, thinking how delighted Barry had been earlier in the evening.

"Jan, it's almost enough!" he gloated exultantly. "A few more collections like this, and I'll practically have my wings!" Her heart contracted. She hurried now, for it began to sprinkle. She stopped short as she saw Fred skulking by the packed tubs. Fred, wanting to keep Barry out of uniform even as she did, Fred, who had silently removed all the covers and stolen away in the darkness.

It was a fine effort at revenge, she knew, and yet it would keep Barry close and safe beside her for a few more weeks. She began to feel a conspiratorial kinship with Fred. It was sheer accident that Barry had stumbled on the scene at all. Barry wasn't expecting her.

When Janice reached the watchtower, Barry held her close. "Good girl!" he whispered. "I saw the whole thing." Janice stared at the binoculars on the table. She was glad she had covered the tubs that would send her eagle soaring. In giving Barry his chance, she had made a place for herself beside him forever.

U. S. Spy Hides on Mindanao; Helps Guerrilla Fight

Officer Sends Back Vital Tips From Rear of the Japanese Lines.

WITH THE AMERICAN RANGERS IN THE PHILIPPINES, Lieut. Leon Tinnell, St. Louis, Mo., of the army air corps, returned recently after spending more than seven months behind Japanese lines on Mindanao island, fighting with the guerrillas and gathering information which played a key part in the drive back to the Philippines.

Tinnell went to Mindanao by submarine. He came out the same way. During those seven months he radioed information back to American headquarters which resulted in the sinking of more than 50 enemy ships.

Tinnell told headquarters when and where Japanese troops were moving; what installations the enemy was building and where. Then he came out weighing only 126 pounds—17 under normal. He was sick with malaria. But the Japanese had never caught up with him nor wounded him.

Heads Picked Group Now. Now Tinnell is back in the Philippines. But this time he did not have to sneak in by submarine. He heads a picked group of reconnaissance troops which landed with the Rangers on Homonhon island in the Leyte Gulf. Instead of the three men he had on Mindanao, Tinnell's unit now has 28—16 Filipinos and 12 Americans.

"I've been in every theater of war except China—Burma—India," said Tinnell, "I used to be a radio runner on Liberty and Flying Forts. I am used to action, lots of it."

"When I came to the southwest Pacific and they asked for volunteers for a 'secret assignment' I took the leap. I have the satisfaction of knowing I helped our own Japs ships and kill some Jap soldiers."

"I've seen Filipinos wage deadly effective guerrilla war against the enemy. I've seen how they made the Japs so scarce, and that they no longer dared to leave their camps to move inland except in force."

When I left, the guerrillas controlled a large section of one Philippine island.

Made Them More Deadly. "The Japs worked hard to buy Filipino fifth columnists. I know one who didn't escape, and then burned the village to the ground. This only made the guerrillas more deadly."

"The guerrillas were well organized. They lived quite well off the land, but were pinched for ammunition, weapons, and medical supplies."

"Many Americans were among them, including soldiers who escaped from Luzon and civilians who took to the sea. One American guerrilla leader was an insurance salesman in Manila. There were many like him."

Blended Colors in Knitted Rag Rug

IF YOU want to make a really effective rug from odds and ends of fabric—and do it quickly, this knitted rug is the answer. You cut or tear the material in strips about three-quarters of an inch wide, turn in the raw edges and then knit straight strips with needles three-eighths inch in diameter. These are sewn around a center oval.

The colors are important of course and it is essential that the knitted strips be eased in with evenly distributed fullness. The trick is in pinning them in place first as shown in the diagram.

NOTE—This rug is from BOOK 4 which also gives the complete knitting directions for the center oval and the strips. Directions for more than 25 things to make for your home and for gifts and bazaars are included in this book. Copies are 15 cents each. Send your order to:

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

FOLKS & THINGS
ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

We were in Montgomery Saturday night where they were serving mixed drinks. Someone must have slipped an olive or cherry in one of mine the way my head feels this morning. No fooling, did you ever see such a bountiful Christmas — so much in spite of war, to be thankful for. Truly it was a Christmas of plenty for the folks here at home. Only one thing was missing and of course we know, there was one absent from your home too. But as we said—we still have so much to be thankful for.

We're glad for Birmingham, but sorry here in Clanton that J. T. King has been transferred to the main offices in the Magic City. Mr. King has been manager of the local Elmore's for several years and he and his family have a host of friends in this county. He took a prominent part in all the civic affairs and will be sorely missed. Good luck, Mr. King—we think you're a prince—of a good fellow.

The janitor at the shop was watching us put some heavy paper on the feed-board of the large cylinder press the other night. We leaned over too close to the foot-board and hit it with our back and it pitched us forward.

on our face. Said Walter: "Cap'n, you just scooped over too high up."

Oh yeah, we failed to mention in an earlier paragraph that Mr. J. C. Parr would be the new local manager at the V. J. Elmore Store when J. T. King goes to Birmingham. And also that Mr. King's family will remain here until school is out.

Well, Happy New Year, folks. We wish you your full share of the good things of life throughout the coming year. May your troubles be few, and your blessings many. May sorrow pass you by. This is our New Year wish to YOU.—Ben.

IT PAYS TO PREPARE LANDS EARLY

Early and thorough preparation of land for kudzu and sericea pays off. A firm seed bed is needed to obtain good stands. Rains will do the job of firming if the land is plowed now. The work of preparation and planting will be out of the way when it's time for other crops if the land is plowed now. The work of planting will be easier if the preparation is begun now. Cultivation of the kudzu with an interplanted crop (watermelons, corn, peas) will be easier.

For kudzu lay off rows 25 inches apart on the contour with middle-breaker or shovel, distribute 200 to 300 pounds superphosphate per acre and list on the fertilizer to form a low flat bed 10 feet wide. On badly eroded and thin land the addition of manure with the phosphate will pay. If the land is tuffy harrow so that the vegetation is well mixed to permit settling to a firm bed.

For sericea turn the land now and harrow, preferably with discs, until all vegetation is well mixed. Following rains after the turning harrow (disc or section) to firm and fine the seed bed. Early in March apply 600 pounds of superphosphate or 1,200 pounds basic slag and harrow in.

Kudzu plants may be set any time now after beds are firm until March 15. Sericea should be seeded the first date after March 15, that moisture conditions are right.

Details as to methods of setting kudzu plants and seeding the sericea may be obtained from Brooks Connell, County Conservationist, North Central Soil Conservation District, or M. R. Glascock, County Agent.

Crop Production Near Record

Released by Western Newspaper Union.
(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Map indicates route of U. S. invasion force from Leyte to Mindoro in Philippines, with stars denoting areas where guerrilla activity helped neutralize Japanese on neighboring islands.

CROPS:
1944 Summary

Despite the fact that growing conditions were less favorable than in 1942 and there were fewer skilled men on farms, 1944 crop production about equaled the record output of two years ago, the U. S. department of agriculture declared in its annual summary.

Production of grain, fruits, nuts and commercial vegetables were at high levels, with output of corn at 3,228,361,000 bushels and of wheat at 1,078,647,000 bushels setting all-time marks, the USDA said.

Paying tribute to the valiant effort of U. S. farmers, the USDA said: "Farmers planted only when they could and they kept on planting past the normal season as long as there seemed half a chance of success."

PACIFIC:
New Move

While the Japanese press stated that the victory in the battle of the Philippines invaded Mindoro island in the Philippines "will assume full control of tomorrow's military situation," U. S. forces which landed there after a 600-mile overwater thrust from Leyte under Rear Adm. A. D. Struble fought to secure airfields commanding the great enemy communication hub of Manila, 155 miles away.

As the doughboys punched inland on Mindoro, with engineers right on their heels to erect military installations, other U. S. forces on Leyte continued their pressure from both the north and south on Japanese forces entrapped in the western corner of the island.

The move on Mindoro was another of General MacArthur's daring military maneuvers, designed to not only paralyze Japanese troop and supply shipments to the southern Philippine islands from Manila, but also imperil the enemy's China sea route from the rich Dutch Indies to the southwest.

SAVINGS:
Postwar Bulwark

Although the shortage of goods has helped to curb wartime spending, much of the huge volume of savings of individuals can be attributed to their desire to provide insurance against a postwar business slump, the U. S. treasury declared.

Before the beginning of 1940 on was revealed, individuals had saved $108,000,000, of which $37,000,000 was invested in private securities and an equal amount in federal issues. The remaining $34,000,000 was placed in bank accounts.

At the same time, the treasury reported that of the total sales of E, F and G bonds, only 11.47 per cent have been cashed in, although redemptions on the smaller issues have been slightly larger at 15.12 per cent.

Germany's War Sinews

German steel plants, largest producers in Europe before the war and second only to the United States in world production, have been the backbone of Germany's war machine in both World Wars. Before 1917 the German steel industry was growing relatively slowly compared with France and England. After Prussia defeated France in that year, however, and acquired the Saar Lorraine, its extensive iron ore deposits, German steelmaking began to expand.

POSTWAR JOBS:
New Proposal

In congress' first detailed approach to the task of providing 90,000,000 jobs in the postwar era, a senate committee presented a proposal for a presidential estimate of probable private employment through a year and a federal program to take up any slack.

With Committee Chairman Murray (Mont.) stating that the proposal may be as a bill in the next congress, it requires the President to estimate full employment, the amount of investment and expenditures needed to achieve the goal, and the probable outlays by private capital. In the event that the latter was insufficient to provide full employment, the government would attempt to stimulate private investment, or spend money itself.

Said the committee: "Unless an economic substitute is found for war contracts, the number of unemployed men and women in this country could easily surpass anything that was dreamed of during the last depression."

SOCIAL SECURITY:
Freeze Taxes

For the third successive year, congress passed, and the President signed, a bill freezing social security taxes at the present rate of 1 per cent on both employer and employee, thus holding off an increase to 2 per cent scheduled for January 1.

Again leading the fight for the freeze, Michigan's Sen. Arthur Vandenberg declared that the present 1 per cent tax would be sufficient to pay benefits at the current rates for the next 20 years.

In signing the bill, however, President Roosevelt chided Senator Vandenberg's assertion, declaring that the freeze merely defers collections for another year, and that the country was committed to a broadening, rather than a stable, social security program.

Repairs Heart

To a field hospital back of the Siegfried line, they brought in an infantry captain hit in the back by shell fragments. Holes were torn in the heart muscles and the organ was hanging from the conical sac of serious membrane enclosing it. The heart lining also had been grazed by shrapnel and a lung perforated.

Using all of the ingenuity of modern surgery, Lieke von Starck, Dr. Welch of Albany, N. Y., removed the shell splinters, and then sewed up the heart and its lining. For 90 minutes while Dr. Welch worked, the heart was exposed.

The following operation the wounded officer showed almost immediate recovery.

JAP RELOCATION:
Back to Coast

Amid rumors of disapproval, the army announced that loyal persons of Japanese ancestry will be permitted to return to the west coast after the first of the year because the military situation no longer made an enemy invasion of the area a substantial possibility.

While asking local law enforcement bodies to develop uniform plans for the prevention of disturbances, California's Gov. Earl Warren, seeking to head off a storm of protest, called upon the people to join in protecting constitutional rights of individuals involved and to maintain an attitude that will discourage friction.

Of the 115,000 persons of Japanese ancestry originally evacuated from the west coast, only about 80,000 remain in relocation centers, of which 10,700 of doubtful loyalty are at Tule Lake. About 32,000 of evacuees have moved into other states, where they are expected to remain.

FARM BUREAU:
Buck Trade Barriers

Declaring that a lasting peace greatly depended upon a prosperous world economy based upon a free exchange of goods, the Farm Bureau federation called for the removal of trade barriers at its 26th annual convention in Chicago.

At the same time, the meeting declared that the U. S. accept its share of the responsibility in establishing a world organization for peace with military force.

Other resolutions adopted by the delegates asked for a national tax program to stimulate investment; continuation of price ceilings on agricultural and other products when practical, and further extension of rural electrification when means are available.

MISCELLANY

Final tabulations of the election showed Mr. Roosevelt's majority to be 5,552,763.

When a chicken hawk swooped down on the barnyard of S. C. Anderson near Elberton, Ga., and attempted to seize a turkey that was feeding, a hog came to the rescue and killed the marauder.

Map Expansion of Foreign Trade as Help in Meeting Goal of 60,000,000 Jobs
In Postwar Period.

"Sixty million jobs!"

That phrase has been batted about hopefully, contemptuously, with the raised eyebrow of cynical doubt, with the set jaw of desperate determination.

People may believe it is an ideal dream or feel that it is quite practicable but the majority of experts will tell you unless it is achieved we face the old cycle: inflation, depression, war and pestilence.

But New Deal "60 million jobs" has acquired a new meaning in the last few weeks. Why? Because of a plan that has been presented to achieve this goal. The men who have worked it out, and the things that have brought them together, and welded their ideas into an effective implement, have caused some of the hard-headed experts, who are accustomed to weigh such ideas on the scales of experience and either toss them into the scrap heap or hold them up as worthy of use, to call this plan good.

The "plan" is contained in a little red-bound booklet issued as Pamphlet Nos. 37-38 of the National Planning association and called "America's New Opportunities in World Trade." And let me hasten to say right here that this organization is not to be confused with another group of a similar name, which congress in its wisdom, or otherwise, has weighed in the balance and found wanting.

The National Planning association about which I am writing is a non-governmental, non-partisan association of businessmen and scholars, labor leaders, farmers, bankers and manufacturers,—all, insofar as this task is concerned, at once selfless workers in the vineyard of the public good and the husbandmen who realize their neighbor's prosperity is likewise their own.

There are three reasons why the plan for creating jobs, worked out by this group, has made such an impression on Washington and elsewhere:

First, it has been examined and praised by certain media of public opinion, and it may be described as champions of the impractical, the utopian or the unAmerican—the New York Times, the New York Herald Tribune, and Business Week, to mention only three.

Second, because of the men who authored or sponsored it—all leaders in their respective fields of American enterprise.

Third, because of the way the organization which brought these men together came into being.

Now let me give you the gist of the plan.

Must Boost Imports,
Foreign Investments

A 10 billion dollar trade budget calling for increased imports and increased foreign investments. That sounds pretty unorthodox to start with. There would be tariff reductions to increase foreign imports on the theory that only thus will foreign countries be able to get the money to buy our goods.

There would be steps taken to make foreign capital investments secure in order to build them up. There would be an international bank for reconstruction and development; there would be long-time foreign trade agreements coordinated with long-time investment programs.

Now, in order to understand why such an unorthodox program finds such ready acceptance in a hard-bitten world fed up with utopian planning, let me take you back to the genesis of the organization from which this plan emerged.

We find ourselves in the comfortable but somewhat gloomy quarters of the old City Club in New York where we met a group of men, most of them engineers, some economists, others interested as members of that club, who had become tired of the type of "research" which was largely a collection of ancient history and which looked backward instead of forward.

These men saw the weakness in the kind of "report" frequently asked for and submitted to great corporations and other institutions by high-paid and well-informed experts, but written entirely by men who had no responsibility for the actual carrying out of the programs, men who had no power whatever to make the decisions necessary to meet the actual conditions with which they were faced.

At about the same time, a similar group was meeting in England. It had moved a little farther ahead, perhaps, because its members had come to the point where they felt that efficient planning, such as successful business institutions carried through, might be applied to public affairs as well. They called themselves the "P. E. P." (political and economic planning). This group was made up of British government officials, people from the "City" (London's Wall Street), members of industry, finance, the Bank of England (which, you recall, is a private institution) and others.

By virtue of a fortunate international marriage the ideas of the American and British groups mingled. And so, the American group came to the conclusion: first, that planning must be done by forward-looking, rather than historically-minded groups, including people who actually had to make the decisions to carry out the plans. Second, that since (as the previous years had shown) even the well-planned industrial and governmental efforts fall when the "unplanned" efforts go down as they did in the depression, it might be wise to carry the planning into the national field.

By 1934 the National Planning association had been organized and had received the backing of a number of foundations, individual contributions and memberships and was able to issue its first report in December of that year setting forth its principles. Other reports followed.

Birth of a Big Idea

Just when the "60 million jobs" idea was born, I do not know. Certainly it was before anyone had hit upon that particular figure which, indeed, must be considered rather as a symbol than an exact estimate of tomorrow's needs. But there was one statement made at a meeting in 1940 which seems to me to have been the inspiration for the present report.

It was Donald Nelson who spoke and the gist of what he said was this:

"In order to get full production for the war effort we must conquer certain future fears. Labor must be cured of the fear that this tremendous production effort will bring a reaction and that war workers will be working themselves out of a job in the future. Capital must be cured of the fear that it will bring inflation and depression which mean that they are working themselves out of their investments and profits."

Whether this caused the board of trustees of the NPA to call upon its committee on international policy to set their heads to writing a prescription for full employment, I do not know. But it might seem to have caused constructive thinking in that direction.

These are some of the men involved: William Batt, one of America's leading industrialists and a member of the War Production board, heads the NPA's board of trustees. The chairman of the committee of the NPA which prepared the report is Stacy May, economic advisor to the McGraw-Hill publishing company.

There are 21 others who compose the committee which drew up the report. They are representative members of industry, labor, agriculture, finance, public affairs, professional life.

(Copies of the plan—"America's New Opportunities in World Trade," Pamphlets Nos. 37-38, can be obtained at a cost of one cent by writing to the National Planning association, 800 21st street, Washington, D. C.)

RATSI! They say that rodents desert a sinking ship. Well, if that is the case Washington is assured a safe voyage for we have in the capital more than our share.

And the White House has its quota, too, although the situation there has been ameliorated since the days when Theodore Roosevelt hired a special rat charmer to run out the vermin with trained ferrets.

The rubber used in gas masks is new 100 per cent synthetic.

EASTERLING - BRIDGES

The wedding of Miss Mildred Easterling to Pfc. Alvin Bridges was solemnized at the home of Rev. A. T. Hickman last Friday night, December 15, with the Rev. Hickman performing the double ring ceremony, with only the bride's family in attendance. She is the daughter of Mrs. Dave Easterling.

Pfc. Bridges, who just returned from 33 months overseas, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Bridges of Marbury.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for a short wedding trip, after which they will make their home with the bride's mother until Pfc. Bridges has to report back to duty.

DECEMBER 25 TO 30TH IS WEEK TO BUY BONDS

Sixth War Loan workers throughout Alabama will wind up the year 1944 with an extra War Bond push for the men overseas.

Carrying a New Year's message of hope and promise, the last week of the drive will be dedicated to those men and women who could not come home for Christmas.

Alabama War Finance leaders are marshalling every force to sell an extra $10,000,000 in War Bonds in appreciation of the sacrifices which have been made throughout this long year.

Setting aside the week of December 25 to December 30 as a week to pay special tribute to those who missed their own firesides on Christmas Day, every patriotic Alabamian is being asked to appoint himself a committee of one to consider it his or her duty to buy and sell another War Bond for those soldiers.

"We know every county will fall in line to show its soldier sons that they were missed at Christmas time," said Ed Leigh McMillan, Alabama War Finance Chairman.

"Let this be an extra effort to inspire them. Let this be the means of showing them how badly they were missed. Show them how much we appreciate what they are doing to keep Christmas alive here at home. Demonstrate to them that everything will be done to prevent their being 'over there' when next Christmas and New Year's Day roll around."

"We have one week in which to do this job," he asserted.

Each county, whether that county has already gone over the "official" quota or the "Victory" quota, has been challenged to assume a share of the final and additional push in appreciation of sacrifices on the thundering battlefields of Europe and the Philippines.

The week will be dedicated to those men and women who were away from the warmth, cheer and happiness of their firesides because they were on battle duty.

Every War Bond division in each of the 6 counties is being urged to set out specific ways and means of assuring its part of the final plan to end the message winging across to those who could not be here to help, but who would like nothing better than to know of this form of appreciation for what they are doing.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haakow, D. D.

The train stopped at a station and a young man came to a seat all out of breath and sat down by an aged man. The old man chided the young people of this age for their lack of durability, saying, "You young people get all out of breath for nothing." The young man said between his heavy breathing, "That may all be true, sir, but you must remember that this is the same train that I missed at a station twenty-five miles down this track." No wonder he breathed heavily, for he had run that distance and had overtaken his train. Before we judge the present age, we had better know what it is doing.

I walked into an Art gallery where the generals of our County were before me in magnificent paintings. Having always been a great admirer of Robert E. Lee, I stood before his picture, but I could not see him so well, as there were too many others who were looking down upon me. Then I took a sheet of paper and rolled a funnel out of it and held it to my eye. All the other generals were shut out from vision and I saw Robert E. Lee as he really was. Why is it that we do not see Jesus Christ as He really is? It is not because we see too many other things at the same time? If you really want to see Jesus as He is, then close out of your vision everything but Jesus alone. I tell you that when you see Him as He is, you have seen the glory of two worlds.

One of the admirers of Bishop Smith in the Texas Conference said that he considered that the good Bishop was really too great to be a Bishop and wanted to know of him what the church would do with a man when he became too big for his job as a Bishop. Then the admired Bishop replied, "Should such a thing ever occur, my brother, the church has a way of trimming him down." When a preacher or a layman becomes too big for his job, there is a way of trimming him down. When a politician or a judge becomes too big for his job, there is a way of looking after him. Blessed is the man who fills his job well and needs no trimming. When you think yourself too big for your job, you had better look out. You may be in line for a trimming.

I was sitting in the pew of a great church, looking up into the face of the minister who stood in the pulpit. That face was so dark that I could not see his features, but then he opened the large pulpit Bible and the reflection of the white pages of the Old Book shined upon his face and every feature of the man stood out in clear vision. The reflected glow coming from the Book, made God's man to have a glowing face. When the Bible was closed, his face did not shine. As long as we keep the open Bible before us and live as it teaches, we are going to have shining souls.

An insurance agent in Houston was about ready to write a policy for a customer, when he turned to him and said, "My friend, do you want me to write a straight life policy?" The man hung his head for a moment and then replied, "No, not exactly that kind. I want to go to a few more parties and drink and gamble a little longer, and maybe you had better not write the policy so straight." If I mistake not I have seen some applicants for church membership who took the vows of the church with reservation. They did not want to go all the way for Christ.

I was at Panama City and the odor coming from the Paper Mill filled the air and it was very offensive. Coming to a beautiful home I entered it, thinking that I would not find that odor on the inside. I was soon disillusioned, as I discovered that the odor that filled the air on the outside had also entered the home. Did you know that it is hard for us to get away from our surroundings? Parents are in for a shock when they think that they can live in a place where the odor of sin fills the social life of the young people, and all the time think that its odor will never come to their home. What is round about the life of your children is most likely to enter their lives.

I met a man one day who was in great distress. His family and all of his money were locked up in his home and he had lost the key. He knew that he could get to his loved ones and to his wealth after much anxiety, but it vexed him much to think that he had lost the key that unlocked the door to his happiness and wealth. God has given to each of us a Key that will unlock to us a treasure lid and a happy life, but many have lost that key. There is but one Key that will unlock the door to a life that is worth while, and that Key is none other than Jesus Christ. Carry that Key with you and you can open the way to the treasures of life and the happiness of two worlds. Be careful to never lose this Key.

As I drive my car along the highway at night I always dim my lights to help the man who I am meeting in his driving. Sometimes the other fellow refuses to dim his lights and I am tempted to flash mine into his vision, and do unto him as he is doing unto me. But my better spirit induces me to treat him right, regardless of how he may treat me. Along this road of life we are often meeting people who will not treat us right, it matters not how well we may treat them, but it never pays to return evil for evil. The Golden Rule is the best rule: "Do unto others as you would have them to do unto you?" True we may get a wrong done us sometimes, but in the long run the Golden Rule will work.

UPCHURCH DRUG COMPANY

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

By
Col. Robert L. Scott

W.N.U. RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point, Robert Scott was his wings at Kelly Field and takes up combat flying. He has been an instructor for four years when the war breaks out, and is told that he is now too old for combat flying. He appeals to several Generals and is finally given an opportunity to go into the fight. He flies a bomber to India, but on arrival is made a ferry pilot and does not suit him. After paying a visit to Gen. Chennault he gets a Kittyhawk and soon becomes a "one man air force" over Burma. Later he is made C.O. of the 23rd Fighter Group and still keeps knocking down Jap planes. In one of these flights his "Old Exterminator" gets badly mauled up and is condemned.

CHAPTER XXII

With my first burst the next ship rolled over and dove, with one engine shut-up. By now I had caught up to the lead F-45, who was shooting at the bombers from exceeding-long range. I methodically aimed my engines, putting a try burst into one and then into the other. The Jap must have felt the fire, for he went into a steep, climbing turn—which incidentally is very good if you have a ship that will outclimb your opponent. I thought this climbing turn might be a trick; so I watched closely for him to turn on me. But when he rolled over and dove not for me but for the clouds. I kept going for him and must have put two hundred shots into him before he got out of my sight in the cumulus cloud. Pieces had begun to come from his fuselage, and smoke was trailing behind. I believe his engines were hit and were falling, for the props seemed to be "wind-milling." And yet I could only claim it as a "probable," for I didn't see it catch fire or crash.

We got all our bombers back, of course, and the picture showed very good results for the bombing of Gia Lam field. We claimed nine of the thirteen enemy fighters definitely destroyed, and we hadn't even gotten a hole in one of our P-40's. In my opinion the new F-45 had turned out to be a flop for the Jap. Either it was not all they expected or the pilots didn't know how to use the fast-climbing ship. Sometimes I noticed that when going to try with your opponent in a fast-diving race, the Japs as the General had been expecting, heavy movement began in late September along the Burma Road, from Lashio North towards Lungtung. The Japs were seen by our observation planes to move many trucks filled with troops. They were evidently going to renew the attempt to cross the Salween that the AVG had frustrated back in May.

Bruce Holloway and I caught these trucks the night of May twenty-two of them near Wanting. On the next afternoon, I got through the rain with a single fighter and caught four of them on a curve in the road at Chafang. From then on for six days, under the cover of September, we harassed every movement on the wet and muddy road. Twelve of us burned sixty-six heavy trucks in six days. We used fragmentation bombs very well in the trucks. When we couldn't find their trucks, we'd hit the dark green troop barracks they were constructing from Lungtung to Lashio.

One day Daniels dove on a truck column to find that the Japs had placed light tanks along with the truck convoy. When Daniels, who was an offensive-minded fighter anyway, saw the tanks he forgot about the trucks and concentrated on the more formidable target. He fired and tore two tanks rather badly, and his frag bombs knocked two more from the road, but he was wounded by heavy fire from tanks.

Lieutenant Welborn, his wing man, saw the tracer, and he dove ground firing at the leader's ship and went to the aid of Pat Daniels. But the damage had been done. One bullet had come up through the side panel of Daniels' P-40 and had struck him in the shoulder. The wound was very bloody, and the shock had just about paralyzed the pilot's arm. Nevertheless, Cocky Daniels flew the ship back three hundred miles to Kunning and landed there with his left hand.

Maj. Bruce Holloway, the Group Executive, had been leading several fighters on the truck columns near Chafang. As he pulled from one diving attack he felt something strike his ship. At first he didn't notice it and continued to strafe from just about tree-top altitude. Then his coolant light popped on. Bruce turned immediately toward the friendly C-47 on the line which were nearly twenty miles away. He must have known immediately that the enemy bullet had punctured his prestone tank (the coolant of the American liquid-cooled engine runs at a very few minutes to stay in the air before the engine would catch fire or "freeze").

He must be getting closer to the river, he knew, for he was inching over two hundred miles in an hour, but in his anxiety it seemed to go farther away. With almost his last gasp he crossed the river into friendly Chinese country and crashed landed in one of the ever-present rice paddies.

Now begins Bruce's trip back from the interior of China to our base at Kunning. It's almost a saga, for Holloway was fated, wine and dined in the primitive fashion of the remote village people, who were tribesmen called "Miao." Though Bruce was only fifty minutes by plane from Kunning, his mode of travel by sedan chair, donkey and water buffalo required three weeks. From the moment he rode into headquarters on the last buffalo he had hired, he became known as the "Lochinvar of the Salween."

Later Lieutenant Welborn was shot down farther to the South. Welborn had gotten out of his burning plane two hundred miles South of Faochan, and his trip out of the rough country was the longest of any man that was lost. I remember that when he reached the first village from which he could get word to us, he sent a message that at first sounds facetious, until you understand the conditions under which one travels in the interior of China; then you realize that he was conservative. His message read: "Landed safely such and such a sector." My motto is Kunning by Christmas."

It was then September, and Welborn beat his original estimate. He required fifty-four days to travel two hundred miles across the trails of southwestern Yunnan.

Our truck-strafing caused us to lose several planes and two pilots, but we cost the Japs lots of material. Towards the first of October, there were skeletons of enemy trucks and tanks from the Salween to Kutkai, near Lashio. The Jap

Gen. Caleb Haynes, who went to China to lead General Chennault's bombers.

may have moved a few at night, but not many after Morgan and Bayne got through bombing the bridges on the Burma Road. We caught a few Jap planes near Lashio and shot up several on the ground. I shot into a Zero there on October 5, and believe it went down, but only claimed it as a "probable."

The Japs kept coming towards Kunning from Indo-China nearly every day in early October, but I think they remembered that the last time they had been in the capital of Yunnan, they had lost all their ships to the AVG. Way back on Christmas Day, 1941.

Even with the hardships that a rugged country like China imposed, I was living a wonderful life there in Kunning. Those were days that I would never forget—not only for the adventure that I was sharing with the other fighters in the Group, but for the privilege of living with my boss, General Chennault.

Gen. Caleb Haynes, Doctor Gentry, and I lived together with the General in a house the "Gissimo" had built for him. Situated near the field at Kunning, it was a modern home, or as modern as a bungalow could be in Yunnan. With a private room for each of us, and the Chinese houseboys the General had collected in his six years in China, we lived a wonderful life in a war-torn land.

There was a "Wong Chauffeur" who drove the General's car. Wong had a little boy—of course called "Little Wong"—who was suspicious of foreign devils and who seemed to covet his face with his hands when I spoke to him. The General told me that as far as he had been able to find out from a long time in China, we'd always be foreign to the Chinese. For after all, the only word in China that could mean my person other than a Chinese was "foreign devil."

The General told me about an automobile trip he had made with Major Shu from the road from Chikiang to Kweyang. This was bandit country, through the wilds of Kweyang province. Arriving at Kweyang, the capital, they had found an ancient walled city. The General, a trusted servant of the Gissimo, had been taken to the Governor's house, and there dinner was served.

All through the meal General Chennault noticed that strangers whom he did not meet would come in singly, sit down at the other end of the table, and after watching his every movement for a minute, would leave. Then the General came in and took the seat. After this had gone on during the entire meal, the General finally turned to Major Shu and asked what was going on—what all these staring people meant? Major Shu replied that here in Kweyang the people had never seen a foreign devil, and the Governor had given them permission to come in and look at one.

General Chennault's other houseboys were "Wang Cook," who had been on the US Gunboat Pansy, and "Gunboat," who had served in the American Navy for three years.

The General used to take me hunting with him, and I came to understand that throughout these hunting trips he was giving me lessons in tactics, lessons he had learned the hard way against the Japanese. Without my knowing it, he would, in effect, criticize my method of former attacks and advise me about better ways to do the job. I used to listen to him for hours as he told of cases in which he had got his own ship shot up by going in too close, and then, after he learned how and knew that his longer range fifty-caliber guns would outshoot the Jap, had accomplished the same destruction of the enemy without getting his own ship shot to pieces. These critiques taught me exactly what he meant to impart without his ever hurting my pride by telling me that I was wrong and could accomplish more by fighting in his way.

Coming home some nights from the exercise of our hunts together, I would think of my wife and little girl far away in Georgia, and get very homesick. Once I looked at the General and told him how I wished that I could press a button and kill all the Japanese, to end the war, so that we could all go home. He thought for a second or two and then looked back, smiling. "Aw now, Scotty," he said, "we don't want to do that. We've got to learn to live this way. Think of how much fun it is to kill them slow." Yes, sir, the General's business was killing Japs.

Then we'd go home in the darkness, and Wang Cook would give us peppy dove-pie from the General's doves and some canned oysters out of the loot of Rangoon.

Col. Meriam C. Cooper was the Chief of Staff to the General. His business was war, too. Cooper had been one of the greatest heroes of the First World War, and was one of the greatest soldiers I have ever seen. I never discovered when it was he kept. At any time of night, he was apt to come into my room, when he visited us in Kunning from his usual headquarters in Chungking. Or when I'd go to see him, I could find him smoking his ever-present pipe at any hour. Cooper had served in the American Air Force in the last war, and when the war was over he had kept right on fighting. He had enlisted with the Poles in the Russian-Polish war, and had been second in command of the Kosciuszko Squadron. After leading many dangerous strafing raids, he was awarded Russian military decorations. Later he had a reputation as an explorer in Persia, Siam, and Africa. Following an active part in the formation of Pan-American Airways, he became one of the best known moving-picture producers in America.

Cooper was a soldier through and through, one of the most intelligent that I could hope to meet, and the perfect Chief of Staff for General Chennault. Through his constant attention to our espionage in eastern China we learned of the Japanese Task Force coming through Hongkong on their way to the Solomons and Saigon, and also of the large amount of shipping in Victoria harbor.

Now Cooper was working tirelessly to plan our greatest raid against the Japanese. I remember vividly how he toiled for six days and six nights at the General's house, on the logistics for our proposed attack on the largest convoy that had come through Hongkong. Morning after morning, when I went in to breakfast, the floor around the table would be ankle-deep with "Walnut" tobacco from Cooper's pipe, but the plans would be those of a master, General Chennault and Colonel Cooper made, in fact, the perfect tactical team. Everything was ready for the bombing raid by the middle of October, and we merely waited for word from the East that the harbor between Kowloon and Hongkong was filled with Japs.

General Haynes had come to China to lead General Chennault's bombers when he left the leadership of the Ferry Command. He had hurt the Jap plenty with his precision bombing, and had built up a great bombing force, mainly through the inspiration of his personal leadership on the most dangerous missions.

Radio Tokyo had recently been "panning" Haynes, referring to him as "the old broken-down transport pilot." In a way, this was music to our ears, for it meant that the Japanese were being hurt by his bombings or they would not have resorted to such propaganda. But it made General Haynes so mad that he could have torn the Japs apart with his bare hands. After all, he had been a pursuit pilot for years, and for the last ten years he had been dean of American four-engine bombers. The records he had set and the B-15 had made history and were inspirations to the Air Corps.

When the New Year Will Arrive Among U.S. Fighting Men the World Over

Many churches of America, of all denominations, will keep their doors open Sunday and Monday in order that relatives and friends of American fighting men and women throughout the world may offer their New Year's prayers at the time their loved ones are welcoming in the New Year, no matter where they will be. These services are in addition to regular watch night services.

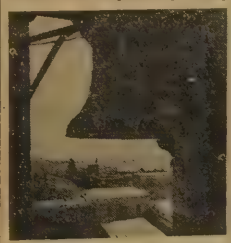

When 1945 reaches New York City in a blast of noise or a silence of prayer, it will already be early Monday evening just east of Australia in the Chatham Islands. Meanwhile, at Honolulu the clock will register 6:30 p. m. Sunday The New Year is born on the lonely Chatham islands, 414 miles southeast of New Zealand, and races westward at 1,000 miles an hour. About 200 shepherds and fishermen, augmented with troops in the Chatham group, will celebrate the New Year by ringing the church bell on Hanson Island. The international date line, near these isles, was set by the British admiralty and runs near the 180th meridian of longitude.

Bells Throughout World Will Herald In a New Year Full of Promised Peace

For Centuries the Old Year Has Died to Tolling Of Bells—With Hope for Better Times.

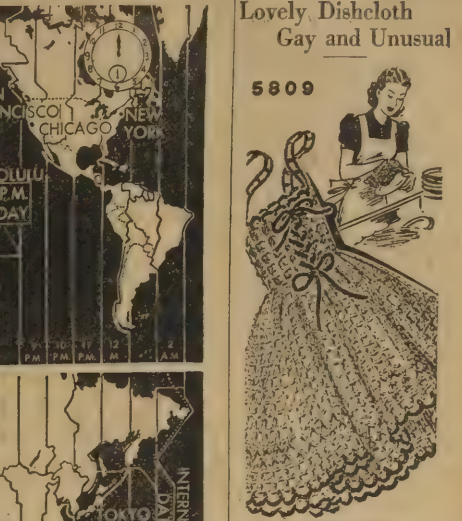

"Never forget the cheerful and cordial observance of New Year's Day."
—George Washington.

Since early ages, the sound of stone, of hollow resonant wood, and of all the metals that came out of the earth, fashioned as a means by which man could make his gods hear him, have also been used to announce peace and the turning point toward better things of life. The first bells were fashioned by primitive man of wood. Prior to this time the "click stone," sometimes called the first bell, was a resonant stone suspended by a thong and struck with a stick or another stone to give the ringing effect. The first church bell was erected by Paulinus, bishop of Nola, in about 400 A. D. Early bells were baptized. In Switzerland a curious tradition is that all baptized bells take a trip to Rome every year during Passion weeks and get back in time to be rung on Easter morning. "All they thunder here are harmless! For these bells have been consecrated and baptized with holy water. They defy our utmost power."

The science of music of bells has been recognized in some of the leading music institutions of the world. M. Kamel Lefevre, carillonmaster of the Riverside church in New York city where the chief of carillons, by size and scope were installed. He

We Will Tell the Nation
About Alabama in 1945

SOMETIME during 1945 we will commence advertising in selected national business magazines.

These advertisements will tell of the advantages to be found in Alabama by industries considering the establishment of branch plants after the war.

The purpose of the advertisements will be to accelerate the future industrial development of both rural and urban Alabama. This will result in gradually increasing peace-time employment opportunities for Alabama men and women; and will also develop an increasing local market for Alabama farm and industrial products.

We are optimistic about the future of Alabama and the South in postwar years. We will continue to do our part in bringing about the increased development of Alabama and will, as in the past, work actively with others whose objectives are similar.
